World's population will reach 4 billion Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The human population of the world will reach four billion on Sunday, according to the Population Reference Bureau, and more than one of every three persons will be under the age 15.

The population is currently growing at a slightly slower rate than experts believed a year ago, but many of those under 15 will soon reach their childbearing years.

It has taken 16 years — since 1960 — for the population to grow from 3 billion to 4 billion, but population experts say it will be only 13 years, until 1989, before the earth will count 5 billion humans.

Today, approximately 195,000 persons are added to the population each day. The bureau arrives at this figure by subtracting the 133,000 daily deaths from the estimated 328,000 babies born each day.

The bureau reports that approximately 135 persons are added each minute and 2.25 per second.

The United States' population continues to increase, according to the bureau, a nonprofit educational organization. By mid-July, the U.S. population will total 215 million, 86 times more than 200 years ago. The U.S. population makes up 5 per cent of the world population.

East Germany shows the slowest growth rate in the world, losing three-tenths of one per cent of its population each year. Kuwait has the world's fastest growth rate — 5.9 per cent a year.

Tentative agreement reached for ending Las Vegas strike

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Negotiators are putting the final touches today on a contract aimed at ending a two-week strike against 15 Las Vegas Strip casino-hotels. A smaller strike remains to be settled, however, before hotels that are closed can reopen.

The major strike involves some 22,000 maids, waiters and other service workers who belong to the Culinary Workers Union and union bartenders.

Jess McColl, a spokesman for the culinary workers, said attorneys for the union and for the Nevada Resort Association were ironing out details of language in a tentative agreement reached Thursday. He said he foresaw no major stumbling blocks toward settling on the pact.

However, ending the work stoppage was another matter. That hinged on negotiations underway between the resort association and the musicians and stagehands unions.

"It is understood by both sides that the settlement by culinary workers and bartenders is absolutely contingent upon the Nevada Resort Association also resolving stagehands' and musicians' contracts," said Al Bramlet, secretary-treasurer of the culinary workers.

Talks on the musicians' and stagehands' contracts recessed after 12 hours early today with one final session expected later in the day and the possibility of a settlment during that meeting.

Before reopening, the hotels will also face the problem of getting in touch with entertainers.

Eleven of the struck clubs, among them some of the biggest names in this resort city, have closed their doors. Bigname entertainment has been missing from Las Vegas since March 10 when musicians struck. Culinary workers, bartenders and stage hands struck a day later.

Hotels have been losing an estimated $1.4 million a day, not counting what they could have taken in at the gambling tables. Gambling provides a major portion of the state's tax revenues and about 40 per cent of gambling revenues are generated here.

Bramlet would not discuss details of the tentative agreement, but other sources said a major compromise involved a much-debated lockout clause sought by the hotels.

The clubs had wanted the right to lock out their employes if members of one union refused to cross a picket line of another union. Sources indicated the new agreement provides that hotels may not lock out employes who refuse to cross picket lines set up with the permission of the Southern Nevada Labor Council. The agreement would allow the lockout if employes tried to honor picket lines not recognized by the labor council. Those would include so-called informational pickets or pickets set up by persons trying to start a new union.

The sources also said the wage portion of the agreement would provide a $1.55 an hour raise for bartenders and culinary workers over four years. The unions had wanted a three-year contract to provide a $1.35 hourly raise. Waiters and waitresses now make $2.40 an hour, bartenders $4.50.

Tight security measures for Ford's California visit

President to stay overnight in L.A.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tight security measures were in force today for President Ford's visit to the city where a woman's pistol shot missed him last September.

Ford's California schedule for today called for speeches at two downtown hotels here and a mid-afternoon flight to Los Angeles for an evening speech.

On Saturday he has an airport news conference at Fresno and a speech to state Republican leaders there before an afternoon departure for LaCrosse, Wis.

The Secret Service, San Francisco police department and California Highway Patrol coordinated in the security preparations, but would not discuss details or the number of men involved.

On Tuesday the Secret Service tried to question five alleged terrorists about a recent and unsubstantiated FBI report that they had plotted assassination attempts on Ford and Ronald Reagan, his opponent for the Republican nomination for President. The alleged assassination attempt was to have been made at this summer's GOP convention in Kansas City, the FBI said.

Attorneys for the five alleged terrorists refused to allow the Secret Service interviews, saying their clients knew nothing of such a plot. The five, arrested in a raid last month in nearby Richmond, Calif. have been linked with the terrorist Emiliano Zapata Unit and several bombings.

Lt. Jim Ryan of the San Francisco police said, "We're aware of those assassination plot reports, but we're not changing anything." He said security would be routine, with traffic control to keep the presidential motorcade moving, foot patrolmen deployed in the crowds, and riflemen stationed on strategic rooftops.

On the one visit the President made here since last September when Sarah Jane Moore fired a shot at him as he left a hotel on Union Square, security measures kept the President away from crowds and virtually out of public view.

Miss Moore and Lynette Fromme, who pointed a gun at Ford in Sacramento last September, both are serving life prison terms for the assassination attempts.

After arrival at a Coast Guard Station at San Francisco International Airport Ford was scheduled to speak for about 10 minutes at the Fairmont Hotel to the American Textile Manufacturers Institute convention. The audience of about 900 is mostly from the Southeastern states.

Ford's next stop was to be a fundraising luncheon at the Grand Ball Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel a dozen blocks away.

Due in Los Angeles late this afternoon, Ford will confer with staff members for a couple of hours, attend a private reception for party bigwigs in his campaign.

Postal Service okays moratorium on cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service has agreed to a moratorium on cutbacks in mail service, the chairman of the House Postal Service subcommittee said today.

Rep. James M. Hanley, D-N.Y., told a news conference he interprets the moratorium to mean:

—No additional closings of small post offices.

—A cutback in business deliveries, scheduled to go into effect Monday, will not be made.

—Elimination of Saturday delivery service, which had been seriously considered by the Postal Service, will not occur.

"The Postmaster General, for his own reasons, has not been definitive. But this is my interpretation of what he told me," Hanley said. He said the Postal Service is taking the steps in order to court the support of Congress members for additional postal subsidies.

Hanley released a copy of a letter from Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar that said, "If the constraints of our current financial crisis could be eased by the infusion of additional funds, otherwise inevitable reductions in service could be avoided."

Bailar's letter did not specify what service reductions could be avoided.

U.S. overtures to Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost 11 months after the chaotic collapse of the U.S.-backed government in South Vietnam, the United States has signaled its willingness to discuss issues with Vietnamese government officials which could result in establishment of diplomatic relations.

U.S. officials said Thursday night that the United States has sent a carefully worded message to Hanoi through a foreign government, probably France, that it is willing to begin talks. Paris is considered a prospective site.

However, a French official source in Paris said today that France has not been an intermediary for passing a message from the United States to North Vietnam exploring the possibility of establishing diplomatc relations.

French officials said North Vietnam has an embassy in Paris and that the U.S. Embassy there could make direct contact if it wished.

U.S. officials here said the first order of business would be settling the fate of Americans missing in the Indochina war, and indicated the United States is awaiting a response from Hanoi.

It is understood that discussions with the Vietnamese Communist government officials could easily move beyond the fate of missing Americans to talks on Hanoi's relations with Thailand and its other neighbors in Southeast Asia.

Vote Sunday

Teamsters expected to reject union bid

CHICAGO (AP) — The trucking industry's nationwide contract offer to Teamsters — about 90 cents-an-hour short of what the 400,000 unionists want — is expected to be voted down this weekend, a source close to the negotiations says.

Members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters from around the nation are scheduled to vote Sunday on whether to approve the latest proposal or give approval to a strike. Union negotiators have recommended a rejection of the industry's offer, the source said.

The Ford administration has expressed fears that a nationwide strike by truckers could seriously hurt the country's economic recovery, and government officials have vowed to bring the talks back to Washington if the current deadlock is not broken.

They also have voiced concern that an agreement granting a hefty wage-benefits increase to Teamsters could be used as a basis for other labor negotiations this year and trigger renewed inflation.

The current National Master Freight Agreement between the trucking industry and the Teamsters expires March 31. Both sides say they have made their final money proposals, though negotiations continue on supplemental items.

At a meeting Wednesday at a hotel in suburban Chicago, nearly 1,000 Teamsters officials from 350 locals heard Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons outline details of the latest proposal from Trucking Employers, Inc., the industry's representatives.

It calls for hourly increases of 85 cents over 39 months, plus cost-of-living increases of at least 15 cents an hour in both July 1977 and July 1978, the source said. The industry also wants to impose a cost-of-living ceiling at 25 cents an hour in both years, the source said, while the union is demanding an uncapped increase.

For over-the-road, long-haul drivers were offered a 2-cent-a mile increase over the 39-month period, according to the source.

Industry representatives were unavailable for comment.

Currently, the truckers make between $7.18 and $7.33 an hour and over-the-road drivers make 18 cents a mile.

The union wants $1.75 an hour increase over three years with a 3½-cent-a-mile increase for over-the-road drivers, the source said.

The industry is offering improved health, welfare and pension increases totaling $11 a week over 39 months, while the union seeks weekly fringe increases amounting to $17.

The industry's complete package offer is 20 per cent higher over 39 months, but the union is asking for 30 per cent, the sources said.

2 L.A. councilmen near blows on vote

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two city councilmen have nearly come to blows over joint city and federal assistance to small and minority owned businesses.

A police sergeant-at-arms stepped between Arthur K. Snyder and Dave Cunningham as the pair stood inches apart, glaring at each other at a council meeting Thursday.

Cunningham apparently was angry over Snyder's motion to revamp an advisory group that makes recommendations on assistance to businesses considered economically disadvantaged. Snyder said the current structure of the group does not include representation of Mexican-American businessmen.

Acting Council President John Ferraro ruled Snyder's motion out of order and called for a vote on the original motion to extend for three months the contract between the city and the U.S. Office of Minority Business Enterprises.

The council voted 7 to 3 for the extension, less than the eight votes required for passage.

That enraged Cunningham who had earlier moved unsuccesfully for an adjournment to stall the vote until more members were present.

Cunningham then steamed around to the side of the council table where Snyder was seated. An angry exchange threatened to turn into a fistfight until the officer intervened and Councflman Gilbert Lindsay pulled Cunningham away.

Diamond Lane alterations

LOS ANGELES (AP)—State transportation officials have announced alterations aimed at easing traffic congestion related to the Santa Monica Freeway's experimental "Diamond Lane" for buses and carpool vehicles.

Donald E. Burns, secretary of California's Business and Transportation Agency, said Thursday that a Harbor Freeway transition ramp previously closed to westbound traffic will be opened. Access via the ramp to the Santa Monica Freeway will be contolled by a metered signal.

Burns added that the red cycle for signals at other West Los Angeles access ramps would be shortened.

The operation sets aside a specially marked lane in each direction during rush hours for buses and for cars with at least two passengers. The experiment began March 15.

KENNETH HOUSEHOLDER

San Francisco man is No. 1 in Irish lottery: $800,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kenneth Householder, architect, says, "I've always loved those marvelous 18th Century houses in Dublin. I might even buy one." He'd just struck it rich in the Irish Sweepstakes.

Householder, a 58-year-old bachelor, found out Thursday his winning ticket is worth $800,000. So he's thinking of traveling to Ireland.

"Nothing would please me more," he said, "than getting on a slow boat for about a year."

Householder is only the eighth American to win the sweeps. He did it with ticket number XJB 13365, drawn from a huge drum in Dublin. Most winning tickets match horses listed for the Lincolnshire Handicap race at Doncaster, England, on Saturday, but Householder drew top prize, which is independent of the race.

Householder said he entered the sweepstakes "many times over the years but I'm not much of a gambler. I just did it for the charity causes, the proceeds going to hospitals and that sort of thing.

"I feel great about it, of course. But I'm still in a state of shock."

When a telephone call awakened him at dawn with the news, he said, "I didn't believe it. I thought some friend was putting me on. But later, the Irish brogue gave it away."

The call was from the Dublin Express, a newspaper in Ireland, and soon he was being deluged with calls from local news media.

With that, he said, "I knew for certain it was real. Now, I'm thinking of disappearing for awhile just to get some rest. Fortunately, nobody has asked me for a loan."

Householder, now on vacation from a post in the San Francisco Bureau of Architecture, grew up in Dallas and received an art degree from Southern Methodist University in 1942 and an architecture degree from Yale in 1947. He said he moved to San Francisco 23 years ago.

He said his joy is tempered by awareness of the Internal Revenue Service, "I don't know the first thing about taxes in that income bracket. I've just been a poor architect all my life."

$200 million in state purchases proposed

Prime Southland coast sites on list

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state's coastal commission has released a list of 154 coastal sites, worth up to $200 million, which it believes the state should buy for open space, recreation and wildlife habitat.

The land on the California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission's list totalled 36,500 acres.

Among the 51 top priority projects were expensive beach and upland sites near Los Angeles and on the Orange County coast.

The largest single project would involve purchase of 1,050 acres of the Irvine property in Orange County for an estimated $20 million.

Such sites could be "irreversibly committed to non-public uses if not acquired within the next few years," the commission said Thursday.

It also said purchases of top priority and the 56 second priority projects should be paid for by a bond issue on the November ballot. Two bond issue proposals are pending in the legislature.

Along with the Irvine property, top priority projects on the commission's list included:

—Whiskey Shoals, south of Point Arena in Mendocino County, 100 acres on the shore worth an estimated $1.3 million.

—Marina Dunes, north of Monterey, 169 acres, $1.7 million

—Soberanes Point and Notley's Landing in Big Sur, 300 acres, $3 million.

—Nicholas Canyon-Zuma beaches and upland support areas on Los Angeles County coast north of Malibu, more than 50 acres, $7 million, partly funded by Los Angeles County.

—Malibu Bluff, 130-acre park, vista point and camping area, $2.3 million, and Malibu Lagoon habitat area, 62 acres, $860,000.

—Ballona Lagoon near Venice, park and support area for nearby beach, 5 acres, $1 million.

—Point Vicente North, 184 acres of bluff and shoreline recreation land, $4.3 million.

—Bolsa Chica, wetlands and scenic open space, including park area overlooking Sunset Beach, 560 acres, $4.5 million.

—Central Laguna Beach Bluffs, bluff park adjacent to beach, 5 acres, $1.9 million.

—Dana Point Headlands and Palisades, north of San Clemente, blufftop view park and recreation areas, to support public investment in Dana Point Harbor, 160 acres, $3.8 million.

—Batiquitos Lagoon, northern shore, near Leucadia, San Diego County, 300 acres for recreational use, $1.6 million.

—Tijuana Estuary, at Imperial Beach, to preserve resource and habitat values and agricultural lands, 390 acres, $3 million, financed from state park funds.

Other projects in the commission's top priority list included:

—San Mateo Mid-coast Beaches, south of Half Moon Bay, expansion of state beach by 39.8 acres, $450,000.

—Morro Bay-South Bay, habitat and wetland protection at Otto Estate, Los Osos Creek, Sweet Springs and Cuesta Marsh, Cuesta Inlet and Sunset Terrace, 246 acres, upwards of $586,000.

Chairman M. B. Lane said the price estimates were based on county assessor valuations. He said in some cases owners might agree to sell public easements for scenic or access purposes, or might sell property allowing private use until the owner's death when the state would get full title.

"The commission strongly urges that these alternatives to full-fee acquisition be explored and implemented wherever appropriate," he said.

Can't order Cuban visas—judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge has refused to order the State Department to issue visas to five Cuban filmmakers who were to show their works at the Los Angeles Film Exposition.

Supporters of the filmmakers' planned visit said they believed the State Department's withholding of the visas was part of an election-year hardening of the Ford Administration's position vis-a-vis communist countries.

U.S. District Court Judge Malcolm M. Lucas said he believed there would be value in the visit, but said he had no jurisdiction because the Cubans had not yet applied for visas.

But paradoxically, said Filmex attorneys, no applications were made because the State Department had earlier told the filmmakers they would be able to get their visas at the last minute with no trouble. The exposition begins Monday.

Exposition officials said if entry is denied the filmmakers — Saul Yellin, Gutierrez Alea, Santiago Alverez, Julio Simoeau and Alina Sanches — their works will probably not be shown.

Preparations were made starting last October to bring the Cubans here for the exposition. But 11 days ago, the State Department told Filmex officials the visas would not be granted "because the time is not propitious" for the "purpose of the visit."

County sheds $145 million in projects from budget

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County supervisors have voted to postpone more than $145 million in building projects, including an intensive care medical center, as the Los Angeles County budget undergoes preliminary trimming.

Shelved by the supervisors Thursday were the $102 million stroke rehabilitation center at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital, a $32.1 million administrative complex for the Sheriff's Department, and a civic center in Bellflower costing $11.6 million.

The delays were seen necessary because of a raft of budget requests that, if approved, would require a property tax rate increase of $1.09 per $100 assessed valuation in 1976-67. The current rate is $4.52.

Supervisors decided not to put off construction of an $8 million health center in El Monte; likewise, they declined to delay the $6.6 million John Wesley Comprehensive Health Center.

Bachelor uncle determined to play dad to 4 kids despite suit

WILLOW SPRINGS (AP) — A 31-year-old bachelor who is playing mother to four daughters of his sister and brother-in-law, both deceased, is being taken to court by his sister's mother-in-law.

But that's only one small facet of the life of wiry Terry Fulton and his wards in a new two-story A-frame chalet he built himself in the softly rolling rangeland of northeastern California.

Fulton, who sports muttonchop whiskers, is "Uncle Terry" to Debbie, 12; Laura, 11; Tina, 7, and Tamara, 4. He holds an English degree and teaching credential, but is working as a therapist.

He says one of the nicest things about his situation is the help he gets from relatives and neighbors.

One want-ad for a babysitter produced "thousands of calls. I was never so overwhelmed," he said in a recent interview.

"I met some of the neatest people in Amador County. Some called and talked for hours. One man with 11 kids of his own said he knew I was single and probably would like to get away for a weekend once in a while so he told me just to leave the kids any weekend and take off," he added.

The girls' father died in 1973 at age 28 of cancer of the spine. Their mother, Fulton's sister, died of cancer last August at age 32.

Fulton took the children at his sister's request.

"I don't think it's so unique. These are kids that I love. They need a home and I am the one most capable of providing it,", he said.

They moved to the hills from Sacramento in November. One problem is transforming the girls into country folk. Hence Fulton's six acres have become a menagerie of horses, calves, chickens, dogs, cats and pet mice.

Fulton's guardianship is being challenged by Alsey Hamner of Sacramento, the children's grandmother. But Fulton looks on his bachelor-uncle-mother role as permanent. He doesn't anticipate any problems he can't handle.

He doesn't even plan to marry: "I have all the advantages of a family without a wife."

Neither does he think the girls are lacking a woman's influence, because of their contacts with female relatives and teachers.

"I don't feel I am masculinizing the girls," he said.

Fulton credits the book "On Death and Dying" with helping him prepare the girls for the death of their mother — at home.

"We protected the kids from the death of their father, and they suffered terribly when their dad died. I wanted them to remember (their mother's death) and appreciate that she wanted to die at home.

"The girls were very solicitous, doing whatever it took to make her comfortable. A real sense of maturity happened with the two oldest girls," Fulton said.

U.S. military heroin syndicate uncovered

$300 million in dope smuggled aboard Air Force cargo planes; 14 indicted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Operating from the safety of U.S. military bases in this country and Thailand, a syndicate led by Army and Air Force sergeants smuggled more than $300 million in pure heroin into this country on Air Force tanker planes, federal officials say.

The heroin was hidden in false bottoms attached to wooden tables and other furniture shipped from U Tapao Air force Base in Thailand as military baggage or was concealed in black AWOL bags — the small hand luggage carried by returning GIs.

That was the account given Thursday by officials here and in Washington after federal indictments were returned in Raleigh against 14 persons, most of them present or former military men, on charges of conspiring to import heroin.

The three-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury was made public after 11 of the defendants were arrested in a series of coordinated raids by military police, federal agents and local police. Three of those indicted were already in jail, one in this country and two in Thailand.

The heroin arrived via Strategic Air Command planes at Mather and Travis air force bases in California, Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C., and Langley Air Force Base, Va., officials said, and was soon on it way to the streets of New York and other major cities.

At least 220 pounds of heroin came into this country that way between August 1974 and last October when the operation began to fall apart, officials of the Justice Deaprtment and the Drug Enforcement Administration said.

But the syndicate had been operating since 1968 from the American Star Bar on Pittbury Road in Bangkok, and officials refused to say how much heroin the ring might have shipped into this country.

Peter N. Bensinger, federal drug enforcement administrator, said in Washington that the demise of the syndicate would "have a major crippling impact on importation of heroin into the United States."

The 220 pounds of heroin covered in the indictment would supply 20,000 addicts for one day when diluted for street sale, he said.

Federal officials placed the street value of a kilogram of pure heroin — 2.2 pounds — at more than $3 million, which would bring the value of the drugs involved in the case to more than $300 million.

"I would say that this organization would have to be classified as one of the largest heroin smuggling organizations in the world which would directly affect the United States, particularly the East Coast," said Don Ashton, chief of the drug enforcement agency in North Carolna.

One of those indicted in the heroin conspiracy was Leslie "Ike" Atkinson, 50, a retired Army master sergeant from Goldsboro, N.C., who is serving a 19-year sentence in the federal prison in Atlanta on a previous conviction for importing heroin from Thailand.

The indictment said Atkinson had continued to run the operation from his prison cell with the help of his daughter, Leslie Sharon Atkinson Arrington, 24, and her husband, Michael Otis Arrington, 24, of Raleigh, both of whom were also indicted.

Among the others indicted were James Smeddley, 54, described as the procurer of heroin, and Jasper Myrick Jr., 23, of Montgomery, Ala., an alleged courier. Both are now serving terms in Kalang Prison in Bangkok.

The syndicate began to crumble last October when a U.S. military customs inspector made a routine check of household goods that Myrick, then an Army specialist in Bangkok, planned to ship home.

The inspector noticed that a wooden table Myrick was shipping home was unusually heavy. He took it apart and found several plastic bags full of white powder. The Army sent a team of investigators to the scene. Before they were finished, they came up with more than 100 pounds of heroin in Myrick's furniture.

Also named in the indictments, for allegedly serving as packers, couriers or mailers of heroin to other defendants in the United States were Freddie Clay Thornton, 40, Detroit; Rudolph Valentino Jennings, 49, Goldsboro, N.C.; William King Wright, 30, Washington; William Thomas, 42, Goldsboro; Monroe Lorenzo Martin Jr., 43, Long Beach, Calif.; Robert Ernest Patterson, 34, Hampton, Va.; William Kelly Brown, 38, Augusta, Ga.; James McArthur, 40, Fayetteville, N.C.; and Charles Murphy Gillis, 40, Goldsboro.

The maximum penalty for conspiracy to import heroin is a $25,000 fine and 15 years in prison.

Quits job to be wife; to get unemployment benefits, judge rules

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A woman who quit her job in San Francisco and took up domestic duties with her husband in Sacramento will receive unemployment insurance benefits, a judge has ruled.

Sacramento County Superior Court Judge William H. Lally issued the order. It was limited to this one case, but it could be a precedent for thousands of California women who have quit jobs to be housewives, said attorney Richard Keith Corbin.

Corbin represented Judith A. Brittain, 32, who had worked nearly 5½ years for United Airlines in San Francisco as a $790-a-month computer operator.

Her husband, Bud, was transferred to a Sacramento job, but Mrs. Brittain said she was unable to transfer, too, and quit Jan. 15, 1975, after three months of living 100 miies apart.

The state Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board rejected her claim for benefits, saying "as it is the wife's duty to accompany her husband to a new location, it must be held that (she) had good cause to quit ... for domestic duty.

The board said she was ineligible because she did not provide the major supporting income for the family.

Mrs. Brittain said the law was discriminatory and that two incomes are needed to live.

Judge Lally ordered the state to pay unemployment benefits back to Jan. 12, 1975, which at $90 a week would amount to more than $5,000.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decline in U.S. agricultural exports helped trigger the second consecutive monthly deficit in the nation's foreign trade accounts during February, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the United States imported $140.8 million more than it exported in February. That compared with a $72.6 million deficit in January and marked the first monthly back-to-back deficits in just over a year.

Imports exceeded exports by a combined total of $656.8 million in December 1974, and January 1975. The nation then registered 11 consecutive monthly trade surpluses before this January's deficit.

The monthly surpluses, which produced a surplus of $11.05 billion for all of 1975, were expected to shrink gradually this year due to the interplay of the U.S. economy with its trading partners.

But the two monthly deficits represented an erosion more sudden and dramatic than expected.

Over-all, imports fell by 2.6 per cent in February, marking the first decline since October. Exports, however, plunged even more sharply — 3.3 per cent — for their third consecutive monthly decline.

The major export categories registering declines during the month were wheat, down by $91.1 million to $302.2 million; soybeans, off $79.2 million to $743.5 million; raw tobacco, down $52.1 million to $105.2 million, and coal down $39.3 million to $186.4 million.

The February deficit was registered despite a 19.3 per cent drop in the volume of petroleum and petroleum product imports, which have been a crucial factor in the nation's trade balance over the last two years.

The American Petroleum Institute had reported mounting petroleum imports during the month but these apparently were not recorded in the Commerce trade figures because of differences between the institute's method of collecting data and the Custom Bureau's system for registering imports.

The general expectation this year is for mounting oil imports as the U.S. recovery stokes demand for energy.

Commerce said the only major trade category showing an increase on the export side was the machinery and transport sector, which includes aircraft, motor vehicles, electrical and agricultural machinery. That sector climbed $82.1 million to $3.9 billion.

The softening of the market for U.S. exports was an indication that the economies of U.S. trading partners generally have not recovered strongly enough from the recent worldwide recession to spur demand for American goods. On the other hand, the strength of the U.S. economy has been expected to increase demand for the raw materials and consumer goods which constitute the bulk of U.S. imports.

Defense official quits over payment by firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The resignation of Asst. Defense Secretary Albert C. Hall was accepted by President Ford Thursday, following disclosures that Hall received what were described as termination payments for past services as an executive with the Martin-Marietta Corp.

ALBERT C. HALL

The brief White House announcement said the resignation was effective Thursday.

It added that in accordance with the request of the 61-year-old Hall Ford will withdraw his nomination of Hall to be an assistant secretary of the Air Force for research and development. The nomination was sent to the Senate on March 3.

Dr. Hall has been serving as assistant secretary of defense for intelligence, his second Pentagon post in the last dozen years.

Previously he was a research specialist with Martin-Marietta. Hall said that payments he received from 1972 to 1974 were for prior services to the firm and that there was no conflict of interest with his Pentagon post and that he had no commitment to return to Martin-Marietta.

Hall previously had left the firm to accept a Defense Department post in the office of research and development in 1963 to 1965 and afterwards worked for the firm, which has defense contracts. He left the firm for the second time in 1971 to return to the Defense Department.

Ontario garage blazes erupt

Ontario police and firemen this morning are searching for three or four juveniles believed to have set fire to a series of garages behind an apartment complex at 210 N. Begonia St., Thursday night.

The fire, reported at 8:24 p.m. by nearby residents destroyed three vacant car garages, causing several thousand dollars' damage. Fire Inspector Mikel Park on the scene said that the fire was intentionally set, but the method used to set the fire has yet to be determined.

An apartment tenant told police that just before the fire he had seen four juveniles around the carports. Several residents of the area reported hearing an explosion just as the fire was reported.

Park said that lately there have been a rash of intentionally set carport and garage fires in west end with juveniles believed responsible.

Chino man rearrested in heroin ring controversy

A Chino man was one of three men rearrested by members of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Detail Thursday in the investigation into an alleged $8 million Southern California heroin ring.

Ramon Rodriquez of 4431 Los Serranos Blvd., Chino, was among 17 persons released on a $500 personal bond Tuesday by U.S. Magistrate Lek von Kaesborg of San Bernardino shortly after their arraignment on various narcotics charges.

Rodriquez was rearrested at his home Thursday afte the federal investigators criticized the magistrate's action as far too lenient and appealed to a federal court on Wednesday. U.S. Dist. Court Judge William Gray in Los Angeles ordered the higher bonds.

Rodriquez is now in Los Angeles Coiunty Jail along with the two other men rearrested in the investigation in lieu of $25,000 bail each. The two other men rearrested were Jerome Pavese of San Bernardino and William McGranahan of Bloomington. One other man is still being sought, not named by authorities, and will be rearrested. The four are charged with conspiracy to import heroin, conspiracy to possess heroin and possession of heroin with intent to distribute it.

The remaining 13 persons were considered responsible enough to pay a higher bail of $10,000 each without being rearrested. The 13 others have until April 2 to post the increased bail or show cause why it's too high.

The 17 were among 32 arrested Monday by DEA agents in Southern California on various federal narcotics charges.

DEA spokesman said the arrests culminated a seven-month investigation into a large-scale heroin ring they believe did as much as $8 million a month in sales in Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

Flu risks are too high to gamble, says researcher

NEW YORK (AP) — The lessons of the history of influenza, in its cyclical sweeps around the globe, lend support to the decision to vaccinate the American population against the flu, a leading researcher says.

No one knows for certain if there will be a flu outbreak in the United States this coming winter, but the risks are too high to gamble on doing nothing, officials said as the medical drama unfolded.

"I think we really have no other choice," said the flu researcher, Dr. Edwin D. Kilbourne, of the decision to develop a vaccine. President Ford on Thursday asked Congress for $135 million to pay for the flu vaccination.

The aim is to produce enough vaccine to inoculate the entire population of the country — 215 million people — to prevent a re-enactment of the devastating pandemic of 1918-19. A flu outbreak at Fort Dix, N.J., last month was blamed on a swine-type virus, similar to the one that caused the worldwide outbreak.

"We would all be comfortable with more evidence of a spread outside Fort Dix, but the lessons of history are that every time there is a virus shift of this magnitude we've had a pandemic," said Kilbourne, who is chairman of the department of microbiology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine. A pandemic is a worldwide epidemic.

Kilbourne, one of those who recommended that the vaccine be produced, discounted suggestions that Ford's decision was politically motivated. "The initiative came from the scientific community," he said, "from scientists outside of government."

"It's an urgent kind of situation," the researcher said in an interview. "The Presidet made a bold and courageous decision. This is something that's never been tried before."

Kilbourne said, "We have definite evidence of human transmission of swine virus and that's never been seen before. We predict something's going to happen."

In the pandemic of a half-century ago, the death toll throughout the world reached 20 million, including 548,000 Americans. One virologist has said the mortality from a flu outbreak this winter could be 2 per cent — a conservative estimate — and that could mean 4 million deaths in this country.

The flu comes and goes in cycles. About every 10 years there is a major change in the virus and major epidemics result.

The changes apparently occur in the surface antigens of the virus. The antigens are the parts of the virus structure that trigger the body's defense mechanisms, antibodies. With new or changed antigens, the body has no way of recognizing them, and the individual is vulnerable, naked against the enemy.

President Ford asked Congress to approve his plan for a massive vaccination plan against swine flu virus before the April recess so that an adequate supply of vaccine can be available for full-scale immunization by the beginning of September.

Officials Thursday established the following timetable for production, testing and distribution of the vaccine: first small lots available in mid-April for clinical testing, test data ready by early June; then a decision on the concentration and dosage form of the vaccine, with coordinated distribution beginning later in June.

Burbank airport to close

BURBANK (AP)— Operators of the nation's largest privately owned airport with commercial airline service say airlines and tenants at the Hollywood-Burbank Airport will have to move out by May 1977.

Lockheed Air Terminal, Inc., which operates the airport, had said earlier that the airport would be closed unless public agencies prevented sale of the 600-acre site for private development.

The airport's 88 tenants will receive termination notices by April 30.

Rabin party faces ordeal over myriad problems

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli officials are quarreling over money and the fuss ranges from military training to free orange juice for mailmen.

Political commentators are saying that budget problems, labor relations and the tightening grip of recession could present Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor party government with the gravest domestic ordeal since it took office almost two years ago.

Part of the problem is inflation, which has hit Israelis at a combined rate of 117 per cent for the past two years. Now the Defense Ministry complains that Israel's military machine faces another 32 per cent jump in prices this year.

Ministry officials have protested to the treasury that the vital defense allotment of $4.4 billion — more than one-third of the country's entire budget — allows for only 25 per cent higher prices, and the military needs another $175 million.

The treasury has refused, and Defense Ministry sources say this means less army training, less research and development for new equipment, and no reduction of Israel's dependance on the United States for weapons.

Rabin's Cabinet voted later, however, to review the budget if the Defense Ministry can't pay its bills.

The financial pinch extends beyond the Defense Ministry. Postal rates are going up by 33 per cent and an Israeli lucky enough to get a new telephone will have to pay $217 to install it. The national bus company has reduced its services and fired 450 drivers, but says it will still be unable to meet its next payroll.

The Friedman Co., a Jerusalem firm whose stoves and burners heat most Israeli homes, has laid off half its workers. The Red Sea town of Elath is deeply concerned by the government's decision to close its Timna copper mines, which were smelting ore in Biblical times but now produce at a loss of millions of dollars a year.

Income Tax Commissioner Yitzhak Mann has resigned, complaining that Israel's tax reforms have not gone far enough toward increasing government revenues. Michael Bruno, economic adviser to the treasury, also quit on the grounds that his urging of tighter budget measures was ignored.

The latest stir is from 20,000 civil servants who threaten "drastic action" if their special tax-free bonuses are cut, as a government - appointed committee has recommended.

Prof. Haim Barkai, head of the committee, looked into Israeli civil service fringe benefits and found that postal workers for years have been getting an extra $10 a month for emptying mailboxes, and that mailmen draw an allowance of $2 a week for riding bicycles.

Mailmen, the Hebrew University professor said, also get a $3-a-month allowance for orange juice or other beverages.

Income tax workers get a "social alienation" allowance because collecting taxes is a shameful occupation, by an Israeli standard harking back to the days of Jewish ghettos. Oil workers receive a "smell" increment because of the odors they endure.

The newspaper Maariv calculated that the scores of special allowances cost taxpayers $12 million a year.

Barkai told the government that 20,000 civil servants were getting unnecessary payments — such as danger money for scrubbing floors — and another 22,000 were demanding similar payments.

Rabin's cabinet promptly split on whether to act, but the ministers compromised, accepted the report and passed it on to another committee.

Maariv said the dispute could "turn the civil service into a battlefield."

Rescue units to practice in L.V. mock disaster

Residents of La Verne will be wasting their time looking for a fire when the city's fire alarms sound early Saturday morning.

It isn't often that the community can be warned in advance of a "disaster," but the Pomona Red Cross is doing just that.

On Saturday morning, disaster-training groups will gather at La Verne College for a mock disaster, which will depict an airplane crashing into a campus dormitory.

Participating in the training session will be Red Cross units, Citizen Band radio groups, paramedics from Los Angeles County, La Verne Fire Department personnel, staffs from Pomona Valley and San Dimas community hospitals, local ambulance crews and volunteer first aiders.

Students will be made-up to resemble "victims" of the disaster.

The mock disaster will last into the early afternoon, according to Robert Fields, disaster training chairman for the Pomona Red Cross Chapter.

Regulation for S.D. scenic zone disputed but approved

The San Dimas City Council has tentatively approved standards for a scenic highway zone designed to preserve the natural setting along various streets.

But the 3-2 vote Monday saw members Jim Lough and James McLean dissenting in an issue over whether uniform setback requirements should be required on two streets or each property should be considered individually

At the urging of Doug Fordyce, president of the Via Verde Homeowners Association, Mayor Marvin Ersher and Councilmen Terry Dipple and Philip Wax agreed to uniform setbacks for Via Verde and Puente Street.

Lough and McLean both objected.

Planning Director Mark Goldberg explained in his report that the purpose of the zone is "to provide a means of implementing the scenic highways element of the General Plan by reviewing the development of adjacent property to minimize the impact upon scenic corridors."

The zone will conserve the natural landscaping, creeks and lakes adjacent to the major thoroughfares within the city, and architectural development must be consistent with the natural setting, explained Goldberg.

The modified motion approved by the council calls for 50-foot setbacks in residential areas along Via Verde and Puente; 20-foot setbacks for three corners at Via Verde and Puente and the corners of San Dimas Avenue and Via Verde; 25-foot setback for the nine-acre proposed shopping center site near Puente and Via Verde.

Precise plans for development would determine setbacks along San Dimas Canyon Road, Arrow Highway, Puddingstone Drive and Foothill Boulevard.

Fordyce said this latter was a "piecemeal approach with insufficient guarantees that what is left after going piece by piece will end up a scenic highway." He voiced a preference for the setback approach rather than parcel by parcel.

McLean answered that it would not be "piecemeal," but would be individual consideration of each setback in order to allow "flexibility and room for existing structures and future development. To dictate a definite setback may not be conducive to existing or future development."

Lough agreed, saying such definite setbacks could "cause hardship on some property owners, I don't want to take a shotgun approach to this."

Ersher said he had no strong opposition to the precise plan, but would prefer requirements. He also suggested that the Via Verde Homeowners Assocation establish an agreement for a maintenance district to unkeep the slopes of the highway in that area.

The mayor then moved for modification of the precise plan and establishment of exact setbacks for Via Verde and Puente. Dipple seconded the motion.

In opposing the motion, Lough said the council could be faced with a possible suit from individual property owners because such setbacks might render their land unusable.

The ordinance will go back to the Planning Commission now for report before returning to the council for final report.

Environmental group lists 'Dirty Dozen'

Rhodes calls it a 'cheap publicity gimmick'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental group has put House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes and 11 other congressmen on its "Dirty Dozen" list and vowed to work to defeat them in the November election.

Environmental Action, Inc., claimed that it has helped knock off 22 of 31 incumbents it named to three prior "Dirty Dozen" lists since 1970. It said the targets were chosen on their voting records, their seniority and committee assignments, and the "quality" of their opponents in the election.

Rhodes, who has represented his Arizona district for 24 years, termed the list "a cheap publicity gimmick and a phony test of environmental concern. Most of the members on the list are not antienvironment, but proemployment."

Another target, Rep. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, said he was more worried about protecting jobs and "ten-toed babies" than about "protecting lizards and three-toed salamanders."

Nine targets are Republicans and three Democrats. Environmental Action, which said its campaign is nonpartisan, said it would produce radio and newspaper ads for use against the 12. A staff member will visit each district to help organize local opposition, it said.

Environmental Action tabulated votes on 14 issues, including strip mining, nuclear energy research and insurance, automobile fuel conservation and solar energy development.

The "Dirty Dozen" averaged less than two correct votes in Environmental Action's eyes. Two congressmen were graded zero: Donald D. Clancy, R-Ohio, and Albert W. Johnson, R-Pa. Rhodes and Symms each voted the way Environmental Action wanted only once. Richard C. White, D-Tex., voted Environmental Action's way three times.

Samuel L. Devine, R-Ohio, is on the list for the third time and Burt Talcott, R-Calif., for the second.

Environmental Action claims it had a hand in defeating former Rep. Wayne Aspinall, then chairman of the House Interior Committee, in 1972.

Of the 31 different men on previous lists, two retired, five lost primary fights and 17 were beaten in general elections, the group said. During the same period, only 10 per cent of all House incumbents lost, it said.

Rhodes noted that nine of the 14 votes on the "Dirty Dozen" list were energy related. "Environmental Action has overlooked the relationship between energy and jobs," said Rhodes, adding that the Ford administration has estimated that "the votes in question represent close to a half a million new jobs. Environmental Action must be working for a world consisting of unemployed people living in cold, drafty caves."

Rhodes said the ratings were "arbitrary, misleading and grossly unfair." He and other members on the list have signed a letter asking the Fair Campaign Practices Committee to investigate the ethical questions raised by such ratings, the Republican leader said.

Also on the list were: Goodloe E. Byron, D-Md.; James C. Cleveland, R-N.H.; John T. Flynt Jr., D-Ga.; Charles Grassley, R-Iowa; and M. Gene Snyder, R-Ky.. Grassley is the only freshman congessman among them.

Dynamics gets arms job worth $10½ million

The General Dynamics plant in Pomona has received a $10.5 million contract from the U.S. Army Missile Command to develop the Viper, an anti-tank weapon.

A shoulder-fired rocket, the Viper weighs less than seven pounds but has substantially greater tank-killing capability than previous light anti-tank weapons, said officials.

The compact weapon is 27-inches long when carried and extends to 44 inches for firing.

The Viper's front and rear sights deploy automatically when the gunner extends the launching tube which holds the rocket. The gunner then simply arms the weapon, aims and fires. The launching tube is then discarded.

The anti-tank rocket can be used at ranges from 10 to 500 meters.

Under the 43-month engineering development phase of the new contract, the Pomona plant will design and develop the Viper's warhead, firing mechanisms and sights.

Atlantic Research will provide the rocket motor and Brunswick the launch tube. Final assembly of the weapon will be conducted at the Army's ammunition plant in Burlington, Iowa.

Several thousand of the new weapons will be delivered during the engineering development phase, with long range production expected to be in "multimillion quantities," officials said.

INFANT TRAINING

Mrs. Judy Cook, a teacher in the infant stimulation program at Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens, offers Tom Duncan suggestions for helping his daughter, Sarah Ann, 10 months old. Parents participate in the infant training program.

Parents playing bigger role: teaching retarded

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

The newest program offered by the Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens is designed to stimulate retarded or developmentally slow infants to reach their maximum potential.

Called an infant stimulation class, the program is geared toward training the parents to stimulate their baby and enhance its development.

According to a teacher in the program, Judy Cook, the OPARC staffers are basically in a supportive role to the parents.

She stressed the importance of reaching the family when the baby is very tiny and immediately starting a program which will establish good developmental training in the infant.

"We evaluate each baby and then work with the parents to encourage techniques and skills to help their child," Mrs. Cook said.

She stressed that as soon as a child is identified as handicapped, stimulation should begin. This program at the center is geared for infants from just a few weeks to 36 months old.

Activities in which the parents and child work together under supervision include using belly boards to encourage crawling; exercises in front of floor-level mirrors, and introduction to cup drinking and spoon handling to encourage the child's skills.

"I've seen handicapped 6-year-olds on a bottle only because some parent didn't encourage the baby to use a cup," the teacher reported.

Mrs. Cook said probably the most important value in the OPARC program comes from the parents sharing experiences with each other.

"When one parent sees something which works with another baby, the parent is encouraged to try it," added the teacher.

The infant class is held at OPARC Monday through Friday mornings and parents usually attend about twice a week. This staggers the 12 children enrolled so that about four are present each morning.

Mrs. Cook said that some funding for the class is available to families through the San Gabriel Valley Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled, through welfare and other aid programs and through the United Way.

While the infant stimulation class is a newer service of OPARC, the program for developing the sensory and motor activities for preschoolers between the ages of 2 and 5 is no less important, said Lilah Beer and Jean Corrigan, teachers.

IT'S NOT EASY

Most children learn to scamper over steps rapidly, but Andy Anderson, a student in OPARC preschool, needs help from teacher Jean Corrigan to maintain balance.

The dozen youngsters now attending these classes each morning at the Montclair center are taught balance, grasp control, and the basic requirement for feeding and caring for themselves.

These youngsters also learn hand-eye coordination, the identification of body parts and pre-speech skills.

They, too, have the opportunity to share experiences with their peer group and thus gain self-esteem, the teachers said.

Another program at OPARC is for adults who are taught techniques needed to cope with community living.

Hetty Doesberg, a director of the educational program, said about 35 adults are learning domestic skills, music appreciation, crafts and other self-sustaining procedures in classes each morning.

Teachers take groups of students into the community to teach them how to shop, visit beauty shops and order meals.

Mrs. Doesberg said that while the school could handle 122 students, the current enrollment is 70.

"We are trying hard to seek out those handicapped children and adults in the community who can benefit by our center," she said. "We carefully evaluate each potential student and often direct them to other agencies in the valley which can help."

Mrs. Doesberg added that, at present, state funding for programs at OPARC, have been frozen. She said this means that some youngsters who need help are not being admitted to the school.

But she added encouragement by saying that there are still some financial aid programs available to families.

Mrs. Doesberg is interested in talking with parents who have a child which has a handicap. She can be reached at OPARC, 9160 Monte Vista Ave., Montclair, or by calling 626-5108.

Claremont man held in rape cases

A Claremont man has been arrested by sheriff's deputies and named as a suspect in several kidnapings and rapes in the valley area.

The man, Gerald McDonald Rogers, 36, 530 S. Carleton Place, was arrested by deputies from the Industry station after a license number given them was traced to him. The number was supplied by a West Covina woman who was attacked earlier this month.

Sheriff's Lt. Ray Schartau said Rogers, a solicitator, is suspected of being the man who grabbed an 18-year-old girl in Hacienda Heights Feb. 18, dragged her into his van, drove to a remote area and attacked her. He also is suspected in a similar attack in Covina March 19.

Rogers was identified by the two victims at the industry station after his arrest, Schartau said. The case has been submitted to the District Attorney's office for study, he added. Meanwhile, Rogers, reportedly a parolee, was being held without bail on suspicion of kidnaping and rape.

Police chief post disclosed statewide

An invitation seeking applications for the vacant post of police chief for the city of Pomona has been mailed to law enforcement agencies throughout the state.

The position became vacant March 1 with the resignation of F.P. Wallich who was chief since 1973.

Applicants' resumes will be accepted through May 7 and should be directed to Jerrold R. Gonce, city administrator. Selection of the chief will be made by Gonce with the concurrence of the City Council.

A screening committee of seven persons has been set up for an oral review of the most qualified applicants. Among the board members is Officer Richard M. Tefank, president of the Pomona Police Officers Association.

The Pomona Police Department is made up of 141 sworn personnel and 31 civilian employes.

Before leaving, Wallick appointed Richard A. Slaght acting chief, an appointment okayed later by the City Council. Slaght is the department's highest-ranking officer, and only captain.

NAACP not in repair project

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) is not in any way involved with the "Pilot Community Action and Youth Project," said project Spokesman Ben Trammell of Pomona.

Trammell is one of a group of citizens spearheading a drive to convert abandoned service stations in Pomona into self-service automotive repair centers.

In a March 14 article in the Progress Bulletin announcing this project, it was reported that a representative of the Pomona Valley Branch of the NAACP was involved in planning it and would attend a public meeting at which it would be explained.

This was a misrepresentation, said Trammell.

Pomona night club hit by blaze

The fire was intentionally set in a storage area between the commercial operation owned by Ronald Richardson and Dan Marshall and a home at the rear of the property, according to Fire Chief John Fowlkes. The fire was discovered at 1:22 a.m. by Pomona policemen on a routine patrol of the club.

There were only a few patrons at the club and they were quickly cleared out. Two engine companies, a truck and rescue responded to the call from the police officers. Battalion Chief Dwaine Lindebaum was in charge.

There was light smoke damage, and glasses and other materials stored there were destroyed.

Checks, balances of economics

A number of writers have called attention to the fact that 1976 is not only the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. It is also the bicentennary of the publication of another work which was to profoundly influence the course of history — Adam Smith's "An Inquiry Into the Wealth of Nations."

That both appeared in the same year may have been a coincidence of the calendar, but there the coincidence ends. Each document was in its own way a radical statement for the times which ignited the imaginations and energies of men, the one in the sphere of politics and government, the other in economics.

If the American experience has proved anything, it is that political freedom and progress and economic freedom and progress are inseparable.

For all the sweeping assertions in the Declaration of Independence, the signers of that document, many of whom later participated in the framing of the Constitution of the United States, were pragmatists and students of history.

Aware of the natural tendency of men, and of governments composed of men, to seek their own self-aggrandizement, they wrote into the Constitution a system of checks and balances designed to ensure a division of power among the three branches of the new federal government. They also recognized, in the First Amendment, that the free competition of ideas was an indispensable bulwark against tyranny.

Similarly, the Scotsman Smith argued that "it is not from the benevolence of the butcher, the brewer or the baker that we expect our dinner, but from their regard to their self-interest. We address ourselves not to their humanity but to their self-love, and never talk to them of our necessities but of their advantage."

It was through the free competition of these individual self-interests, Smith argued, that the general good of society was served. In an economic counterpart of the political system of checks and balances, he postulated an "invisible hand" which regulated supply and demand, production and consumption, prices and wages.

This, of course, was a description of an ideal state, unattainable by men, as Smith, a pragmatist himself, fully realized. Far from being the apostle of pure laissez faire capitalism, as he has often been characterized, he knew that "people of the same trade seldom meet together but the conversation ends in a conspiracy against the public, or in some diversion to raise prices."

It was, however, chiefly against the then-prevailing system of mercantilism — the government's chartering of monopolies to favored domestic industries at the expense of colonies, the infinitely detailed laws regulating prices and wages, production and trade — that "The Wealth of Nations" was directed.

If Adam Smith had been George III, there never would have been a Boston Tea Party, the result of a monopoly vested in the British East India Tea Company. Had Parliament been composed of Adam Smiths, the Americans would have been permitted to sever their ties with Britain peacefully to pursue their own destiny, to the benefit of both mother country and colonies.

One likes to think that were Adam Smith to return today, he would be pleased at the nation which has been the most outstanding example of his philosophy in practice. For all its obvious shortcomings, the United States has achieved the greatest economic justice for the greatest number, as well as the greatest measure of individual freedom within the confines of necessary law.

That is as much as he, or the signers of the Declaration of Independence, could have hoped for in 1776

A bargain for the state

Dear Editor:

I would like to reply to your Sacramento columnist Earl G. Waters who wrote in your Tuesday edition that state college presidents live in mansions valued from $70,000 to $393,000 but the rents paid are as low as $142 a month.

Since I have never visited Chancellor Glen S. Dumke's residence in Bel Air, nor the presidential residences at Chico, Fresno or San Luis Obispo, I cannot speak for the merits of the landlord-tenant arrangements there.

However, I can, with some authority, speak for the Cal Poly Pomona arrangement, since my family lived in the same residence now occupied by the Robert C. Kramers from 1927 until 1943. And I suspect that many of the plus benefits for the university of having the first family live there would apply with equal justice to the other situations as well.

True, the Kramers are getting a lot of shelter for the alleged modest rental charged them, but please bear in mind that this residence was built in 1926. Fifty year old houses develop some real problems. Even at 25 years wiring becomes inadequate. By 50 years the plumbing and also the heating ducting, not to mention the fixtures and furnaces begin to show signs of needing replacement or rehabilitation.

It's a little known fact that the Kramer residence suffered from an economy program during construction. Normally quite frugal, W.K. Kellogg came back to himself after an uncharacteristic spending spree and decreed certain economies which adversely affected the quality of the finished house.

Mute testimonial of this is the fire which occurred in the late '20s in the dining room area. Although the Pomona Fire Department performed with its usual efficiency even in those days, inadequate firestops and unseen construction short-cuts resulted in an unsafe condition. The Kramers are living with this.

I'm sure if he had his druthers, President Ford and family would opt to live at Camp David, but the White House (once burned by the British in 1812) is the symbolic residence of the first family. So is the Kramer residence at Cal Poly Pomona and very likely the other presidential tenants at the other campuses. This makes them targets of whatever could happen during times of stress such as occurred in the late '60s and early '70s. This proved too much for President Howard Neville (and his wife Fredrika) at Claremont Men's College who was driven away after only one year's tenure by student and off-campus agitators who made this residence less than a joy to live in.

On the positive side, the Kramers have been gracious hosts to campus and community groups. They have opened their home to ever so many social occasions. And it is most presentable in spite of its age and infirmities. A quick comparison of this residence (built at a third of the cost) with the main W.K. Kellogg home further up the hill will convince the most casual viewer that the state has a splendid tenant. Kellogg Hall, as it's called, is a shambles. The cost of restoring to anything like the Kramer residence's condition would be prohibitive. It would be cheaper to rebuild, perhaps.

Sure, the Kramers are getting low cost square footage, but they are contributing a lot. They are also putting up with a lot of inconveniences in the way of outdated residential carry overs. They also expose themselves as the first family of the nation does to a goldfish bowl existence. For this, I submit, their low cost square footage arrangement is a bargain . . . for the state! — Norman Williamson Jr., Claremont

Shah could take Saudi fields

WASHINGTON — Secret intelligence reports warn that the shah of Iran, if he wanted to, could land his army in Saudi Arabia and annex its oil fields.

This possibility worries high-level U.S. officials. The shah, they realize, is living beyond his means. For all his vaunted riches, he is deeply in debt. Iran owes several billion dollars in bilateral and multilateral loans. The outstanding debt to the United States alone is over $1 billion.

Iran's oil reserves, meanwhile, are expected to last no longer than two decades. World demand for Iranian oil, at the same time, has fallen off sharply. This has left the shah embarrassingly short of money to pay for his grandiose of a modern Persian empire.

He is burdened down, heaviest of all, with expensive armaments. The United States has sold him $8.6 billion worth of weapons during the past three years. The purpose has been to make the shah the protector of the Persian Gulf, the source of oil now needed to run America's factories and automobiles.

But some Arab nations, particularly Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, are beginning to wonder who will protect them from their protector. Intelligence reports tell of mounting tension in the vital Persian Gulf area.

The Pentagon's intelligence estimates, stamped "Secret-Sensitive," indicate that the shah's military machine could overwhelm Saudi Arabia. According to these documents, Iran has an Air Force of 75,000 men, including 645 pilots of whom 450 are trained to fly jets.

Saudi Arabia, in contrast, has a far smaller 15,000-man air force. Of these, 200 are pilots and only 90 are jet-trained. The Saudi's 114 fighter planes would also be no match for the shah's 338 planes, which include 162 supersonic F-4 Phantoms.

Iran also has a fleet of 483 helicopters, many of them suitable for airlifting troops. Saudi Arabia has but 35 helicopters, all of them described as "utility" aircraft.

On the sea, the shah's 18,500-man navy is training to man three destroyers, four frigates and three submarines recently purchased from the United States. Saudi Arabia's insignificant 1,500-man navy doesn't possess a single warship of any size.

The shah, meanwhile, has established peaceful relations with neighboring Iraq, a traditional enemy of Iran. If the shah should move against Saudi Arabia, however, some analysts believe the Iraqis would break their agreement with the shah and support the Saudis.

This would involve a 15,000-man air force, with 358 jet fighters and 171 helicopters, plus a 3,000-man navy, with 11 missile boats. And from a greater distance, Egypt and Jordan would also be expected to back Saudi Arabia. This would add another 628 fighter planes, 37 jet bombers, 5 destroyers, 12 submarines and 14 missile boats to the Arab forces.

SCREW SCANDAL: In a classic case of a battle being lost for want of a horseshoe nail, shoddy screws have cost the government billions and have contributed to air crashes.

Metal screws hold together everything from computers to high-stress airplane parts. When screws snap or loosen, the equipment may cease to function or may even self-destruct.

Yet unscrupulous manufacturers have produced screws that have caused costly accidents. The nut-and-bolt industry could have avoided these disasters by manufacturing more craftsmanlike products. But the specifications for screws and nuts are fixed by industry-run "standards committees," which have been more interested in profits than in safety.

Footnote: Industrial spokesmen insist that "the present specifications have served industry well" and that any new testing method would be "too costly and unnecessary."

Big government campaign issue

By Terry Wade
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — There are times in every nation's history when government becomes the point rather than the result of political debate. Such was the case nearly 200 years ago when a young colony, after decades of debating issues — stamp taxes, tea taxes, etc. —, made government, English government, the issue.

Now, two centuries later, government may once again overshadow other societal problems as the issue. Fortunately the system born of armed struggle has provided for such a review, without the need of arms. Unlike the temper of 1776, few believe we need dramatic change and even fewer believe the means used by our forefathers is necessary now.

The elections of 1976 may afford the same opportunity to Americans as the arms of 1776. All the major presidential candidates have expressed themselves on our government. Republican President and candidate Gerald Ford presides over the biggest government history has ever known, yet he acknowledges, "to hold down the cost of living we must hold down the cost of government."

Was that State of the Union remark rhetoric? Despite proposing the largest federal budget to date Ford did cut the growth of government in half and has promised a balanced budget within five years.

Ford's GOP opponent, Ronald Reagan, in January said "They (the American people) want government off their backs and out of their pocketbooks." Reagan emphasized his anti-government philosophy with his ill-fated proposal to shift $90 billion in government programs to states. He also proposed a "Transfer of funds" along with the responsibility.

In the Democratic nomination race an anti-Washington candidate leads the pack. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter has predicted his entire campaign on the need for change in the Capitol city.

He has proposed a restructuring of the 1,900 federal agencies into 200 or less to clean up the "horrible bureaucratic mess." Unlike the Republicans the Democratic candidates, excluding Gov. George Wallace and including Carter, aren't against government. They simply want more efficient government. "Tight business like management and planning techniques must be instituted . . ." Carter has said.

By the nature of his 35 years in Congress Sen. Henry Jackson can hardly run against government. In fact the Washington senator thinks it is "logical that the federal government should assume greater responsibility in (education and welfare) areas."

Arizona, U.S. Rep. Mod Udall is the most pro-government of the candidates and has openly said, "I don't think the public wants a smaller federal government." There are other candidates and non-candidates, but these are the men who offer the alternatives.

Just in jest

California, land of the sundown sea, the golden state where towering redwoods and snow capped Sierras vie with the desert's purple majesty and the wonderland that is Yosemite to lure tourists from all over the world. And what do those eager visitors like the most about this new world Garden of Eden? — Funny you should ask, for that is just the question recently asked of a large cross section of those ohing and ahing tourists. The results of that survey are now in. First on the preference list was Disneyland.

Golden Staters head for Oregon

By Earl G. Waters

In what appears to be an astounding reversal of attitude, if not state policy, Governor Robert Straub of Oregon came to California to thump the tub for Californians to move to his state.

This bit of chamber of commercism is completely out of character for the Oregonians who have viewed Californians as the modern day Philistines to be kept out of their state at all costs. Reportedly they have even considered barriers at the border.

As it is, one almost needs a tourist visa to venture into that state from this side of the border. Of course, like most other places, the natives love the tourists but only as long as their dollars last and only as long as they remain tourists. Californians report having seen signs along the way announcing "visit Oregon but don't stay" or sentiments similar in vein.

And, truthfully, Governor Straub's solicitations were not directly a great departure from that thinking. He wasn't out to entice just any old Californians to his wonderland, but rather to select few who could bring with them some industries to provide jobs for his unemployed.

Neither is he looking for just any industry. Again he was most select making his pitches only to the movie and electronics executives and similar so-called light industrial executives. He is not looking for the heavy installations which would bring more than just jobs with them, not the least of which would be smog and other environmental contaminations.

For Oregon is more than unusually mindful of its environmental responsibilities. It is a state which has outlawed non-returnable beverage containers. If its environmental protection laws are no tougher than California's it will be a near insurmountable obstacle for any new industries to hurdle even though its taxes may be less than here.

Still, there can be little quarrel with a state desiring to keep itself as pristine as possible. Its problem is it hasn't been all that successful fending off boarders. Straub, himself a former Californian, says Golden Staters are swarming across his border in droves with some 30,000 taking up residence each year.

Unfortunately for that state's economy they are not all retired or otherwise self-supporting and the unemployment rate has become a major problem, hence his efforts to attract some desirable industry at California's expense.

His scheme sounds great for his state until close examination. Then it becomes nothing more than the old chamber of commerce pitch that more industry means more jobs, more business, higher economy, less taxes, all spelling "progress".

Straub would do well to take his plan back to the drawing board. He will find that more industry means more problems, period! Even if that weren't so he is looking in the wrong direction. The movie and electronics industries probably have a greater percentage of unemployed than any other. He should study the experience in Alaska with the pipeline. Sure it brought into that state a huge project providing jobs for thousands. It also attracted many thousands of newcomers. In fact about three times the number for which jobs existed. The result was an even higher unemployment rate than before the project.

More people, unfortunately, usually means more crime, more welfare, more school bonds, and higher taxes. This, of course, is what some California communities have discovered and why they have taken steps to at least slow growth down. Most notable is Petaluma which just recently won a landmark case before the United States Supreme Court upholding its right to limit growth.

Extended benefits finally received

I am writing in regard to my employment benefits.

At the end of Jan. I filed for extended benefits against the state of Hawaii.

Within the first two weeks of Feb. I received a letter from Hawaii approving my extended benefits.

When I went to the local unemployment office 10 days ago I filed tracers for some of the checks owed me and turned in a claim form for the rest.

My husband is out of work and not eligible for unemployment so we need this money very badly. I would appreciate any help you can give. — A. F., Pomona.

Twelve days after we wrote to the Unemployment Insurance Division of Honolulu's Department of Labor and Industrial Relations, Thomas Mayeda, division administrator, wrote that after our inquiry, you were paid benefits for all claims filed by you.

The sum amounted to $504, you wrote to us.

Mayeda pointed out to us that the unemployment level is high and his staff has encountered some problems because of the heavy workload.

This situation has been compounded by occasional breakdowns in computer service, he said.

He and his staff are quite aware of the necessity to make reasonably prompt payment of benefits to all claimants and "we are working toward achieving it," he said.

I'm desperate for my husband.

He is 57 and has been a mechanic for many years. His last place of employment was a firm here in the valley.

In August 1975 he took two weeks off with the boss's consent to go to Indiana due to an accident his brother had.

When he got home he had a registered letter saying he was terminated due to not reporting for work in the second week. When he signed for his unemployment, he won through the appeal board because the boss had given him verbal consent to be off for two weeks.

He has been everywhere looking for a job. In December, another valley firm gave him a job. The man who interviewed him said his qualifications were just what the firm wanted. He worked one day. The next morning he was told he wasn't the man for the job.

He has had many good interviews but he doesn't get called.

Today was the payoff. A man at another firm had interviewed him Monday. He told him he had the job and would start working Thursday. Today, Wednesday, he was called and told the firm couldn't use him.

We called the labor relations board and were told there is nothing that can be done.

Please try to help us. My husband is getting so depressed that I am getting worried for his welfare.

If only we knew what the problem is. He really is a good mechanic. — Mrs. C. P., Pomona.

We called your husband and gave him the names of several agencies which make an effort to find jobs for people but he was primarily interested in finding out why he was at first accepted for jobs and then turned down.

You later told us that he thought he was being given a poor reference by the firm where he had been employed last.

The secretary-treasurer replied to our inquiry into this possibility.

He disagreed with your report that your husband had received verbal consent for his absence. He cited a section of the firm's contract with a union which stated: "Employment rights cease when an employe does not report back to work promptly at the expiration of his vacation period or authorized leave of absence, unless excused by the employer."

He said there had been a few inquiries regarding his previous employment with his firm and "in all fairness our service manager merely stated that he (your husband) was a fair mechanic. We feel the above statement is true and just to the best of our knowledge."

Ann Landers

Burn that chapter from life

Dear Ann: When I was a graduate student in college, I had a homosexual experience. At the time, I had been married to a wonderful man for three years. It was a traumatic period in my life and I was afraid my marriage would not survive. In an effort to sort out my feelings, I kept a detailed journal in which I expressed my deep devotion for my woman friend.

That was three years ago. Miraculously, our marriage did survive. We moved to another city and I broke off with my lover completely. Soon after, I became pregnant. We now have a beautiful little daughter and my husband and I couldn't be happier.

My problem: Should I destroy the journal? It is well hidden, but I have this terrible fear that if I should die suddenly or if it is discovered by the wrong person it could be very damaging. (My husband knows of the affair.)

I am torn because I spent an enormous amount of time writing that journal and one day I might want to use it as the basis for a novel. What do you advise? — Nom de Plume

Dear Plume: Put a match to it. That journal represents a chapter of your life that is over — and one that might have resulted in total disaster. You will feel greatly relieved once you've destroyed it.

Dear Ann Landers: You're not going to believe this, but I beg of you to take me seriously. I'm a 16-year-old girl. The problem is my 12-year-old sister. She is making a nervous wreck out of me.

Pat has the idea that the way to have fun is to scare the living daylights out of a person. No matter where I go in the house, she is lurking behind a door, ready to jump out and scream, "I gotcha!" Or she'll hide under my bed at night and after I've turned out the light she'll suddenly pounce on me like an animal. Last night she hid under the dinner table and bit my leg. I nearly fainted.

Is this girl a little nuts? Has she seen too many horror movies? Or is there something wrong with my sense of humor? If I'm a "sourpuss" (as she calls me) please say so and I'll try to be a better sport. In the meantime, what should I do? — Heck Of A Wreck

Dear Wreck: Are you an orphan? Where are your parents when all these "jokes" are being pulled? Pat needs some firm discipline and since your mother and dad have obviously abdicated their responsibility, you have a right to protect yourself.

The next time Little Sis jumps out of a closet, pounces, bites, or does anything else to scare you, let her have it — with a whack on the backside. I seldom advocate physical retaliation, but in this case I believe it's the only way to cure that nutty kid.

Dear Ann Landers: You have a knack for exposing gross violations of simple etiquette. Will you please say something about people who have telephones beside their dining tables and insist on carrying on a long conversation while they are eating? It's so rude it makes me sick. Thanks, Ann. — Super Bugged

Dear Super: The solution is simple. Repeat as follows: "Please phone me when you've finished eating. I can't understand a thing you say when you have food in your mouth."

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Men's styles don't suit me

Well, now that Easter is approaching I guess it's time to start thinking about my spring wardrobe. Actually, I have thought about it from time to time, but I get to giggling so hard I get hiccups and Nanny sends me out of the room.

I haven't spent much time leafing through fashion magazines since I was a boy scanning the Montgomery Ward catalogue. (I was NOT looking at the corset ads!) Now I find the world of fashion has left me behind.

The language of men's styles today has turned as erotic as anything in a woman's fashion publication — even a trifle, er, dainty. "Star yourself in olive underglow Frostloom Mohair," croons one ad. "Cool to look at with its intermixed weave of 'iced' colorings." On the rocks?

Another brochure from the garment industry sighs of a suit with "an intriguing hint of iridescence," and another wants to get me all worked up about "subtle tones of muted blue Glenn plaids." A cravat hawker urges "Let your hands caress one of these ties and know what real quality is like." (I'm getting a little feverish.)

One ad sings the praises of something called a hooded popover and a foul weather suit. What a movie that would make — "The Hooded Popover Meets the Foul Weather Suit." (Rated X.)

There is also in current advertising, I discovered, a distressing emphasis on boldness, adventure and excitement. The ads depict young muscular chaps surfing, skin-diving, parachuting and piloting racing cars. All I want is an old sport shirt and a pair of slacks to mow the lawn in. Maybe I don't qualify for a new spring wardrobe. Do they give you a physical examination?

"Boldness at the beach is typified by the surf suit in bold red and white stripes, and Lastex trunks for the surfer who is young at heart, lean of frame and bold in spirit."

You probably have to play profootball or know judo to buy that ensemble. Boldness at the beach. How about shyness at the shore? Haven't you something in TIMID red and white stripes? Are we turning into a nation of 007's?

One patch of prose mentioned "the excitement of the one-button sport coat." I may be getting blase, but it's been a long time since I was excited — I mean REALLY stirred — by a one-button sport coat. On a man.

I think I'll stick with the Hooded Popover.

Dr. Lamb

Diabetic needs strict diet

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am supposed to be a diabetic and have been for two years. I am still concerned about this because at times I feel like I'm not. The way I felt before going to a doctor was always thirsty, dizzy and hardly able to see. I had double vision and also weight loss of about 20 pounds in two weeks. I made an appointment to see the doctor and he told me to eat something real sweet two hours before coming in, which I did. He ran a urine test and also a blood test and then put me in the hospital. They said my blood sugar went to 450. I don't really know what this means. They started me on 38 units of insulin. I can't stay on my diet. What effect will this have on me? Does this mean I am really a diabetic and I just don't want to accept it?

DEAR READER — You are a diabetic. Even considering the variations in laboratory tests and the temporary peak rises in blood sugars that people may have, your level is way out.

Your symptoms were typical of an untreated diabetic. The basic defect is the failure of the normal insulin mechanism to enable glucose (sugar) to be transported into the cells for energy. It builds up in the blood. Normally the blood level even after eating a very sweet meal is not over 170.

The excess glucose in the blood is spilled into the urine producing what the old medical sages called "sweet urine." This food energy is literally lost into the urine and is not available to the body, resulting in weight loss.

The kidney has trouble concentrating sugar and uses a lot of water to flush out excess glucose. When you lose a lot of water you are thirsty. A typical advanced diabetic is thirsty, drinks a lot of water, passes a lot of urine, is weak and may have weight loss despite eating lots of food.

All carbohydrates from any source including milk merely help build up the level of blood glucose and are not used properly for energy. In the advanced diabetic the body protein including that in the muscle may be broken down and converted into glucose. This causes the blood glucose level to rise even if the carbohydrate intake is restricted.

You have to correct the basic defect as best you can. That means providing insulin. The amount of insulin you take has to be balanced against the amount of food you eat. That is why you must be consistent in your diet and follow your doctor's directions carefully. Exercise also influences the utilization of food energy. It becomes important to regulate your physical activity level. The intelligent diabetic follows a consistent pattern of the same amounts of energy intake in the diet and energy expenditure in terms of physical activity. This enables satisfactory control with a relatively constant level of insulin.

You are very unwise if you are not staying on the diet your doctor asked you to follow in relation to the amount of insulin he is giving you. Diabetes is a serious disease. A great deal can be done to control it and prevent complications in the patient who is well supervised and cooperates with the doctor.

You have an advanced form of diabetes and you need all the help you can get. Those who want more information on diabetes can send 50 cents for The Letter, number 3-10, Diabetes, the Sweet Sickness. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

A low diamond is led and it is up to you to play from the East hand. What do you play?

If you have been reading this week's articles, you should have no problem. You play your ace of diamonds. Second hand high!

This play is not at all hard to make in a bridge column. It is much tougher at the table, yet any expert worth his salt would make it.

He can see that the only way to beat three notrump will be for his partner to score some spade tricks. He can also see that West can't hold much in high cards. But he can be looking at the king or queen of diamonds and it is up to East to let him keep that high diamond in his hand until the ace of spades is knocked out.

Only AMC reports decline

Domestic car sales up from last year

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic auto sales for the second 10 days in March have soared 42 per cent over year-ago levels, chalking up the second-best mid-March of the 1970s.

Sales of 249,231 units reported by the nation's four major car makers compared with 175,674 during the same March 11-20 period in 1975. Last year at this time, the companies had wound up a rebate program designed to lift the industry out of a two-year slump.

Auto industry officials said the sales spurt was paced by continued strong performance of intermediates and full-size cars. Small-car sales continued to lag, with small-car oriented American Motors Corp. the lone major U.S. auto maker reporting a selling decline.

One reason for the jump in sales is a number of dealer sales incentive contests which are continuing through the month, analysts noted.

"We are entering the traditional spring selling season with considerable momentum," said Ford Motor Co. Vice President Bennett E. Bidwell. "The March seasonally adjusted sales rate for the domestic passenger-car industry will be in the nine million unit range — a substantial increase from the seven million North American-built cars sold in calendar 1975."

The daily selling rate, the yardstick used by the industry to compute sales, was 27,692. Only mid-March 1973 was higher, when daily sales for the period reached 35,088.

Chrysler Corp., crediting the success of its new Volare and Aspen models, reported sales up 51 per cent over mid-March 1975. General Motors Corp. said its sales jumped 47 per cent, while Ford Motor Co. reported a 36 per cent boost. AMC sales declined 9 per cent.

For the calendar year, domestic car sales of 1,703,135 are up 28 per cent from last year's 1,313,699, based on the daily rate.

But gas hikes approved

Refunds expected on electric bills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Customers of California's two largest utilities appear certain to get an estimated $230 million refund because of overcharges on their electricity bills.

But members of the Public Utilities Commission, while indicating they will approve the refund April 6 in San Francisco, also approved rate hikes for gas company customers this week.

At a meeting here, commissioners approved gas rate hikes totaling more than $52 million for customers of Southern California Gas Co. and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. However, a spokeswoman said two-thirds of all residential customers will not be affected.

SoCal Gas was permitted to raise its rates $48.3 million effective April 1, when its wholesale costs are scheduled to rise. SDG&E, which buys bulk gas from SoCal Gas, was granted a $4.4 million hike.

Under the PUC's so-called "lifeline policy," residential customers who use 75 therms or less of gas per month will not pay increased rates.

A SoCal Gas customer using 100 therms faces a 25-cent monthly increase, while SDG&E users will pay 54 cents more each month for 100 therms of gas.

The PUC postponed action on the electricity rebate until its April 6 meeting so two of the five commissioners could prepare a minority report. The refund would go to customers of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and Southern California Edison.

"It was very clear at the hearing that it will be a 3-2 vote," in favor of the refund, said PUC spokeswoman Carol Kretzer.

The refund would total about $15.90 for SoCal Edison customers and $9.07 for PG&E ratepayers.

At the request of commissioner Leonard Ross, the PUC staff last week prepared a report which said SoCal Edison had overcharged its customers by $150 million, and that PG&E made overcharges of $80 million.

Ross emphasized that the overcollections were not illegal, but resulted from flaws in the controversial fuel adjustment tariff.

Newsman saddles cycle to find out what Mexico is really like

Editor's note: Associated Press newsman Jack Schreibman, lacking a horse but possessed of a powerful urge to see Mexico surrounded by as much open space as possible, saddled up on a motorcycle for a 6,000-mile round trip journey.

By Jack Schreibman
Associated Press Writer

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The customs official shot an arched eyebrow at the purple motorcycle, shifted it to the orange helmet and goggled head within, then issued a dubious, "pase, senor."

And now, Mexico.

Ahead of bike, rider and 75 pounds of gear to keep both alive lay some 6,000 miles of deserts, seashores and mountains — which is what Mexico is, along with 50 million people, more or less.

Tijuana, its tourists, tacos and tinsel fell behind quickly as I headed south to Ensenada on the new highway at 90 miles an hour, sometimes 100. I burned gasoline that was selling for 93 cents gallon.

The aim of the seven-week trip was to cycle the entire 1,000-mile length of Baja California to the southernmost tip at Cabo San Lucas, ferry to the mainland at Puerto Vallarta, and continue into southern Mexico via Guadalajara and Mexico City. A fair project, I thought.

I would find, my friends assured, an assortment of pistoleros hidden behind every cactus and that all Mexican officials had their hands out for the "mordida," bribes which encouraged them to do their duty.

Much as I looked for them, no cactus ever disgorged a highwayman nor did the uniformed people — local policia or the federales — ever approach me with a "gimme hand." Much the greater hazard navigated on four legs, not two: cattle strolling or sleeping on the roads.

One of the animals, I was told, had caused the death of a youngster from the United States at a dust-dry, cactus crossroad deep in the desert near Santa Ines. The lad's father, driving a camper at night against all advice, hit a cow. The boy was impaled by something in the camper, and died shortly after.

Depressed, I detoured 40 miles east to the gulf and the peaceful, wavelapped Bahia de Los Angeles, the province of a happy, happy man named Papa Dios. As I arrived, a super high tide driven in by a storm on the gulf inundated the sand spit of Punta La Gringa, and a couple of campers floated out to sea and sank. I drank my beer and pondered the uncertainties of life, and took off again the next day.

Somewhere out there in the desert a humorless scorpion convinced me to abandon the idea of desert camping. I had set up my zippered nylon tent, made a supper of beans, salami, tortillas and tequila, and lay down to sleep. No way.

The nocturnal desert beasties had set up a scary symphony of scraping, slithering, cooing and whatnot. My eyes would not close. I opened the tent. Something bit me on the hand. A crescent shape scuttled off, and a painful day followed. I was lucky.

Now, more than 400 miles into the peninsula, temperatures were hitting 115 degrees. Cactus stretched in every desolate direction. In the far disfar distance, diffused shapes of the peaks of the Sierra San Pedro Martir shimmered in the brutal heat.

The bike was getting too hot so I stopped and filled the crankcase with 50-weight oil. I guzzled half my canteen, and took off again into the savage Vizcaino Desert. No hitchhikers here. To walk unwatered in the midday sun for an hour is to die.

The oasis mission of San Ignacio reared up out of the rubble. Nearly in tears from relief, I rolled past a freshwater lake hard by a stand of palms, an old impoverished town and a luxury hotel off to the side.

It was a sad time. The talk was that a rabid coyote had bitten five San Ignacio citizens, all of whom died.

Finally the desert ended and the Gulf of California appeared. I celebrated with two days of sleeping and swimming on a magnificent beach at Mulege. At night, spears of lightning cracked the southern sky. Torrential rains lashed the tip of the peninsula 300 miles away.

The road is cursed by hundreds of "vados," steep dips that often coincide with the beds of dried up streams. When it rains, the vados quickly fill up with water. In five minutes, the roadbed is under water. In 10, rocks, silt and rubble come crashing through.

One such depression was running three feet deep at a good 15 knots when I pulled up north of Ciudad Constitution. I stuck out my thumb. A smoke-belching flatbed with 15 men aboard stopped alongside.

"Hay problema, senor?", one strapping fellow asked, and shortly the farmers were hoisting my 500-pound machine aboard the truck, with a hand for the gringo.

With muchas gracias and hearty back slapping, we got across the flooded vado, then made for a macho cantina for some beer, rotgut mezcal and good tequila. Some time later, the interval escapes me, the farmers helped me to my mount and aimed me at the road. I continued unsteadily past busy La Paz to land's end — Cabo San Lucas, where the Pacific meets the gulf in a sun-dappled wedding beneath the Tropic of Cancer.

A night aboard the spectacular auto-ferry Puerto Vallarta brought me to the tourist trap of the same name. Here, the locals believe it is the Norteamericano's duty to spend his last peso.

A climb through lush mountains and a swift run over the 68-D toll road ends in the No. 2 city in Mexico, Guadalajara. Here's where I got my first taste of real Mexican traffic. Smoke-spewing cars and trucks, and buses dangling with pigs and chickens cut in front at 60 m.p.h. with inches to spare.

En route to Mexico City, over a road that appeared to have been bombed, I dodged huge pot holes. Outside Penjamo the bike ran into a crater, but luckily a dog was asleep in the bottom. Over my shoulder I saw the apparently unharmed mutt stretch his neck out of the hole, utter a token bark of disapproval, and go back to sleep.

The road gradually improved, but curiously the asphalt left off abruptly as it entered the pueblos. Suddenly, the road disintegrated to a hard-packed, uneven dirt path. Asphalt resumed on the other side of town. Clearly, local politicians don't have much clout.

Life in the busy capital is enlivened daily by great smashups of cars, buses, trucks and motorcycles. The intelligent policemen watch with a great deal of interest. I didn't touch the bike for two days.

After Mexico City, I plunged into jungly southern Mexico, discovering U.S. citizens who had dropped out years before for the relatively free and undemanding life south of the border. It's a bit boggling to find a gentle longhair running a pizza and jug wine joint hidden away in the Mexican greenery.

Southward went the purple motorcycle, when heavy rains and warnings of flooded roads ahead forced a halt within 100 miles of Oaxaca. So ended the outbound part of the odyssey.

Miles back to home: 3,000.

Naval Academy names women who'll enroll

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The U.S. Naval Academy has named the first seven women who will attend the academy.

The seven were in a list released recently naming 247 appointees who will begin school as plebes at the academy in July. The plebe class usually has about 1,250 members; and the secretary of the Navy has authorized as many as 80 women in the class of 1980.

In announcing the appointments, the academy said it expects most of the plebe class to be picked by May 1.

The seven women are: Elizabeth Belzer, Westminster, Md.; Donna J. Bueter, Washington, Mich.; Peggy S. Derry, Bushnell, Ill.; Maureen P. Foley, Alexandria, Va.; Bonnie J. Schaefer, Raytown, Mo.; Patricia A. Thudium, Falls Church, Va., and Barbara A. Webb, Collingswood, N.J.

While some changes in academy curriculum, rules and facilities are being made to accommodate the women, most things will remain unchanged, including titles. Girls and boys alike will be called midshipmen, the academy has decided.

Bon Voyage

Employers in many nations are required by law to pay severence allowances to employes, The Conference Board reports. In Switzerland, workers who leave must justify their actions before they are granted severence pay. In other countries, employes who quit are eligible only if they have worked for a company for a given period of time: six months in Pakistan, two years in Egypt and, if over age 40, 15 years in Mexico. Severance allowances in the United States vary from state to state, industyr to industry, and even company to company.

Malibu asks for cityhood

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County supervisors have received petitions from Malibu residents seeking to make their exclusive beach community the county's 79th city.

Richard A. Schoeni, an aide to the supervisors, said he received petitions from about 2,750 Malibu voters Wednesday. He said they would be checked to see if the signatures amounted to the 25 per cent required for an election on the issue.

Voters rejected incorporation for Malibu in 1964 and another cityhood proposal was turned down in 1972 by the Local Agency Formation Commission.

The latest proposal would create a 25-square mile city running along the coast from the Ventura County line to the Los Angeles city limits.

Almanac

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1953, a new vaccine to immunize against polio was announced by Dr. Jonas Salk of the University of Pennsylvania.

On this date —

In 1793, the Holy Roman Empire declared war on France.

In 1804, the Louisiana Purchase was divided into the Territory of Orleans and the Territory of Louisiana.

In 1827, the composer Ludwig Van Beethoven died.

In 1913, more than 1,400 people perished in floods in Ohio, Indiana and Texas.

In 1918, Marshal Ferdinand Foch of France was named commander of Allied armies in World War I.

Ten years ago: Thousands of demonstrators against the war in Vietnam paraded down New York's Fifth Avenue.

Five years ago: Civil war appeared near in Pakistan as the government outlawed an organization that demanded independence for East Pakistan.

One year ago: The U.S. Interstate Commerce Commission reversed an earlier stand and granted a seven per cent freight rate increase to most of the nation's railroads.

Today's birthdays: General Willliam Westmoreland is 62. Playwright Tennessee Williams also is 62. Actor Alan Arkin is 42.

Thought for today: Love's like the measles — all the worse when it comes late in life — Douglas Jerrold, English writer, 1803-1857.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, American soldiers under Benedict Arnold were erecting batteries on the Plains of Abraham outside Quebec and building ladders to storm the Canadian city.

Sentence doubled at con's request over job program

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An inmate who says he's finally found a prison with a good job training program has been granted a request to have his sentence doubled.

U.S. District Court Judge Willis Ritter of Salt Lake City granted the request by David Royce Clark, 31, to lengthen the sentence.

Ritter earlier sentenced Clark to 18 months in federal prison, minus five months spent in the Salt Lake County Jail. Clark decided after his transfer to federal prison he wanted to complete the job training program offered there and asked that his term be extended.

Ritter agreed to sentence Clark to three years minus the five months already served.

It wasn't known what kind of program Clark is taking.

Auto race fans ready for Sunday

Auto racing addicts get a chance Sunday to see one of the two biggest events on the motor sports calender.

One is the first Long Beach Grand Prix. The other is the seventh annual running of the California 500 at Ontario Motor Speedway Sept. 5 (also a Sunday)

Backers of the Sunday's Long Beach race hope to turn it into an annual event. Whether or not they will depends on two things.

First, the race will at least have to break even as far as money is concerned. Secondly, there will probably be a review by the city itself of how many complaints arise from sealing off the downtown area so that the race (on city streets) can be run.

Money, as in almost everything, could be a major problem. The sponsoring Long Beach Grand Prix Association has a $1.2 million "nut" to crack.

That means at least that much must be taken in if expenses are to be met. The Formula 5000 race last Sept. had a total of $607,593 worth of tickets sold.

But the race still ended up losing $305,000 which Sunday's race has to makeup for. Long Beach City Auditor Ted Courson says there will have to be $1½ million worth of tickets sold for Sunday's race in order to "stay afloat."

When last sighted, representatives of the LBGP appeared confident they would meet or exceed the obligations.

They certainly have a fine weekend of events scheduled in connection with Sunday's big race.

Big day Saturday

Saturday's schedule calls for qualifying at 10 a.m., a 10,000 meter foot race at 11:40 a.m., an Olympic Trials bicycle race at 12:30 p.m., more qualifying at 2 p.m. followed by practice for a celebrity match race.

Big event of the day Saturday, besides practice of the Formula One drivers and cars is the Historic Formula One Car Exhibition Race slated for 3:15 p.m.

In that one, racing greats of former years such as Stirling Moss, Jackie Stewart, Phil Hill, Dan Gurney, Carroll Shelby and Juan Manuel Fangio (to name a few) will drive.

Niki Lauda and Emerson Fittipaldi, two of Sunday's entrants, will serve as Grand Marshals.

Fangio, perhaps the greatest of them all, will drive the silver Mercedes-Benz he drove 21 years ago. Fangio won five Formula one world championships, four in a row, in three different makes of car, Mercedes, Ferrari and Maserati.

He hadn't driven the Mercedes in 21 years prior to a special "testing" run arranged this Tuesday at OMS. A number of foreign and U.S. writers and broadcasters were on hand to witness the historic run.

The Mercedes had been taken from the factory's museum, overhauled and flown to America. Both the car and driver looked in top condition. In fact, when asked how he keeps in shape, the 64-year-old Fangio smiled and gave this answer through his interpreter.

"This machine (tapping his chest) has a lot of miles on it. I do what the ancient auto collectors do. I keep restoring the machine."

After slipping on his helmet and goggles, Fangio took the old Mercedes out and did a few laps around the track. A bigger thrill awaited the writer.

A ride with Fangio

Several Mercedes production-line cars were on hand and company officials announced that members of the press desiring a ride around the track would be accomodated.

Fangio would drive one of the cars.

The writer saw which car Fangio was in and sprang inside. Bob Russo, OMS publicist, had already begun a circuit of the track in another production car and had disappeared around the first turn when Fangio started.

As the writer had hoped, Fangio was not out to cruise, he drove the track. Downshifting then accelerating in the turns, Fangio caught and passed Russo in the back straight.

Fangio completed the circuit, changed passenger loads and was starting out again when Russo entered pit road at the beginning of the main straightaway.

For the writer, the ride with Fangio produced the biggest thrill of the day. For the five-time champion himself, the day's great moment came when he climbed behind the wheel of the big silver racer and roared onto the track.

"It was like a beautiful memory come to life," he related. "It is to bad one cannot go back (in time) to stay as long as one would like."

Fangio, Hill, Gurney and the others will be spectaters Sunday.

There will be a pre-race parade and motorcycle race prior to the running of the main event at 1:15 p.m.

Is the UCLA mystique gone?

A powerhouse team that played the favorite's role for as long as anyone can remember, UCLA is in the unfamiliar position of underdog as the NCAA prepared to hold its championship semifinal doubleheader Saturday at the Spectrum.

Indiana, which routed UCLA 84-64 in the first game of the season last November, is a six to eight-point choice to beat the Bruins again after Rutgers plays Michigan in the opener.

"Opening games are often not a reliable yardstick for comparison," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, uncertain that his Big Ten brutes should be rated that much better than the defending national champions. "UCLA has improved greatly over the season."

It must be pointed out that Indiana has also improved. The Hoosiers, in fact, appear to be peaking with a 30-0 record that includes victories over St. John's, Alabama and Marquette in the regional playoffs.

"The availability of Scott May makes us a stronger club at this point than a year ago," said Knight referring to the fact that the All-American forward was virtually useless in last year's playoffs with an injured left arm.

The Bruins, winners of 10 national championships under John Wooden, started this season under new coach Gene Bartow in atypical fashion. After that embarrassing loss to Indiana on national television, they continued to fumble and feel their way while adjusting to the traditional program.

"Our players were still learning about a new coach," says Bartow. "We ran a lot of people in and out."

The once-mighty Bruins were even beaten on their home court—something that hadn't happened for 98 games at Pauley Pavilion. Bartow got hate mail, obscene phone calls and there was talk of a mutiny. He admits it wasn't easy following a man of Wooden's stature.

"I wouldn't recommend it for young coaches, a steady diet of following John Wooden," says Bartow. "But seriously, I'm happy to be in the final four. I think things have gone as well as expected when you follow a living legend."

Bartow agrees that perhaps his Bruins should be cast in the role of underdog but predicts a closer game than the odds-makers have determined.

"They haven't talked to Dave Greenwood, our center," said Bartow. "I don't know that the oddsmakers are always right. We can't worry about those things. We've got to worry about execution. We've got to worry about good shot selection.

"No doubt I feel Indiana has a fine, fine basketball team. Bobby Knight has done a tremendous job, losing only one game in two years and that was when Scott May was injured. But since our game in St. Louis, we are stabilized and I feel it will be a better, closer game...two great teams going at each other."

Before the Hoosiers and Bruins go after each other in front of some 15,000 fans at the Spectrum and millions more on national television, Rutgers and Michigan will match strikingly similar fast-breaking styles.

"I think it's going to be a very exciting game," said Michigan Coach Johnny Orr. "People tell me we're two of the fastest teams in the country and if we both play well, it should be a very, very exciting game."

Tom Young, the Rutgers coach, echoed Orr's sentiments.

"I don't think we'll change our game plan at all and I'm sure Michigan won't," he said. "Our game should just be a high-scoring contest, and we just feel it's going to be a great basketball game."

Young was not overly concerned over relatively poor performances of his All-American forward, Phil Sellers, in the regional playoffs.

"Sellers had two poor shooting nights, that's true," said Young, "but he rarely has a poor game. He does so much for us besides scoring. The last game he was six for nine from the field. That shows a bit of class that he took nine shots when he usually takes 15 or 16.

"We're not worried. He's been too good a shooter over 31 games. He's our money player and he'll be our money player on Saturday."

Rutgers, with a 31-0 record, and Indiana are the only major college unbeaten teams in the country. UCLA has a 26-4 record going into Saturday's semifinals and Michigan is 24-6.

The winners will play for the national championship Monday night.

Ickx, Jones enter LB race

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jacky Ickx of Belgium and Australia's Alan Jones were late additions to the lineup of drivers entered in Sunday's historic, inaugural United States Grand Prix West—the race even the optimists predicted would never happen.

Ickx and Jones, two drivers who did well in last weekend's non-points Formula I race at Brands Hatch, England, swelled the list of cars to which drivers had been assigned to 26 for the $265,000 event.

Jones, a newcomer who gained considerable praise for leading the Race of Champions before eventually finishing second behind Britain's James Hunt, was named to the No. 19 Cosworth Ford-powered Surtees TS19, a team car with Brett Lunger of Wilmington, Del.

Ickx, a Grand Prix veteran who went into semi-retirement last season to await development of a more competitive car, replaced Austrian Harald Ertl in the No. 20 Williams-Cosworth.

Rumors that had circulated up until early this week that the race would not be held due to financial problems were completely denied by race organizer Chris Pook, who said, "The event is costing a total of $515,000 which includes the purse and $250,000 for transportation and expenses of the Formula I teams.

"That money has been guaranteed and the race will go on as scheduled." Pook also said advance ticket sales had exceeded $500,000 a week ago.

Between 100,000 and 150,000 persons are expected for Sunday's race, third of the Grand Prix circuit this season. Some 96,000 seats have been erected along the scenic beachside and city street course.

Activity Thursday around the 2.02-mile circuit of the usually placid city centered around sealing off the route to regular traffic in anticipation of the start of practice Friday.

Only five hours of practice were scheduled to prepare for the 200-mile race. Most drivers have never seen, much less piloted a race car over, the testing layout.

The few who have, including Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Penn., Jody Scheckter of South Africa, Chris Amon of New Zealand, and Welshman Tom Price, are considered to have a slight edge.

They were all in last September's dress-rehearsal race here with Formula 5000 cars. The winner of that race, Brian Redman of England, chose not to run the volatile Formula I cars for safety reasons.

"I was burned in Formula I once before and I have no desire to return. I'm happy doing Formula 5000 and other forms of racing of my choice," Redman said recently in scotching any rumors that he might file a suprise entry.

The driver who seemed to best master the course last year before mechanical problems struck was promising Britisher Tony Brise, who died with Graham Hill in a light plane crash in January.

Andretti, who had the fastest qualifying time and led the race early last fall, describes the course as "very demanding, with several types of road surface—asphalt, concrete, and so forth—and very difficult to adjust to."

Andretti, a confirmed street racer who loves the Monaco layout which spawned the Long Beach idea, added, "For that reason, and the atmosphere, I like it a lot."

The Formula I machine, bulkier but more powerful than the cat-quick Formula 5000 cars, are aiming for Brise's track record of 91.008 miles per hour.

Ohio State picks Miller

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Eldon Miller, who led Western Michigan out of the basketball doldrums in the last six years, was assigned the task today of rebuilding Ohio State's basketball fortunes, which have hit a record low.

Miller, 36, introduced at a news conference today, takes over as head coach of the Buckeyes, who finished last in the Big Ten after losing a school record of 20 games this winter.

Miller succeeds Fred Taylor, 51, dean of the Big Ten basketball coaches who resigned after finishing his 18th year with the Buckeyes.

Miller flew into Columbus on Wednesday to consider the job. He met with the university president later in the day and accepted the offer Thursday morning, a member of the athletic department said.

Sutton, Bryant look impressive

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The senior member of the Dodgers pitching staff, Don Sutton, and newcomer Ron Bryant turned in impressive performances in their spring debuts.

Sutton gave up just two hits in six innings, and Bryant allowed but two hits in the final three innings as Los Angeles blanked Philadelphia 7-0 in Vero Beach, Fla. Thursday.

Bryant, battling for the spot in the Dodger rotation vacated by Andy Messersmith, said, "I have to be encouraged after what I did today. I felt really good out there."

Bryant, a 24-game winner for San Francisco in 1973, was signed as a free agent by Los Angeles this spring.

He injured his back in a swimming pool accident after his impressive 1973 season, was 3-15 with the Giants the next year and 0-1 last year with St. Louis.

Dodger Manager Walter Alston expected to take a look at Tommy John, another pitcher trying a comeback after an injury, who was scheduled to pitch against the New York Mets this afternoon.

Relief pitcher Mike Marshall reported to the Dodgers' camp Thursday, one week after spring training opened, and immediately began working out. He is expected to pitch in exhibitions Saturday and Sunday and then return home to East Lansing, Mich., to continue his running feud with Michigan State University officials.

Marshall has a court date Wednesday, facing misdemeanor charges over use of a recreational facility at the school.

In Thursday's Dodger victory, Dave Lopes and Ivan de Jesus provided the firepower. Lopes homered and doubled in driving in three runs, and de Jesus also hit a homer as Los Angeles won its second exhibition contest.

Angels lefty pitches well

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — It had been some time since California's Andy Hassler had been pleased with his pitching, as he lost his last 11 decisions in 1975.

Thursday, after Hassler pitched three scoreless innings and notched a 4-1 victory over Oakland in Mesa, Ariz., he said, "It felt great."

It was perhaps the first time since last April — that's when he last won a game — Hassler had been able to say that.

"I can't remember when I pitched that well," the Angel southpaw said. "That did a lot for my confidence. I lost it about halfway through last year."

Hassler's good outing was another positive sign for Angels Manager Dick Williams.

"I've seen six pitchers so far," Williams said, "and I have no complaints at all."

The Angel staff has allowed only two runs in the club's two Cactus League contests.

California was scheduled to host Cleveland today, with Gary Ross, Dick Lange, and Baylor Moore sharing the Angel pitching chores.

In Thursday's game, Ed Herrman drove in two runs to spark the California victory.

Shaw crowned freestyle king

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Tim Shaw was crowned the new 500-yard freestyle king, dethroning John Naber, and the University of Southern California took some giant strokes toward its third consecutive team title at the 53rd NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships at Brown University Thursday night.

Joe Bottom of Southern California won the 50-yard freestyle in near American record time and Lee Engstrand of Tennessee took the 200-yard individual medley to join Shaw as the night's individual swimming champions.

Shaw swam a classic race against two-time defending champion Naber, of Southern California. Neither swimmer had ever been beaten in championship competition at 500 yards. But Shaw, the freshman freestyle sensation from Long Beach State, outswam Naber in the final 250 yards to win by nearly a body length.

Shaw, the 1975 Sullivan Award winner as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete, improved Naber's previous American record of 4:20.45 by clocking 4:19.05. Naber also was under his old mark in 4:19.71.

At the completion of the race, Naber embraced Shaw and held the new champion's arms aloft as a packed audience of more than 1,300 cheered wildly. The defeat ended Naber's string of consecutive NCAA titles at six.

As a freshman and as a sophomore, Naber had won gold medals in the 500-yard freestyle and the 100 and 200-yard backstroke events.

He is heavily favored to repeat as champion in both backstrokes this year. No swimmer can compete in more than three individual events in any meet.

Three titles here would have tied Naber with Jack Medica of Washington and Roy Saari of Southern California who each won nine NCAA titles. Naber still has one year of eligibility remaining.

Hacienda cagers earn CIF honors

Alta Loma High's Anthony Vasquez and Jamie Eagle and Bonita's Steve Sly have been named to the CIF 2-A basketball team by the Citizens Savings Athletic Board.

Vasquez, a 6-foot-2 senior, earned a second-team berth while Eagle, a 6-0 guard, and Sly, a 6-4 center, were selected for the third team.

John Greer, Elsinore's 6-6, 210-pound senior center, was a unanimous choice for 2-A Player of the Year.

Greer, a three-time All-CIF selection, recorded the highest scoring average in the state — 34.6 points for 25 games. He scored 54 points in one game and more than 40 on 12 occasions.

The big center averaged 17.8 rebounds as Elsinore notched a 21-4 record.

Poly girl wins race at Los Al

LOS ALAMITOS — Girl students Carol Brennan of Cal Poly Pomona and Julie Morgan of USC swept California's first collegiate harness race in history Thursday night at Los Alamitos when they finished one-two in the mile exhibition race.

Brennan, a liberal studies major, trained under Los Alamitos driver-trainer Gerry Lono and learned her lessons well as she took the lead from the start, withstood Morgan's bid around the first turn, opened a comfortable margin and drew away to an impressive five-length victory.

Carol, an Arcadia High School graduate who is working with the Arabian Horse program on the Cal Poly campus, sent her horse, Dandy Bronco, through a 30 3/5 quarter, 1.03 1/5 half, 1.36 three-quarters and a 2.11 final clocking.

The winner, who earlier in the week had defeated fellow student Jeff T

Morgan, a resident of Honolulu, Hawaii, maintained her second-place standing throughout the mile race although she was losing ground near the finish but still managed to hold off UC Irvine's Harry Osbon for the place. Dave Ferrell of Cal State Fullerton was fourth. Each of the first four students received scholarships for both themselves and the schools.

In the consolation race at Los Alamitos, another girl managed a victory as UC Irvine's Clara Gontero closed with a rush to nose out early leader Jeff Tracy from Cal Poly in 2.14 4/5.

Mounties win, 6-2; gain share of first

The Mt. San Antonio College baseball squad gained a share of first place in the South Coast Conference standings Thursday by beating Santa Ana 6-2.

That win, coupled with Grossmont's surprising 8-1 victory over Cerritos, leaves MSAC, Grossmont and Cerritos all tied for first with 4-2 records.

The Mounties, in notching their fourth straight SCC win, received an outstanding pitching job by southpaw Ron Roenicke. Roenicke limited the potent Santa Ana attack to six hits, as he fanned 11 Dons.

Brian Menasco led the MSAC offense with a home run and two singles, and added three stolen bases to his afternoon's work.

Santa Ana catcher Steve Till tied the game at 1-1 with a solo homer in the second, but visiting MSAC erupted for four runs in the top of the third for the margin of victory.

In that inning, Menasco led off with a single off S.A. hurlder Dennis Burtt. Orv Neconie followed with a bunt single, but Burtt bore down to get the next two Mountie batters.

However, Danny Gans walked to load the sacks and Burtt hit Forrest Brown with a pitch, forcing in Menasco. A walk to Larry Marsh followed, forcing home another MSAC tally, before Val Primante capped the rally with a two-run single.

Menasco's solo homer in the fourth pushed the Mountie advantage to 6-1, and Roenicke weathered S.A. threats in the eighth and ninth to register the win.

MSAC is now 12-5-1 on the year, while the Dons fall to a 3-3 SCC and 15-6 overall ledger.

The local entires in the Mission Conference did not fare as well Thursday. Citrus was upset by Saddleback by a 10-5 score while San Bernardino edged Chaffey 5-4 in 12 innings.

Saddleback jumped off to a quick 6-0 lead off of Owl starter Hank Ritchey and held off Citrus to post the win. The loss was the Owls' first in seven league outings, while the Locals now stand at 14-4 for the year.

SBVC used a Chaffey error and Fred Smith's double in the last of the 12th to win a see-saw contest. Larry Jones' two-run single had put the Panthers ahead 4-3 in the eighth but SBVC battled back to tie the game and send it into extra frames. Virgil Moore, who worked the distance, suffered the loss on the hill.

Howard Garcia led the Panthers attack with three hits, while Larry Whitmer had three hits, including a two-run homer, for the Indians. Chaffey is now 3-4 in Mission outings and 9-10 on the year.

All three local JCs continue league play Saturday. Citrus will host San Diego City College at 1 p.m., Chaffey entertains Grossmont at 1 p.m. and (in a key SCC tilt) Grossmont will be at MSAC for a 12 noon start.

Stanford, ASU play

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Undefeated Stanford and hard-hitting Arizona State meet tonight in what could be a preview of the championship in the Riverside collegiate baseball tournament.

Arizona State pounded Delaware 13-5 Thursday afternoon and blasted UC Riverside 13-2 in a night game.

Clay Westlake led the Sun Devils with a homer against Delaware and drove in three runs with a pair of doubles against Riverside.

The Sun Devils and Stanford's Cardinals now have identical 5-0 records.

Stanford downed Oregon State 8-6 Thursday led by Tom Guardino's solo homer and another run batted in.

In other action Thursday, Eastern Michigan, still alive in the bracket with Arizona State with a 3-2 mark, downed Delaware 11-5, and Geoff Doyle singled in the winning run as Oregon State got by Riverside 3-2 in 14 innings.

'Pack girls beat Chino

Claremont High's girls track team defeated visiting Chino Thursday afternoon, 58-33, in the first league meet for both squads.

Staci Johnson of Claremont equaled her own school record to win the 100-yard run in 11.4 seconds and won the 440 in 62.2. Teammate Cherry Henry set a school record of 2:34.0 in the 880 and Kathy Orozko shattered a school mark with a shot put of 34 feet, 3¾ inches. Four contestants — two from each school — went over 30 feet in the shot.

Chino's Pam Hofstra recorded double wins in the 220 (28.0) and 880 (2:32.3) while teammate Lynn Hawkins won the high jump at 5-4.

Tarkanian plans camp at La Verne

Jerry Tarkanian will be teaching his basketball magic at La Verne College this summer when he conducts a pair of one-week camps at the Supertent beginning August 1 and 8.

Boys, ages 9 through 17, are welcome to attend. Because of a limit of 100 campers per session, it would be wise to make plans now.

A week's tuition, which includes room and board at La Verne, costs $175. To apply, send a deposit of $75 to: Choice Sports Camps, P.O. Box 36006, Los Angeles, CA. 90036. Additional information is available by telephoning (213) 939-7092.

Tarkanian, who led Nevada Las Vegas to a 29-2 season, is the winningest major college coach in the nation. In eight seasons at Long Beach State and Las Vegas, he has compiled a 195-33 record.

Prior to coaching at Long Beach, Tarkanian won four consecutive state JC titles at Riverside and Pasadena.

Eddings steals the SAL show

The field of unbeaten track teams in San Antonio League dual meets narrowed to two — Pomona High and Garey High — Thursday afternoon, but Ganesha's Floyd Eddings stole the show on an individual level.

The Giant junior won an incredible four events as Ganesha fell to defending champion Pomona, 72-46.

In an important meeting of previously undefeated squads at Upland, the Vikings knocked off the Highlanders, 68-50. Garey and Pomona, both 3-0, will meet in the final dual meet of the season five weeks from now.

Thursday's meets

Pomona at Claremont, 3:15 p.m.
Montclair at Garey, 3:15 p.m.
Ganesha at Damien, 3:15 p.m.
Upland at Chino, 3:15 p.m.

Eddings turned in the valley's best prep efforts to date in the 100 and 220, with times of 9.6 and 22.0 seconds. He also won the long jump at 22 feet, 7 inches, and the pole vault at 10 feet.

The 100 was particularly impressive at Ganesha, with Eddings followed by Pomona's Jim Donaldson (9.7) and Terry Andrews (9.8).

Barry Boettcher of the Devils won the 880, mile and two mile while Hank Zibell heaved the shot 58-7¾ for a victory.

Ganesha's Lloyd Jones won the 440 in 50.6 and the 330 low hurdles in 37.8, the valley's best time for that event and the second-best mark in the CIF. But Jones aggravated a sore left knee in the 440 and tripped and fell, injuring his right knee, in the 120 high hurdles.

Pomona's Ernest Jarnagin won the highs in 14.5. Only two CIF times, including Jones' 14.4, are better.

Garey's Webster turned in another area best with a 23-2 long jump, placing him third in the CIF. Teammate Morris Cole won the 100 (9.8), 220 (22.4) and 440 (50.1)

Upland's Roger Innes won the mile and tied for the victory in the two mile while Casey Cox won the 880.

Poly defeats Hawaii, 8-4

HONOLULU (AP)—Cal Poly Pomona erupted for four runs in the top of the seventh inning to defeat Hawaii 8-4 in the seven-inning opener of a scheduled doubleheader here Thursday night.

The Broncos, who upped their record to 14-13-1, got three hits and took advantage of one Rainbow error and two wild pitches for their four-run outburst.

The two teams meet in a doubleheader Friday night, weather permitting.

RECORD PERFORMANCE — Upland High's Howard Hyde steams toward a San Antonio League record in the 200-yard individual medley Thursday at the league swim finals.

Records fall in SAL finals

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Nine San Antonio League swim records fell Thursday afternoon at Upland High as Claremont won the varsity and overall titles in the league finals.

Junior Jim Moore of Claremont set two league standards and helped set another as did Upland junior Howard Hyde.

Moore won the varsity 200 freestyle in 1:48.4, shaving 1.2 seconds from the league record he set Tuesday in the prelims. He won the 500 frestyle in 4:55.3, better by 3.2 seconds than his record time at the prelims. Moore also teamed with Steve Smith, Jim Martin and Craig Hildebrand to set a league mark at 3:27.6 in the 400 freestyle relay. The old mark of 3:31.2 by Upland had stood since 1967.

Hyde won the 200 individual medley in 2:07.3 and the 100 backstroke in 59.4. The old records of 2:08.1 and 1:00.0 were set by Claremont's Craig Himmler in 1973. Hyde, along with David Oakes, Dallas Munroe and Doug DeYoung swam through the 200 medley relay in 1:45.1, two seconds better than Claremont's previous SAL mark of 1967.

The only other varsity record went to Montclair's Mike Harbottle, whose 51.1 in the 50 freestyle exactly matches the CIF qualifying time.

Maples, who broke the record Tuesday with a 1:04.0, went 1:02.8, while Mages, whose 1:11.5 in the prelims was a record, recorded a 1:12.5.

Oakes, an Upland junior who set the varsity 100 breaststroke record in 1:04.2 at the prelims, won the event Thursday in 1:04.7. However, Oakes finished second in the 100 butterfly to teammate Munroe, whose time of 57.9 qualified him for the CIF prelims.

This year's CIF prelims and championships will be held at East Los Angeles Community College. Diving prelims will be held Saturday with the swimming prelims for the 3-A division — of which the San Antonio League is a part — Monday.

The 4-A prelims will take place Tuesday with the swimming and diving championships for both divisions Wednesday. The 3-A events will get under way at 3 p.m. Saturday, Monday and Wednesday.

Participation in the CIF prelims and championships is based solely upon meeting time standards in any sanctioned meet.

Swimmers who met those standards for the first time this year Thursday included, besides Munroe in the 100 butterfly, Chino's Steve Monike in the varsity 200 freestyle, Upland's Jeff Anderson in the frosh-soph 100 fly and the Upland frosh-soph 200 medley relay team of Grey D'Antonio, Steve Siffert, Anderson and Jim Etchason.

Athletes who had met qualifying standards in the prelims or previously include Upland's Hyde (varsity individual medley, butterfly and backstroke), Oakes (breaststroke and backstroke), D'Antonio (frosh-soph backstroke) and Etchason and Siffert (f-s 200 freestyle); Claremont's Moore (varsity 200 and 500 freestyle) Smith (varsity 50 freestyle) and Jim Gaylord and Paul Beasom (varsity 100 backstroke); Montclair's Harbottle (varsity 50 and 100 freestyle), 200 individual medley and 100 breaststroke), Matt Tedder (100 breastroke) and Maples (f-s 100 butterfly); and Chino's Steve Moenicke (varsity 500 freestyle).

Varsity medley relay teams from Claremont, Montclair and Upland are eligible for CIF competition, as are Claremont's and Montclar's varsity freestyle relay squads and Upland's frosh-soph medley relay team.

Chuck Lovejoy, the SAL diving chamion, will go to the CIF prelims, and other league divers may be made eligible by petition.

Claremont's the league dual champion with a 4-0 SAL record and an 11-0-1 overall mark, won the varsity title Thursday with 361 points to Upland's 261 and the overall championship with 552 points to Upland's 533½. Upland won the frosh-soph competition 272½-191 over Claremont, with Montclair third in each category.

Stockton upset with Nastase

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The top four seeds have advanced to the quarter finals in the $200,000 Tennis Games, but Ilie Nastase has drawn the ire of yet another opponent with his courtside behavior.

Jimmy Connors, the top seed, breezed to a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Bob Lutz Thursday, and Arthur Ashe, seeded second, downed Cliff Richey 6-3, 6-4.

But Nastase, the fourth seed, had to struggle back from a first set loss to down Dick Stockton 3-6, 6-0, 7-6. During the second set, Nastase argued with officials frequently and upset Stockton.

Later Stockton said, "I was going to default. But then I thought, 'I'll hang in there and beat him.'

"Nastase should be suspended for several days, because fines don't seem to do any good," Stockton added. "He is no fun to play against and he does the same thing to all the players."

In later games, John Alexander, the defending champion of the tourney, and third-seeded Bjorn Borg took advantage of a dark sky and a slight wind with high lobs to advance.

Borg downed Stan Smith 7-6, 7-5, winning a 12-point tiebreaker in the first set and fighting off a 40-love score with Smith serving in the final game to win the second set.

Alexander, seeded ninth, has not won a tournament since last year's tourney in Tucson. "Certainly I would like to win this one to prove that it was no fluke," he said after a 6-2, 6-3 win over Raul Ramirez.

Brandon Boyd voted 'Hens MVP cager

Junior Forward Brandon Boyd was named Most Valuable Player when Pomona-Pitzer's basketball team held its annual awards dinner last week.

Boyd, who scored 305 points and averaged 13.9 points a game this season, is now fifth on the all-time Pomona-Pitzer scoring list. His 944 points in three years puts him only 344 behind all-time leader LaMotta Jackson.

Other awards made at the dinner were; Most Improved — Forward-Center, Bob Hoehn; Inspirational Award — Bob Davis; Captain's Award — Garry Stewart and Brandon Boyd; Rebounding Award — Ed McFadden; Defensive Award — Scott Pease and Carlos Guangorena; Assists Award — Brandon Boyd, Scott Pease (76 each);

Boyd and Pease were named captains for the 1976-77 season.

Tagging goes on at Lake Perris

What's all this nonsense about tagging fish and offering rewards for the tags? Does the Department of Fish and Game obtain any useful results from recovering tags, or is it just a public relations gimmick?

"Tagging is important because it enables us to obtain a wealth of information we could get no other way," says fishery biologist Ken Aasen, who, as chance would have it, is putting 120 tagged catfish into Lake Perris, Riverside County.

The tagged catfish, from the department's Imperial Warmwater Hatchery near the Salton Sea, are part of a load of 5,000 yearlings, weighing five to the pound.

"We're going to give $5 to each person who turns in a tag, also a life history of the fish and the department's popular Catfish Manual and Cookbook," Aasen said.

What does Aasen expect to learn?

"First, we'll be able to tell the rate of return. This gives us an idea of how many fish to put in the lake. If they are not coming back to the angler, why put them in? If they are coming back at a very low rate, is it because we are planting at the wrong time of year, or are we planting the wrong size?

"If, for example, we can obtain the same rate of return for fish planted in the fall as for those planted in the spring, then we can save money by not holding the fish for so long at the hatchery.

"Second, we should learn something about angler acceptance of this species. If no one is fishing for channel catfish, then why plant them? It's simple to learn this by sampling the reservoir periodically — say with an electroshocker. If we find plenty of catfish, yet receive few if any tags, then they are not being sought by the angler.

"On the other hand, if we don't find any catfish, we know there is trouble; perhaps the water might not be suitable for catfish.

Salmon landed at Dana Point

If a silver salmon caught in San Juan Creek near Dana Point in Orange County is any indication, at least some of the 100,000 salmon planted in the Southland by the Department of Fish and Game last year have found their new territory to their liking.

The salmon which was caught last week by Corky Crowell of Glendora weighed two-and-a-half pounds and measured 21 inches from nose to tail-tip. DFG biologist Parke "Bud" Young, in charge of the department's ocean sportfish planting program, says the fish almost certainly was one of a lot of 50,000 yearling silvers planted in the spring of 1975 in Calleguas Creek in Ventura County.

Although a similar plant of 50,000 silvers was made last spring in the Santa Margarita River near Oceanside in San Diego County, Young doubts that the salmon taken in San Juan Creek was from that plant.

"All of the Santa Margarita River fish were finclipped," he says, "while none of the Calleguas Creek fish were marked. Naturally-occuring salmon are such a rarity in Southland waters that we feel resonably sure this fish is one of the salmon stocked in Calleguas Creek," he added.

The salmon plants are part of a DFG project to determine if Southern California ocean sportfishing can be improved by stocking large numbers of year-old silver salmon in coastal streams.

After stocking, the salmon move downstream into the ocean where most of them will remain for two years before returning to the areas in which they were released. It's not unusual, however, for a few of these fish to return to a coastal stream after one year at sea, Young says.

Ask DFG to expand nongame projects

The Citizen Nongame Advisory Committee to the Department of Fish and Game has called on the DFG to expend at least half of its programs and resources on nongame species work.

To help finance work under the revised alignment, the committee suggests in its first report to DFG Director E. C. Fullerton that the department seek new sources of funding as well as larger allocations from the state's general fund.

As a special fund agency, the DFG receives virtually all of its support from hunting and fishing license fees, stamps and permits, commercial fishing taxes and its share of excise taxes on the sale of sporting arms and ammunition and fishing tackle.

For the past two years the DFG has obtained $1 million annually from the state's general fund for nongame work, and next year's proposed budget provides for considerably more to finance projects of this type.

The seven-member advisory committee was named early last year to review and evaluate ongoing nongame programs, recommend new and augmented projects and suggest means of financing programs.

In the ensuing year the committee, which is headed by Maxine McCloskey of Piedmont, has reviewed the DFG's nongame programs and developed a list of nongame program objectives. It is from the list of objectives that the proposed new emphasis is derived.

Efforts should be directed toward achieving self-sustaining populations of all native species, the committee says, with particular emphasis on endangered and rare species.

To help do this, the committee recommends clarification of protection and management authority, stepped-up law enforcement, systematic monitoring of populations and the establishment of reserves.

To better reflect the commitment to nongame programs, the name of the department should be changed to something along the lines of the Department of Wildlife Conservation or the Department of Fish and Wildlife, the committee report states.

Other committee proposals would have the DFG:

— Identify the natural ecosystems in the state with the aim of establishing reserves large enough to assure the continued existence of the ecosystems and their constituent wildlife species.

— Strengthen and give top priority to programs to return threatened species to self-perpetuating levels and to prevent the decline of other species to threatened status.

— Halt introductions of exotic animals except when it can be demonstrated the introductions would not harm native species or their habitat.

— Mount an aggressive program of public and intradepartmental education to help development of "an awarness of the importance and fragility of our natural ecosystems and a concern for all wildlife."

Director Fullerton will meet with the committee soon to discuss implementtation of the report's recommendations.

Copies of the report may be obtained from the DFG at 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento 95814.

Appointment of the nongame comittee was the most recent step in an accelerated DFG program to better manage the state's nongame fish and wildlife.

'On a fairy tale kick'

Danny Kaye stars in TV 'Pinocchio'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When he was in England to conduct the London Symphony Orchestra, a reporter asked Danny Kaye why didn't he make some more comedy films. His reply:

"Because movies are not like they used to be, times are not like they used to be, and most of all, I am not like I used to be."

For the same reason he rejected the notion of a return to the London Palladium, where his postwar appearances made him something of a national hero.

"Sure, I could probably go back there and do the same routines and get a fine reaction," he said. "But it wouldn't be the same. There was something about that era that made it just right, and I would never be able to recapture what happened 20-25 years ago. It would be walking backwards.

"Likewise I don't want to go to Las Vegas; I've done that. Another television series? Those four years I did on CBS were among the most enjoyable of my life. But I wouldn't want to repeat. Nowadays I just want to do the things I want to do."

Right now he is on a fairy tale kick. He recently taped a new version of "Peter Pan" in London, playing Captain Hook to Mia Farrow's Peter, with a score by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley. The special has appeared in England and will be seen here at Christmas on NBC.

Kaye has been taping "Pinocchio" in Hollywood, not the gospel according to Walt Disney but a new interpretation from the Colladi classic. Danny is Gepetto, Sandy Duncan is the boy-puppet with the expanding nose. Also in the cast: Flip Wilson, Clive Revill, Liz Torres. CBS will telecast the special at 8 p.m. Saturday.

"Who knows, this might start a series of fairy tales for me," Kaye speculated.

Baseball plays an important part in Kaye's future plans. He is part owner of an American League expansion team which will start playing in Seattle's new Kingdome in the spring of 1977. It's a natural adjunct to his ownership in radio stations in Seattle, Spokane and Portland and an outgrowth of his long-

'Sherlock Holmes'.

Shubert does Doyle drama

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

For anyone not familiar with A. Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, the Royal Shakespeare Company production of "Sherlock Holmes," which opened Thursday night at the Shubert Theater in Los Angeles, would be a source of rich laughter. To anyone familiar with the stories of the wizard of Baker Street, the show provides even richer laughter.

The Leonard (Spock) Nimoy-Alan Sues melodrama is low comedy in high style, loud, fast, silly and fun, a delightful spoof on Doyle's pontificality. The play was written by the turn-of-the-century American actor-author William Gillette — whether he designed it as an elegant lampoon or a serious piece for the stage, I do not know. But the English company has taken off on the high-flown histrionics with a deft, witty satire that tiptoes adroitly along the line between drama and burlesque.

Nimoy plays the great detective with the inscrutability of Star Trek, but there is a latent impishness and a carefully disciplined sense of nonsense in his characterization. His classic confrontation with the deadly Professor Moriarity (Sues) is a spritely duel of pistols and platitudes.

Much of the dialogue is word for word from Doyle — the plot is pure Gillette — but the Baker Street bravado comes out more like Gilbert and Sullivan in the present edition.

Sues, the hilarious ding-a-ling sportscaster of Laugh In, is a spectacular Moriarity, made up like Lon Chaney in "Phantom of the Opera," electrifying the stage with his wild-eyed, reptilian characterization of "the Napoleon of crime."

Ronald Bishop plays the uninteresting role of Dr. Watson uninterestingly, but the cast generally achieves a high level of skilled, integrated performance. Diana Kirkwood is a lovely spitfire as Alice Faulkner; Dalton Dearborn makes a suitably villainous James Larrabee, and Geoff Garland displays a wry talent for Cockney wit and characterization as the bowler-hatted safecracker, Sidney.

No choreographer is credited, so the plaudits must go to director Warren Enters who has devised such an unending stream of dramatic gestures, carefully timed rhythmic movements and stylized posturings that the final effect is purely balletic. Also hilarious.

Unplugging the rivers

New race against death in Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Foreign and local volunteers are battling to provide shelter for the homeless and to clear blocked rivers and streams before the rains arrive sometime in May.

The rivers are dammed by massive landslides and the collapse of mountainsides during the devastating earthquake of Feb. 4 that killed some 23,000 persons, injured 76,000 and left more than a million — one sixth of Guatemala's population — homeless.

Government officials fear Guatemala could suffer another major disaster — this time flooding — if the rivers are not unplugged before the rains come.

One of the most dangerous areas is on the Pensativo River, northwest of Guatemala City. It threatens to flood the one time capital of Antigua, some 30 miles from here. Antigua is now an important tourist site.

Government engineers have also located several dams on the Rio Madre Vieja, including one at a spot known as "Los Chocoyos," between Patzun and Godinez, where they estimate a million cubic meters of earth must be removed to free the river. There is another bad spot on the Rio Pixcaya near Chimaltenango.

U.S. Army engineers and Mexican construction crews are helping Guatemalans clear blocked highways. They estimate it will take three to six months to clear more than 100 massive landslides in a 35-mile stretch of the main highway leading east from Guatemala City to the key ports on the Caribbean Sea.

The government has estimated it would cost $35 million to reconstruct damaged highways and more than $1 billion for reconstruction throughout the country.

The National Geographic Institute has estimated the quake affected 15,544 square miles out of the national territory of 42,042 square miles. There is severe damage in 17 of the country's 22 states.

One of the most expensive projects is President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud's "Operation Rooftop," a pledge to provide shelter for every homeless family before the rains arrive.

It is estimated 500,000 sheets of corrugated metal roofing are needed. The idea is to replace the traditional heavy roof tiles which killed so many people when adobe houses collapsed.

The government has pledged to construct 44,000 provisional shelters in the capital and another 107,000 in the countryside.

The government is seeking loans from the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID), the International Development Bank, the International Reconstruction Bank and the World Bank. In addition, the government intends to issue $65 million in bonds through national banks.

International aid continues to flow into the country and is being distributed according to need as determined by army officials, the Guatemalan Red Cross, and private relief agencies.

There is no official estimate on the dollar value of the aid nor a breakdown by nation.

Every Western hemisphere nation has sent aid, with the United States and Mexico leading the donors.

European nations such as Belgium and West Germany have sent supplies and material has arrived from as far away as Japan, Pakistan and Israel.

U.S. AID officials in Washington reported the United States spent $3.5 million in Guatemala in the first month after the disaster, mainly for food, clothing, medical supplies, transportation and personnel.

The Ford administration has asked Congress to approve another $25 million in aid to the survivors, including $7.5 million for shelter.

Italians are helping reconstruct the town of San Juan Comalapa, the Spanish are in Zaragoza, the Norwegian Red Cross in Patzun and Mexican prefabricated houses are being erected in Tecpan.

Mexican machines and men are rebuilding the highway between Godinez and Patzun, while a U.S. Army engineer battalion is working on the route to the Atlantic.

The Guatemalan army and the municipal government of Guatemala City received $5.5 million in a grant from the National housing bank to clean the capital's streets and to restore services.

The job consists of removing 200 million cubic meters of debris and toppling 38,000 buildings damaged beyond repair.

The government estimated 20 per cent of the underground, 1,000-mile-long grid of sewers and waterlines was damaged in the quake and succeeding tremors there have been more than 1,300 of the tremors since the quake.

Most of the tremors, and the Feb. 4 earthquake, had epicenters about 50 miles northeast of Guatemala City.

People continue to live in the streets in Guatemala City in makeshift tents and in cars, afraid to spend the night in their quake-weakened homes.

Joyce Brothers

Allowed to work?

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I don't understand my wife. I'd give almost anything I can think if I could have the leisure time she enjoys to do exactly what she wants. Instead of being pleased about this, she wants to get a job. We don't need the money. We both have everything we need. I think the idea is ridiculous. Last month, I found out that she'd gone against my wishes and had been interviewed for a position with a friend of mine. I'm angry and embarrassed. — S.P.

Dear S.P.: Before you examine your wife's feelings you should look into your own. Why, for instance, should it be so important to you whether or not your wife works? I gather from your letter that you have no small children who need special attention. And you indicate money is not a factor so you could afford to hire help, if necessary, to take care of household chores.

Your attitudes about your wife's working must have someting to do with your personality. You must feel that if she works she will be taking something away from you. You may unconsciously think she could be more successful than you and thus a threat to your feelings of self-worth and security. Perhaps you're worried that other men might misinterpret her taking any job and see this as an indication that you are failing to provide properly, or that she is in some way displeased with you as a man. Most men who have strong feelings about their wives' staying out of the employment field are insecure in their own roles and have a weak self-image.

On the other hand, your wife may also feel a bit shaky about her worth as an individual and may wish work to prove to herself and to you that she has something of value to offer the world. The true value of a person comes from within and has nothing to do with his job or salary. We live, however, in a world that too often equates value with dollars and cents, so it is not surprising if both you and your wife are using a job as a means of defining yourselves and building up your egos.

The person who values himself only through his work is in trouble because the time is bound to come when the work must stop. The individual who has a self-esteem that does not rest solely on his occupation is going to be able to adjust better to enforced or voluntary retirement.

There is no doubt, however, that almost everyone needs approval and perhaps your wife feels she would get a sense of accomplishment if she took a job. Everyone should be allowed this freedom. You might profit a great deal if your wife goes out into that cold business world that you know. She might have more understanding of you and of what you go through daily. Working might seem less romantic and she might come to appreciate leisure, as you indicate you do, if she didn't have so much of it. Too much leisure like anything else can be a bore, not a luxury.

I suggest you play it cool and be glad that your wife is an independent spirit. Your marriage may be much more rewarding if she is allowed to fulfill herself and to pursue some interests outside of the confines of your house.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER
Q. "HOW IS MAPLE SYRUP MADE?"
TERESA CRANDALL PHOENIX, AZ
A. MAPLE SYRUP IS MADE FROM THE SWEET SAP THAT COMES FROM THE SUGAR MAPLE TREE. THE WATERY SAP IS BOILED UNTIL IT BECOMES A THICK MAPLE SYRUP.
DICK ROGERS
3/26

Maple syrup is made from the sap that comes from the sugar maple tree.

In early spring, when the sap flows best, the maple farmer bores a small hole into the trunk of each sugar maple. Then he puts a spout into each hole and hangs a pail from the spout to collect the watery sap.

The sap is only faintly sweet as it drips from the tree. It must be carefully boiled before it becomes maple syrup.

Each day, the maple farmer collects the sap and takes it to the sugar house. Here, the sap is boiled until most of the water is boiled away, leaving a thick maple syrup. Boiling the sap also gives the syrup its delicious maple flavor and golden color. If the syrup is boiled longer, it forms maple sugar.

Each tree produces about 10 gallons of sap, which makes about a quart of syrup or about two pounds of sugar.

Vermont, New York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania are four states famous for their maple sugar and syrup.

A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

A Message To CLASSIFIED AD USERS

You are about to invest money for an Ad and you are entitled to get results. To accomplish this, it is necessary for you TO TELL ALL about the details of your offer. Be sure you don't make any of the following errors that prevent results.

Readers can't guess on important details. Remember, a well written informative ad will get results faster and cost less in the long run.

1. Don't Omit The Address

Many out-of-town readers will write you but will not spend money for a long distance call.

2. Don't Omit The Phone Number

Many readers will call you but do not find it convenient to come to your home.

3. Don't Use Blind Box Numbers

They are difficult to answer and many people are suspicious of them.

4. Don't Conceal The Price

5. Don't leave Home On The Days You Advertise

Many good prospects will not call the second time if your phone is unanswered.

6. Don't Forget, Check Your Ad The First Day It Runs. Call Us!

YESTERDAY AND TODAY — The colonial craftsman (top) had his musket at his side for protection from frontier dangers, while the modern handyman needs safety goggles to protect him from possible eye injury when using striking and struck tools.

America founded on 'do-it-yourself'

Our forefathers called it "old fashioned self-reliance;" today we call it "do-it-yourself."

Whatever its name, an increasing number of modern day Americans, forced by mounting inflation, rising repair costs and tightening energy supplies, are returning to the values of early Americans who did just about everything themselves for their homes and families.

The spirit of independence on which our nation was founded was sparked by the self-sufficient householder of that day who not only could perform each job but intimately knew each tool required for the task.

It was the practice for most of this country's early settlers to make their own tools, inscribe them with the family name and proudly hand them down from generation to generation. These hand-fashioned tools were such an intimate part of the early craftsman's daily life that many were given familiar first names.

Most of the tools of that day were used to work with wood — axes, adzes, chisels and mallets were among the most common. The use of iron nails (squared) and hammers was not as popular because of the penchant of early settlers to use wooden nails or pegs.

Today's self-reliant handyman with a wider range of materials to work with also has a broader variety of hand tools to help him perform his various household tasks. To help him do these jobs better and safer here are some safety guidelines for the use of both striking and struck tools.

First — wear safety goggles while hammering. This is especially important for such jobs as pounding nails into concrete, chipping masonry, splitting bricks and striking chisels.

Next — select the right tool for the job. For example, a nail hammer is to be used for common unhardened nails only. It should never be used for hammering hardened concrete or masonry nails, striking chisels, star drills or other metal products.

Keep striking and struck tools in top condition.

Design your own workshops for many uses

Do-it-yourselfers will be digging into more home gardening projects this spring than ever before. For green thumbing or outdoor living in general, a redwood garden shelter can make a graceful and practical multipurpose outdoor room in your backyard.

This year you can design and build your own shelter with garden grades of redwood for much less than you think. These knot and sapwood-containing grades — Construction Heart, Construction Common, and Merchantable — have the weatherability and stability of more expensive clear grades, with a rustic texture ideal for a garden shelter.

GARDEN SHELTER — A redwood garden shelter, built with economical garden grades of redwood, makes an attractive outdoor party room that can serve many practical uses. A serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface. Shelves, cabinets, and cupboards for folding lawn chairs, bench cushions, and garden party knickknacks can also store long-handled garden tools, power tools, a lawnmower, garbage cans, and hoses. The lattice-grill roof can be left open or covered with fiberglass, matting or canvas, depending on the climate.

whatever you want it to. It can be a practical potting and planting center as well as an outdoor party room or secluded retreat.

You can build shelves, cabinets, and cupboards for folding lawn chairs, bench cushions, and garden party knick-knacks. These spaces can also store long-handled garden tools, power tools, a lawn-mower, garbage cans, and hoses. A serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface.

As extra storage space or a poolside service room, a shelter can frame a view or screen out too-close neighbors, show off favorite plants, or give a garden a new focus. Some garden layouts suggest other redwood structures, for example, a trellis or colonnade that can be used as a shaded walkway or entry.

DESIGN A REDWOOD SHELTER

Depending on your skill and needs, you can build a redwood garden shelter with simple post and beam construction, or design a more complicated structure. You should also think about where to put your shelter. Do you want to use it to catch or escape from the sun — and wind — or let in some sunlight for potted plants?

Different roof materials can control light and blend uniquely with your garden. Shingles, shakes, reed fencing, bamboo, window screening, lath, louvers, canvas, glass, or plastic can be simply nailed on. Perhaps you want removable roof members attached to a framework fastened to the rafters in sections, or eggcrate blocking covered with canvas or matting.

Where do you want water outlets, or electrical outlets for lanterns and power tools? Cabinets can be designed especially for long-handled tools, or with shelves for small tools. You can plan to store your lawn-mower in a ground-level cupboard that lets you roll it straight in.

Your gardening counter can be high enough to fit garbage cans underneath. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels to enclose your workshop can be locked.

REDWOOD SHELTER MATERIALS

Decay and insect resistant Construction Heart grade redwood is recommended for posts, retaining walls, planters, steps, greenhouse framing, and shelves subject to periodic moisture, on, in, or within six inches of the ground.

Less known but most economical for decking, fence boards, trellises, and benches above ground are Construction Common and Merchantable grades. These contain knots (as does Construction Heart) and cream-colored flashes of sapwood that blend naturally with a garden, but should not be used in actual ground contact.

In building a redwood garden shelter, you'll find that aluminum alloy nails and non-corrosive fastenings far outlast plain iron, steel, or cement-coated nails in outdoor use. Nails galvanized by other than the hot-dip process deteriorate, leaving black marks on the wood, and lose holding power.

FINISHING TOUCHES ON REDWOOD

Redwood's pink to cinnamon brown colors blend and weather without finishes to a bleached gray. However, redwood also holds finishes and paint better than most woods, eliminating many maintenance problems.

Redwood has low density, high dimensional stability, and high resistance to checking. Available in smooth-planed or rough resawn textures, its long straight grain and long board lengths make it easy to work with and it contains no pitch.

If you want your shelter to match the color of your house, you can add lightly pigmented stains that preserve the grain and texture. Bleaching oil provides an instant driftwood gray effect.

If a natural redwood color tone is your preference, an easy-to-apply clear water repellent solution will protect from dirt and stabilize redwood color to a buckskin tan. Recommended for application to lumber before use, it can be followed with a second coat after construction, with reapplication every two to three years. Varnishes or film finishes that can't stand weathering outdoors are not recommended for garden shelters or any outdoor uses of redwood.

Succulents, Cacti easy to care for

When it comes to gardening, if you have a purple thumb instead of a green one, you may find cacti and succulents your answer to growing plants easily.

They're easy for children to grow and for those with little time or patience to care for plants. And they thrive under what are normally adverse conditions — dry, overheated apartments, for instance. Requirements are few — sunlight, low humidity, infrequent watering and sandy soil.

When a succulent and when a catus? Actually all cacti are succulents, but not all succulents are cacti. The cactus plant family is only one variety of numerous succulents. All have the special capacity, though, to store water in stems or leaves. And that means you can leave these plants unwatered for as long as a month and they will probably be thankful for the "neglect."

Cacti and other succulents offer a multitude of intriguing sizes, shapes and textures. You might plant several in one container for an instant garden in a pot. And several pots planted with cacti and succulents make a beautiful desert-like scene.

Holes in the planters and removable saucers prevent overwatering and insure proper drainage, which is essential to all succulents. And speaking of watering, a simple rule of thumb is to water them well when they are growing (April to October), but otherwise not at all unless they begin to shrivel. Do let the soil dry out completely between waterings, however.

To rot-proof wooden containers paint them with copper napthenate, which won't hurt plants or make vegetables inedible. DO NOT use creosote or other toxic wood preservatives, especially the chemical called "Penta" or pentachlorophenol.

Mulches insulate the soil from the sun's warming rays, making spring frost hazards a greater risk. Wait until late spring to apply mulches in the vegetable garden, when they will do the most good to keep soil temperatures down and reduce water loss.

Flower buds formed under sunny conditions will bloom successfully after moving the plant into the shade. This means annuals normally grown under full sun can provide portable color throughout the summer. Bring the plants back into bloom by setting them in the sun again.

The vegetable gardener whose garden plot doesn't receive a full day of sun, can successfully grow vegetables grown for their leaves and roots such as carrots, chives, lettuce, mustard greens and beets.

Remember to sow vegetables like lettuce, radishes and corn in successive planting to lengthen your harvest time.

When planting a tree, especially bare root specimens, make sure the tree needs a stake before you go ahead and provide artificial support. Thin out the branch structure so that when the tree leafs out it won't catch the wind like the sail of a boat.

Succulents, Cacti...

To make your cactus garden, begin with the right potting medium — a combination of perlite, peat moss, and coarse sand or vermiculite works well. A teaspoon of bone meal will help plants flourish.

Place the potting medium directly into the planter and arrange your selection of cacti and succulents. A variety of shapes, textures and sizes makes the most attractive garden. Choose the familiar ball cactus (Echinocactus), Phyllocactus with its leaf-like stalks, and the succulent Mexican firecracker (Echeveria setosa) with its brilliant flowers. A Burro's tail (Sedum morganianun) with its trailing chains of silvery, blue-green leaves makes a contrast to the prickly and spiny varieties in a cactus garden.

Another indoor variety, which is small and grows quickly, is commonly called the peanut cactus (Chamaecereus selvestrii) beçause it grows in a cylindrical manner about the size of a peanut.

The aloe plant is a succulent that's often called the medicine plant, and many claim its juice, rubbed on minor burns and cuts, gives quick relief and speeds healing. The elongated, spiny leaves are distinctive, and aloes will grow to several feet or more under the right conditions.

Grafted cacti, achieved by taking two different plants and cutting them so fleshy parts join to make a single plant, make interesting additions to a cactus garden, too.

Don't be afraid to plant cacti and succulents close together. They like to be pot-bound and roots require little room.

Once your garden is planted, top it off with a layer of brightly colored sand or pebbles for a real desert-like effect. Sand or pebbles serve a dual purpose: they insure topsoil will drain freely, a critical factor, since rot occurs most often here; and they also keep the top of the soil from forming a hard crust.

Try your own cactus garden. And see how much fun indoor gardening can be — even for purple-thumb people!

Energy-saving ideas explored

The sun's naturally abundant supply of invigorating and non-polluting energy which produces millions of healthy tans each year on poolside loungers now has a more utilitarian function as well — heating the pool water to comfortable swimming temperatures.

"Implementation of solar heating systems is, at least in the pool industry, a here-today reality," states Ira C. Rigger, a pool builder serving this year as president of the National Swimming Pool Institute.

"It's now a matter of calculating the economics for any particular installation and integrating the required equipment into the total landscaping plan."

Depending upon the size of the pool, local utility rates and the amount of energy available from the sun, producers claim that a solar system used to heat a home pool can pay for itself in three to five years, even if a small supplemental heater using more traditional forms of energy is also required.

Enough energy from the sun falls on the surface of the United States each year to total seven times our current annual energy consumption. The problem is to economically trap and use that energy. The pool industry, for its part, has apparently solved that problem.

"Solar heating system for, pools are relatively simple," says Rigger. "Thin, flat black panels about equaling the pool surface area are used to collect the sun's energy which heats water flowing through the panels. This heated water is then pumped to poolside to heat the pool water."

Retrofitting pools for solar heat is also a possibility, but it may be economically impractial.

"If the owner has already equipped the pool with a heater, he has a substantial investment in that equipment and, "Rigger admits, "it probably wouldn't pay to add a solar system."

A notable exception to this rule is that a home pool may be the key ingredient in making solar energy home heating and cooling technically and economically viable.

Such systems require large storage tanks, or "heat sinks," in which the energy collected during the day and stored as heat in water can then be recovered for use during the night or on cloudy days. A home pool has more than sufficient capacity to hold enough energy for this purpose, yet not be heated above a temperature comfortable for swimming.

"A typical home pool receives sufficient solar engery from the sun each day to heat a six-room house for several days," Rigger says. "Currently, most of this energy is lost again, even though a number of products have recently been introduced to cut this loss."

A special pool blanket is one of these new products. Produced by several manufacturers, a pool blanket is a sheet of transparent plastic which allows the sun's engery to penetrate into the pool.

Pots and plants

Roots important to plant life

By Janet Tara
(Fifth of a Series)

Roots are the lifeblood of any plant. Many leaf-damaged plants can make a comeback even after a severe pruning of dead leaves, leaving naught but a bare stem. But once the roots die, there is no hope.

Once you determine the best routine for watering a plant according to the combination of plant variety, size and type of pot, you must stick to it.

Long dry speels followed by heavy watering can cause trouble. Each time a plant is allowed to severely dry out some of the roots die. If you follow this dry spell with a large amount of water to make up for the neglect, the surviving dried out roots are flooded and can't cope with the sudden change. This is how root rot starts.

The best solution for dried out soil is to bring the plant gradually back to its regular watering routine. But if you have damaged the plant, the lower leaves will turn yellow and fall off. Here's what to do to try to correct the damage:

Gently remove the plant from the pot and soil. Examine the roots and smell for decay. Remove all dead and hollow roots. If the soil is still wet, repot in dry sterilized soil. Add a small amount of water. Gradually increase the amount. Keep the plant on the dry side until there are signs of improvement, i.e., the leaves stop yellowing.

This will only work if the roots haven't been very badly damaged. Once severe root damage has taken place, there is verv little chance for survival.

(NEXT: Adapting.)

Be carpet-wise for the best buys

They're better. In fact, if you're considering buying a carpet, the time and market are right. Man-made fibers, such as nylon and polyester, have been coupled with advanced industrial technology to put style into carpets without increasing prices.

In the last 25 years, for example, carpet prices are down 50 per cent when compared with other commodity prices, which are up 50 per cent according to the Carpet & Rug Institute.

But all this good news means nothing if when you consider a carpet, you don't put your consumer-sense to work. Here are several quick carpet-buying tips which should set your standards high, and give you the best value for your dollar.

FEEL IT. Always feel a carpet's top side for thickness. Bend it back to check density. A good quality carpet is designed so each fiber is supported closely by the others. This feature confines abrasion mostly to the top of the pile. If you bend the pile back and you see spaces, that usually means the pile is skimpy. The exception is shag because the longer length of the pile contributes to the total amount of fiber. A good rule of thumb: the more fiber to the square inch, the better the carpet will wear.

FLIP IT. The underside of a carpet should have fibers rooted in backing that is uniformly smooth and tight. Check the entire backing surface for loose spots or puckers. And remember a jute underside is subject to mildew, because of its natural substance, and should not be used in kitchens, bathrooms, patios, basements, or any area where there is risk of moisture. A polypropylene backing is becoming more prevalent in the industry because its quality is more consistent and it can be used in wet areas.

READ LABELS. You can find many carpet facts by reading labels affixed to the backing. Information such as style, color, width and pile is clearly identified.

EVALUATE TRAFFIC. Select a carpet texture that complements the type of foot traffic it will receive. Bedrooms usually have light traffic, living rooms get average traffic, and stairs and family rooms heavy traffic.

CONSIDER THE COLOR. White or light colors expand a room, while dark shades or patterns make rooms seem smaller, sometimes cozier. Solid colors show soil more quickly than tweeds or patterns. Warm colors, such as reds, yellows, oranges and golds, make a room appear brighter. Cool colors, including blues, greens and purples, create a more subdued atmosphere.

CHECK THE LIGHT. Warm and cool colors can change a room depending on the varying light conditions. Before making any final buying decision, take home a large sample of the carpet. Remember, vast areas of color will have greater impact than your sample.

THINK PADDING. Every carpet should have a padding to help prolong the carpet's life, increase the feeling of resiliency underfoot, reduce noise transmissions and increase sound absorption, provide additional insulation against heat and cold, help to compensate for minor irregularities in floor surfaces, and prevent a carpet from "crawling" on the floor.

Two types of padding to avoid: very thin foam or sponge rubber, because they are not thick enough to do much good; and all-jute, the lowest priced, which tends to bunch up with use and even accelerate wear spots in carpets.

These tips should make you a consumer-conscious carpet buyer. And there is nothing wrong with that.

All-America Awards

Four roses win 1976 honors

For 38 years, All-America Rose Selections has been admitting new roses into its 26 official test gardens scattered about the United States. These test gardens are open to all of the new hybrids whose breeders have the courage to submit their originations to what is readily admitted to be the most rigorous and exacting rose testing program in the world.

Gaining All-America honors this year are four outstanding new rose creations — America, a hybrid of William Warriner of Tustin, California and the first climber to win an award in 19 years; Cathedral, a floribunda from Sam McGredy IV; Seashell, a dainty golden peach and salmon hybrid tea from Reimer Kordes of Germany; and Yankee Doodle, a bombastic orange sherbet hybrid tea from the same world famous hybridizer.

Now, to examine these four in some detail:

AMERICA (Plant Patent No. 3682) — Being a climbing rose, America was born with two strikes against it to start with, in that the blooms of most climbers have neither the shape nor petal substance to be desirable as cut flowers and, in addition, the flowers of most climbers are borne in loose, floppy clusters.

Also this class of rose requires some type of support on which to climb, therefore is not adapted to many locations on the home grounds.

Its full petalled flowers are very large for a climber (some 3½ to 4 inches across) and are borne on long stems either singly or in small clusters.

The long, shapely buds closely resemble those of hybrid tea roses and open to a bright salmon with a silver sheen. To add depth to their beauty, they have a delicious, deep clove fragrance, probably inherited from one of the parents, Fragrant Cloud.

Because of the long blossom stems plus firm petal substance, and attractive tea rose shape, the blooms of this award winner should prove excellent for cutting and flower arrangements.

Probably America is more of a pillar rose than an out-and-out climber. It will attain heights of about 10 feet under ordinary conditions. The plants branch well and continue to produce large quantities of blooms throughout the season. There is virtually no fading of the flowers from opening to a salmon coral finish and the petals fall cleanly from the plant when their life is over.

The plants are vigorous and rate very well on disease resistance and hardiness, although, where winter weather is severe, the canes should be protected.

America is the result of a cross between Fragrant

The individual blooms of Cathedral are large for a floribunda, averaging three inches across, and are borne in clusters, each of which could be cut for a bouquet. The rich golden apricot blooms, semi-double with 15 to 18 delicately ruffled petals, display bright golden stamens in their fully opened flowers that add greatly to their beauty. The blooms also possess a sweet, fresh fragrance that increases their attractiveness in the garden and as cut flowers.

Repeat blooms are continually produced on the medium sized, bushy plants throughout the flowering season. A wealth of basal growth constantly forms additional

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We bought an old house. It was built in 1945 and has asphalt shingles on the roof. While making a repair on the inside of one of the gutters, I noticed the channel was filled with that mineral substance that apparently originally was on the shingles. Did these granules serve a purpose and what does their loosening indicate?

A. — The mineral granules serve a double purpose. They provide roof color and texture and they increase fire resistance. Their presence in large quantities in the gutters usually means that you need a new roof or, at the least, will need one soon.

Q. — I have just finished our attic except for the floor. It presently has what appears to be a sturdy subfloor. I intend to put down resilient floor tiles. Can I put it right over the subfloor or must I put down a whole new floor before installing the tiles?

A. — The tiles should not be installed directly over the subfloor. What you should put down is either hardboard or plywood underlayment and then place the tiles on that. Get the underlayment in the 4 feet by 4 feet sizes, which are easier to handle than the larger sheets. Nail them to the subfloor, leaving about a 16th of an inch between sheets. The underlayment will serve as a solid base for the tiles no matter which type you choose.

Q. — I never seem to know when to use a paste wood filler. I have recently taken up wood finishing, but that aspect of it puzzles me. Can you help?

A. — Paste wood fillers are designed to fill the pores of certain woods, among them walnut, mahogany, oak, chestnut, hickory, ash and elm. They are unnecessary on woods such as pine, fir, cedar, cypress and poplar. Woods such as birch, maple, cherry and redwood are usually left unfilled, but some wood finishers like to use a sealer or liquid filler on them.

TOOL CADDY

With a tool caddy

Make your work easier

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Whether you are a tidy or untidy gardener, a new Lawn and Garden Tool Caddy will make your chores easier. The item is a cart made of heavy wood and metal that rides easily on 20-inch, semi-pneumatic wheels.

The cart is designed to carry the six basic long-handled tools, plant stakes, many hand gardening tools, more than 50 pounds of seed, fertilizer and plant food. A small tool caddy for gloves, twine, seed and other items fits into the top of the cart.

The cart measures 40 inches tall and 24 inches wide and weighs only 40 pounds. A "swing-leg" adds to maneuverability, even on stairways.

Quick Ground Cover

If you want to cover an area temporarily, but quickly, you can plant several annual vines. They will provide quick screens, shades or backgrounds, or may be trained on fences and walls or act as ground covers.

An attractive item is the cup and saucer vine, which generally grows to 10 feet — up to 30 under very favorable conditions. The flowers are large, bell-shaped, pink to purple. In the north, sow the seeds one or two to a peat pot indoors and move outside when frost danger ends. In the south they tend to become perennial.

The blooms are borne sometimes singly and sometimes in clusters of two or three on strong stems which are produced in abundance throughout the flowering season. The heavy production of canes tends to make the plants dense, compact and of medium height. All in all, the garden performance of this award winner is excellent — particularly in those hot weather periods when most roses are not at their best. It is rated as a very vigorous rose, which will produce great quantities of bloom because of its prolific production of flowering canes. The blooms stand up well as cut flowers and in the garden where there is some slight fading just before dropping, but the petals do drop cleanly.

This 1976 All-America comes from Germany and the famous rose breeding establishment of Reimer Kordes. It was produced by the crossing of Konigen der Rosen with an unnamed seedling and its ancestry includes many famous roses, such as Peace, Kordes Perfecta, Tropicana and Golden Scepter.

YANKEE DOODLE (Plant Patent Applied For)—Of true hybrid tea growth habit, the bright orange-sherbet bomb-like blooms are produced singly on very long and

In this changing world of ours, some of the old things keep rolling along. Take the matter of trade-ins. When you buy new furnishings from us, we provide you with the option of trading in your old furniture — for which we pay a fair price, and the amount then being credited toward the purchase. (We pick up the trade-in furniture at the same time we make our delivery of the new.)

When did all this start? Well, we started this trade-in policy back in 1948. And people loved it; they kept coming back for more. This policy just naturally evolved into another Biggar enterprise — the establishment, in 1951, of our used furniture store on 2030 E. Walnut St., in Pasadena. (Phone 795-8124)

(And we must admit, this has developed into quite a side benefit — because people reasoned that since our customers bought only the very best from us, what they traded in was of a comparable quality, if a little used.)

Like we say, some of the old things just keep rolling along.

Petunias not like they used to be

Today's petunia varieties scarcely resemble the favorites of the early 1950s and 1960s. Many varieties now claim larger flowers, earlier blooming and better branching habits. The compact and free-flowering varieties of the 1970s are ideal for hanging baskets and patio containers.

Double-flowered petunias do best in close-up situations where the fullness of the flowers is most appreciated. Circus, a red and white double, is still an all-time garden favorite. The elegant and showy Bridal Bouquet and Sonata are two double white varieties well worth growing too.

Single petunias are available in multiflora and grandiflora type. The multifloras are quite free-flowering and where planted in large masses put on a great show. Many of the grandifloras are famous for their large flowers and sensational display of color and form.

produce an attractive vine 6-8 feet tall, with purple or white, pealike blossoms followed by flat, purple seed-pods.

The Scarlet Runner bean does double duty, producing beanlike scarlet flowers, then fruits that are edible.

For a dainty item, try cypress vine, which has fernlike leaves. The flowers are starlike, orange, scarlet or white. The vines grow 15-20 feet and may be started in a pot indoors in winter. Soak the seeds overnight before planting, starting with hot water and letting it cool.

Less vigorous is the thunbergia or Black-Eyed Susan vine, which grows to six feet with yellowish flowers with black eyes. Another use is in hanging baskets, or hanging from window boxes to run along the ground.

For planting, prepare soil as you would for any flowers or vegetables, loosening soil a spade deep, mixing fertilizer in rows, adding soil before planting seeds one half to one inch deep, depending on size. Weed as you would vegetables.

Late fall is considered the best time to fertilize narrowleaf evergreens.

How often should you water cactus? In spring and summer — the growing season — water as you would other foliage plants. They should be potted, however, in a porous sandy soil for good drainage. In fall and winter, water just enough to keep the plants from shriveling.

Trees get hungry, too

If you haven't been feeding your trees for the last year or two, it is time that you considered it.

A hungry tree may not dramatically reveal its condition to you — it has no arms to clutch a missing tummy, and no tongue to loll out. But if its leaves are not as deep or rich a green, or as plentifull, as you remember them, or if there are dead areas in the centers or edges of the leaves, a degree of starvation is present.

Trees growing in confined spaces, in compacted soil, or competing with a lawn for nourisment usually need extra help.

Planning the proper menu for your trees may seem confusing. If you shop at your local garden supply store you are confronted with stacks of bagged fertilizers, all hinting at instantaneous results but rarely clearly labeled "for trees."

Which kind should you buy? How much will you need? What is the right time of year to put it down?

The National Arborist Association, an organization of men devoted to tree care, offers these helpful tips:

— Read the numbers on the fertilizer bags. If you see 10-6-4, for example, that indicates the percentage or "grade" of nitrogen (10 per cent, phosphoric acid (6 per cent, and potassium (4 per cent contained in the bag.

The National Arborist Association recommends grades 12-7-5, 12-6-6, 10-8-6, or 10-6-4 for use as tree food.

— The amount you will need to adequately feed your trees can be gauged by measuring the diameter of the tree trunk at a height of four and one-half feet above the ground level.

The following scale can then be applied: two-three inch diamenter - 1½ pounds per inch; three-five inch diameter - 1½ to 3 pounds per inch; six inch diameter - 2 to 3 pounds per inch, and larger trees - 3 to 5 pounds per inch.

Punch holes with a crowbar or power auger in concentric circles from a base of the trunk. Stagger the holes about two feet apart and locate them under the crownspread of the tree to the outer tips of the branches. After inserting the fertilizer to a point two inches below grade, fill the remainder of the hole with peat humus or soil.

— avoid overfeeding. Too much food can be as injurious as none! Americian beech, crabapple, and white oak trees should be given half the above amounts, and never in early spring.

— When to feed them? Your hungry trees will benefit from a feeding in any season of the year. However, fertilizing them in mid-to-late fall, before the ground freezes hard, will provide nutrients for your trees to use in early spring when active growth starts.

— Don't forget that water is a vital substance important to the life support of a tree. It is a source of oxygen and hydrogen.

— Properly fed and watered, your trees will flourish luxuriantly and become more disease, drought, and insect resistant. In the long run you'll be happy that you invited them to lunch!

Permanent greenhouse

By STEVE ELLINGSON

A few months ago, we released plans for a simple greenhouse made from polyethylene sheeting. It was very popular. Since then, we've been deluged with requests for a simple-to-build greenhouse of a more permanent type. Well, we went back to the drawing boards and have come up with a jim-dandy design. It's constructed of transluscent fibergalss panels which permit the sun's growing rays to enter and weather well. They're available at dealers everywhere. Modular in design, the greenhouse can be adjusted to any size need in four-foot increments.

This greenhouse is of simple post-and-beam construction and there's a complete materials guide included. So if you love both building and growing things, here's the perfect way to extend the growing season year-round. Whether you are into growing vegetables for the family table, or ornamental plants for pleasure, here's the perfect cradle for new life.

To obtain Fiberglass Greenhouse Plan No. 573, send $2 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, Pomona Progress Bulletin Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

Garden ideas for the Bicentennial year

One of the more ambitious designs — good to consider as a community project — is an Old Glory Thirteen Star Flag, displayed in a bed 28 feet long by 15 feet wide, using red, white and blue petunias to produce the desired effect. Start the petunias indoors from seed, and transplanting into the flower bed one foot apart after all danger of frost, using 51 blue petunias to stimulate the stars, 142 red penunias to create the stripes, and 139 white petunias for the white areas of the flag.

For the best display of this floral flag locate the bed on a slight incline in full sun. Before planting it is essential to measure the area accurately, making sure all edges are straight, and the corners square. The soil should be cultivated to a depth of 12 inches, and a general purpose fertilizer.worked into the soil at the rate of two to three pounds per 100 square feet.

Leave a wide margin around the edge, allowing at least 1½ feet of space between the edges and the closest flowers. The edges are best mulched as this helps to define the design, and it reduces the need for constant weeding and watering. Keep faded flowers picked off, water well during dry spells, and apply a booster application of fertilizer during the growing season to maintain maximum bloom production, and a long lasting floral display.

A simpler design, called Bicentennial Border, requires a straight border area just 2½ feet wide. This uses red salvia as a background, blue ageratum for intermediate height, and white alyssum as an edging. These widely adapted, long lasting flowers create a beautiful red, white and blue design.

Other simple Bicentennial flower garden ideas include the planting of red, white and blue morning glories to decorate posts of mail boxes, fences or trellis. Morning glories are fast-growing annuals, like a sunny location and love to climb.

Red, white and blue cascading petunias can create a spectacular hanging basket. A nine-inch diameter basket will hold three petunias, while a 12-inch is good for six plants. Wire mesh baskets are best, lined with sphagnum moss and a potting mixture.

Hanging baskets dry out extra fast, so frequent watering is essential and the addition of a fertilizer several times during the growing season.

Do-it-yourself ceiling insulation gives you double savings. You save on the cost of installation, you save on the amount of gas you use for heating.

Check your attic or crawl space. Even if there's some insulation there, you probably need more to meet current FHA R-19 standards for energy conservation. (R-19 is simply a measure of the insulation material's ability to prevent winter heat loss and summer heat gain. All manufacturers label their insulation materials with R-values.)

You'll find installing R-19 ceiling insulation is surprisingly easy — our free booklet tells you exactly how. It only takes a few hours to complete the job, but your savings go on forever.

Keep your lawn happy

Problem lawns are easier to prevent than cure. It is certainly not too early to start now with a good watering and fertilizing program and be on the way to a thick green lawn this spring. Good lawn care results in a healthy carpet of grass that is much better able to out-compete weeds for light, water, nutrients and space! A vigorous lawn will also resist fungus diseases better.

Most of the serious diseases of turfgrass in California are caused by fungi. The spores produced by the microscopic fungi may be spread by wind and water or can be spread throughout the lawn with a mower. Since many fungi need moisture and a favorably warm temperature to germinate, it is important to water early in the day so that the grass blades have a chance to dry before the temperatures rise. It is also better to water infrequently and deeply to encourage deep roots that will help the lawn withstand hot, dry conditions through the summer.

Older lawns or compacted soild may require aeration to prevent excessive run-off and achieve soil moisture down to the desired six to eight-inch depth.

Another key to preventing problems in the lawn is the correct application of fertilizers. Too much or too little can encourage fungus growth. Your local nurseryman can provide you with a total fertilizer program for the season. Since nitrogen moves readily through the soil and beyond the reach of the roots, more than one application is necessary and beneficial.

Iris show this weekend

The Aril Society International will present its Tenth Annual Specialty Iris Show at the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum in Arcadia Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Aril iris are a species of iris of extraordinary beauty that are characterized by a white collar, or aril, on the seed. Although the forthcoming show will primarily exhibit aril species and aril hybrids, sections for other special iris such as dwarfs, medians, and Pacific Coast Natives will be included.

There will also be arrangements sections for both beginning and advanced amateurs of sufficiently wide variety to permit exhibitors to find appropriate subjects for their talents. Exhibition privileges are open to all persons and no entry fee is charged.

Specimen and arrangement entries may be made at the Arboretum tonight from 7 to 9 and on Saturday from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. Judging will be done by accredited American Iris Society judges. American Iris Society ribbons and also some special awards will be given winning entries in both the horticultural and the arrangement sections.

New energy for plants from fertilizers

Selecting the right kind and amount of fertilizer for use on your lawn or garden is an important first step toward an attractive home landscape, and productive vegetable or flower plants.

Your best sources of information for specific problems or plant needs are your county extension agent, or local lawn and garden supply center.

In addition, here are some general guidelines from The Fertilizer Institute, based on U. S. Department of Agriculture information:

Fertilizers differ in cost for a variety of reasons:

—Nutrient content. Products containing a high percentage of plant nutrients — nitrogen, phosphate and potash — cost more per pound than those containing a small percentage of nutrients.

— Ingredients. Products containing slowly available forms of nitrogen cost more per pound than those containing quickly available forms.

Form. Granular, pelleted, or soluable fertilizers cost more than powdered fertilizers.

Added materials. Products containing added micronutrient elements and pesticides cost more than fertilizers without these additions.

— Package size. Normally, fertilizer products in a small container cost more per pound than the same products in a large container.

Nutrient Content. By state law, fertilizer manuufacturers must list the guaranteed primary nutrient percentage on each fertilizer container. This percentage is known as the grade of fertilizer. For example, a fertilizer mixture showing, the guaranteed content 10-10-10 will contain 10 per cent each of nitrogen, phosphate and potash.

Manufacturers vary the fertilizer grade to meet various soil land plant needs. For example, lawn fertilizers usually are highest in nitrogen content because plants grown primarily for their leaf growth require more nitrogen. Fertilizers for use on many vegetables, such as root crops or crops grown for "fruit" are formulated with highest content of phosphate in the mixture.

Today, there are "specialty" fertilizers formulated for nearly every kind of garden or landscape plant.

Fertilizers of several grades may have the same ratio of nutrients. For example, the two grades 20-10-10 and 10-5-5 have the same ratio of nutrients (2-1-1). Fertilizers have the same ratios normally can be used interchangeably by adusting the application amount.

— Ingredients. The slowly available forms of nitrogen, ureaformaldehyde for example, are usually more expensive than forms more quickly available for plant use, such as ammonium nitrate or ammonium sulfate. The slowly-available nitrogens forms are more expensive to produce, but need to be applied less frequently during the plants growing season because of their "time-release" feature.

Fertilizers . . .

most products, fertilizers cost more per pound in small package than they do in large packages. Packaging costs amounts for much of the expense of fertilizer merchandizing.

Paying the higher rate for small packages of fertilizer may be justified if you need only a small amount, if the case of handling smaller packages is sufficiently advantageous, or if storage of large packages is a problem.

For greatest economy, determine the total amount of each kind of fertilizer that you need for one season, then buy this amount in the largest available packages.

Few soils have sufficent nutrients to support best plant growth. Therefore, it's necessary to supplement the soil's store of plant nutrients ,with today's commercial fertilizers to get the most vigorous lawn, abundant flowers, and greatest yield of tasty, nutritious vegetables.

Early art inspires decor for walls

Long before he gave up believing the earth was flat, man had determined that art did not have to be. From earliest times, sculpture has been among the world's most challenging and fascinating art forms.

Of particular interest is sculpture executed in relief, either high or low, a technique closely associated with architecture and furniture making.

The use of relief sculptures on their own, rather than as integral parts of a building or as furniture decoration, is relatively recent. The word plaque, which originally referred to an ornamental medallion inserted into the wood work of cabinets, chairs, and such, now describes an increasingly popular type of wall decoration.

"One obvious reason for the growing acceptance of deep-dimensional plaques is the lack of interior architectural detailing in today's homes," noted decorating consultant Mary Ann Wills.

"Ornamental moldings are rare, as is the carved woodwork of generations past," she added. "Gone is the time when the rich would import a team of European sculptors to enrich bannisters, doors, and window frames. Even if one could afford them, the artists would be hard to find today."

Thanks to modern technology, however, the work of the few such artists remaining can be enjoyed by anyone, rather than restricted to a wealthy few. Fine sculptures executed in wood are being faithfully duplicated, at affordable prices, by companies.

What gives this kind of wall decor such strong appeal in 1976? One factor, Wills suggests, is its continuing relationship to furniture design trends. "Whatever the homemaker's choice — traditional, Early American, modern, or even Mediterranean — she'll find that complementary accessories are readily available."

Another is versatility — the way it fits into almost any room in any home, without need for special lighting or other display techniques.

A third is cost, which is remarkably low in view of the time and effort required to create a design.

Replacing window glass needn't 'pane'

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There's a knack to cutting glass for the replacement of a window pane, but it's something you can learn with a little practice. Do it three or four times with some scrap glass and you'll suddenly find yourself getting the hang of it.

The first thing you should know is that the glass should be cut slightly smaller than the dimensions of the frame into which it will be placed. This is to allow for irregularities and expansion. Deduct about 1-16th of an inch (⅛th inch maximum) from each dimension. The frame is so constructed as to permit this leeway.

Before making the cut, be certain the glass is absolutely clean. The slightest dirt or grit can interfere with the action of the glass cutter. Place the glass on newspapers which are on a flat surface, such as a workbench. Use a straightedge, preferably metal, to guide the wheel of the cutter. Put a few drops of turpentine or kerosene along the line of the cut. Hold the cutter firmly and almost vertically. Begin at the part of the glass farthest from you, drawing the cutter towards you. Use fairly heavy pressure, moving the cutter so that a line is scored in the single long stroke. There is a tendency to apply firm pressure at the start, then relax it a bit as you move the cutter. Resist it, because the glass may not separate cleanly at the point where you relaxed the pressure.

When you practice, you may find that you have no trouble making the cut, but that you run into difficulty when you attempt to break off the scrap glass from the part that is to be used in the window frame. Some persons tap along the top of the scored line with the back of the cutter; some do it on the underside; some on both sides. My own method, evolved after experimenting, is to tap gently along the underside of the cut, move the glass carefully so that the scrap part overhangs the workbench, then snap it off firmly with one hand while I hold the glass with the other. For this snapping operation, I put on work gloves.

Your cutter has a notched edge. This should be used when snapping off narrow strips of glass.

Is all this worthwhile? It is when you have some old glass on hand that can be used or when your hardware store or glass dealer charges considerably more for cutting the glass to exact dimensions than for buying one of the pieces he has in stock. It isn't if the charge is nominal. If you do have a pane cut to order, better measure the dimensions three times to be certain you haven't made a mistake and be sure to tell the dealer whether you already have made the necessary deductions.

To replace the pane — and assuming you have already removed every bit of the old glass — first apply linseed oil to the grooves of the frame in which the new glass will be placed. Use a putty knife to put down a bed of putty or glazier's compound. Put the glass into position and insert glazier's points every few inches. Make a roll of putty and press it against the frame and glass with your fingers. Do the smoothing with the blade of a putty knife. While the putty or glazier's compound is often left as is, it will stand up better against the weather if it is painted after a few days.

(The techniques of 35 do it-yourself tasks are explained in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Florida: house plant capital

APOPKA, Fla. (AP) — Caravans of trucks, ranging from pickups to tractor trailers, roll out of this small Central Florida town each day carrying the non-stop harvest of the nation's fastest growing agricultural crop: potted house plants.

"When people talk about Florida, they usually talk about tourism or citrus, but the Florida nursery industry is the big success story of not only the state but the entire nation," says Charles Dunn, executive vice president of the Florida Nurserymen and Growers Association.

In the last three years, wholesale sales of Florida-grown house plants have increased 100 per cent to $87.3 million in 1975, and University of Florida agriculture researchers have predicted a growth rate of 138 per cent by 1985.

Florida currently produces 82 per cent of all the house plants grown in the United States, and about two-thirds of the Sunshine State-crop is centered around Apopka, a garden-variety small town about 10 miles north of Orlando.

"No matter where you live, in a New York City apartment or a Dallas suburb, the odds are good that the philodendron on your coffee table came from right here," said Cecil Rogers, the nursery association's representative in Apopka.

From the small grower to the giant corporation, the sale of Florida-grown plants has expanded at a rate that would turn any Wall Street investor green with envy.

Green Thumb Crop, the largest nursery operation in the state, reported sales of $25 million in 1974 and $41 million in 1975.

"I guess you could call business good," said Green Thumb president Bob Stutzman, who recently moved from exclusively wholesale to retail sales with a marketing scheme based on the home parties used by merchants of plastic food containers.

Be sure to guard against crabgrass

Mention of crabgrass causes lawn keepers in many parts of the country to shudder. Crabgrass is a hot-weather annual, its seed wintering over in the soil, sprouting when spring temperatures teach 55 degrees or so. The weed spreads by trailing runners that infiltrate the lawn rapidly in warm weather, choking and smothering the lawn grass.

There are a number of ways to take some of the curse out of crabgrass. One is to prevent sprouting of its seed. Pre-emergence crabgrass preventers do just that. Precise timing is required (before crabgrass seed sprouts), and uniform blanketing of the lawn where the crabgrass customarily grows is necessary.

Preventers may depress lawn grass slightly, restraining depth of rooting, and perhaps altering color and texture somewhat. One can wait until crabgrass has definitely made its appearance, and then spray with post-emergence arsonates a couple of times. This kills most of the crabgrass, with only momentary discoloration of the lawn grasses.

But there is still another counter thrust to crabgrass invasion. Why not let your lawn fight most of the battle? This it will do if dense and vigorous. Moderate fertilization and high-mowing early in spring are often sufficient to help the lawn put the kibosh on crabgrass.

Especially will this be effective if your lawn was sowed to leafy, strongly-rhizoming cultivars or if these top performers are over-seeded into thin turf. Crabgrass will not grow in shade, such as under trees, neither will it grow appreciably in a tight turf blends and mixtures properly tended.

Fireplace shop takes pride in its service

A 44-year-old tradition, begun in 1932 when a Glendale man opened a fireplace equipment and accessories business in that city, is being carried on by his daughter, Romayne Stewart, in a business of her own, called Stewart's Fireplace Shop.

"Service is the key word in my shop," sayd Mrs. Stewart, who has had 43 years' experience in the fireplace business. In addition, Mrs. Stewart has had training in the arts and in interior decorating, and is well qualified to advise customers of her business.

"The public's response has been most gratifying," says Mrs. Stewart.

Pan American

Pan American Day is observed on April 14 to commemorate the First International Conference of American States, held on that date in 1890 in Washington, D.C. The Conference adopted a resolution which resulted in the creation of the hemispheric organization known today as the Pan American Union, with headquarters in Washington.

The growing interest in home vegetable gardens can be traced to a desire for top-quality, readily available home vegetables and the enjoyment and self satisfaction gained from raising fresh foods.

Disappointment awaits the gardener, however, who fails to provide adequate plant nutrients. Few soils can support high yields of top-quality vegetables without the addition of plant nutrients to supplement those already available.

Fertilizer should be worked into garden soil two to four inches deep a few days before planting. The composition of the commercial fertilizer and rate of application can vary with the soil and crop or crops to be grown.

For instance, leafy crops such as spinach, and lettuce require a mixed fertilizer high in nitrogen.

Tuber and root crops such as potatoes, beets, carrots and turnips need a higher percentage of potash in the mixture than other vegetables.

Tomatoes and beans may require only moderate amounts of fertilizer for best yields, whereas onions, celery, lettuce, roots and tuber crops respond well to larger applications.

There are commericial fertilizers blended in correct amounts for all types of garden vegetables. specialists at most garden centers can advise you on the type and amounts to use for your soil, and for the crops you wish to grow.

In some cases, your garden specialist may advise that agricultural lime is needed for soils in your area to correct acid soil conditions. Most garden vegetables grow best on soils that are slightly acid, so do not add limestone unless you are sure application is needed.

If in doubt, ask at your garden center about soil tests. In most areas, these are also available through your county extension agent's office.

Many garden centers have soil testing kits available for the home gardener, which can be used to give a quick indication of soil acidity.

Although there are many inportant steps to a successful garden, use of today's speciall-formulated garden fertilizers will help assure the nutrients necessary for high vegetable yields.

A key step in any successful vegetable crop venture is proper soil preparation. If soil is "heavy" or has a high clay content, mulch or compost should be worked into the upper soil layer or root zone.

Such organic matter helps in release of some soil nutrients, helps loosen or "lighten" heavy soils and encourages water retention for plant use. Pracitcally any plant materials can be used including partially decayed leaves and grass clippings, and plant refuse from the kitchen.

Florida

While Green Thumb has prospered from a big investment in automation, the small, family-run nurseries that dot the back roads around Apopka also have flourished.

"I stay sold out," said Manny Allen, the owner and operator — along with his wife and three sons — of Bay Hill Nursery. "I have for several years. I do in excess of $50,000 in sales a year, but couldn't increase that if I wanted to."

The large nurseries like Green Thumb market their plants through sophisticated distribution centers using fleets of trucks, but many of the small operations sell to youths who drive to Florida in pickup trucks in an effort to turn a profit by selling to retail plant shops which are mushrooming all across the nation.

"They come down here in old trucks and cars and buy as many plants as they can haul back to places like Chicago," said Rogers.

The profits from the retail sale of house plants are massive and increasing. Industry sources say the average markup from wholesale to retail is about 400 per cent.

Ear for space

Do-it-yourself

Paneling made fun

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Whether you use one of those new "nail guns" or a simple tack hammer, paneling can be fun. And think of how much beauty and resale value a paneling job adds to your home. Remember too that it's practically maintenance-free (especially those new "man-made" wood-grained panels that look just like the real thing and cost so much less!). Paneling can be used to conceal old, cracked and otherwise defective walls. It also acts as an insulation against heat, cold and noise. Paneling is as practical as today and as charming as yesteryear.

Our simple step-by-step instructions include dozens of pictures and drawings that anyone can follow. We'll show you how to lay panels over concrete basement walls, regular or uneven plaster walls. There are guidelines for estimating, proper sawing methods, cutouts around wall outlets, doorways, stairs, etc. It's the most complete guide (we believe) that's available today.

To obtain our No. 569 PANELING MADE EASY instructions, send $1.50 (includes first class postage & handling) by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, c/o: Pomona Progress Bulletin Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

strong canes. The plants are exceedingly tall, free branching, broad and upright.

They get the blooms up where you can enjoy the fruity fragrance of the flowers which they hold erect even after a rain or an overhead watering. The plants are well-clothed with attractive glossy deep olive-green foliage that is reported as being very disease resistant.

Yankee Doodle produces large, fat buds, predominently of deep golden yellow, which sort of unwrap themselves in an orderly fashion to produce massive, showy, glowing rich coral-orange bicolor blooms that attract attention from as far away as they can be seen.

The flowers are chock full of stiff, starchy petals — 50 or more of them — plus additional tealoids. Admittedly, the blooms produce too many petals to rate as top show roses, but they certainly do become eye-catchers in the garden.

They also will hold their own as cut flowers. After all, rose blooms shaped like grecian urns don't hold an exclusive for the creation of attractive flower arrangements. Yankee Doodle will provide fragrant bouquets, and will last well as a cut flower.

Electric tool users need more protection

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

No matter how many safeguards manufacturers devise to protect the users of electrical tools and equipment, no matter how stringent the requirements of electrical codes and building regulations, there always are some persons who find ways to circumvent them.

Three-pronged plugs on portable power tools enjoyed a wave of popularity a few years ago because they seemed to provide a form of automatic grounding. Which they did — but only when used properly in outlets with a special three-wire ground conductor. So people began cutting off the third prong of the plug to make it fit into a two-slot outlet or using an adapter and neglecting to ground it.

The current effort to protect users of portable electric tools and appliances against themselves is through what is usually called double insulation or shockproof or safety housing. Tools so protected usually have the conventional two-pronged plugs and thus can be used in ordinary outlets. This has worked wonders in preventing accidents because of short circuits. But, in a few cases, it doesn't provide 100 per cent protection against ALL electrical hazards. Users are warned that double insulated equipment should not be grounded, since an improper wiring connection could make exposed metal parts live. No matter how remote the possibility of a shock with a double insulated tool or appliance — and it is remote — it is foolhardy not to read the instructions that come with the unit.

Another development designed to prevent trouble is the ground fault interrupter. If there's a shock-causing ground fault condition in electrical equipment or wiring, the device interrupts the circuit and cuts off the current. It has been so effective that the National Electrical Code has mandated its use in bathrooms and outdoor receptacles, places where dangerous electrical shocks are likely to occur. But even this protective device can only protect a person against current leading through the body to the ground. It can't protect you when you become the path for the current between the hot wire and the neutral wire of a circuit.

Even though your swimming pool has ground fault interrupter protection, some pool safety tips are in order. Don't use portable appliances within 10 feet of the pool. The National Electrical Code forbids installation of outlets within 10 feet from the inside walls of a pool. If a receptacle is located within 15 feet of the pool, ground fault interrupter protection is required. Keep extension cords away from pools. Take care in handling poolside accessories, such as radios, barbecues, refrigerators and the like. And don't run overhead wires across the pool or diving platform or within 10 feet of them.

In short, no matter what precautions are built into your power tool or appliance and regardless of what extra protective equipment you provide, don't assume that nothing can happen.

Vines can serve many purposes

How would you like to make an addition to your home which possesses all of the following characteristics? This addition will:

— Filter sunlight, making for a cooler house in summer.

— Function as insulation, and so reduce fuel costs in winter.

As if this weren't enough, this addition is available at very low cost.

What is this new, miracle discovery?

The "discovery" is hardly new or miraculous. Rather it is old-fashioned vines which, when properly used, can be a positive asset to the ecology, economny and esthetics of your home.

Such is the suggestion of the American Association of Nurserymen in its popular Green Survival program, whose concern is to improve the quality of American life through the creative use of green, growing plant materials.

A wide selection of hardy vines is available with varying traits so you can choose the vine most suitable to your desires and the specfications of the planting site. Most of these climbers do well on posts, fences, upright walls, arbors and trellises.

Since perennial vines will be a part of the landscaped area for years to come, they should be selected and planted with care. They are rapid growers, averaging eight feet per year. Annuals, of course, last only for a season and are valued for their profuse colorful flowers. Average growth for most annuals is 15 feet a season.

Spring is the best time for planting vines, and they may be placed outdoors as soon as danger of frost is past. For advice on the best vine for your yard, see your local nursery garden center, which can also supply whatever planting materials you need.

Vines growing on frame buildings can damage the wood and create wood rot. For this reason the AAN recommends the use of wooden trellies on the face of the structure, which will allow air to circulate behind the vine permit easy removal of the trellis and vine for painting or repair of the building.

So whether you're wanting sunshade or dust filter or screen, a vine, in a relatively short period of time, will provide all these for you while also offering a lovely wall of color.

CRAFTS ROOM — A room remodeled on the second floor of a home for a crafts area owes success to large storage cabinets built into the knee wall to hold extra yarn, and other supplies. Cabinet doors of 1x6-inch tongue and groove western wood are carefully matched to continue wall paneling boards. The ceiling is 1x3 hemlock. For a hobby like weaving or sewing, or the addition of a home office, any well-lighted corner of an attic or basement can be made comfortable. However, for a hobby like ceramics, with a lot of heavy materials involved, a ground-floor location is advisable, and a converted garage lends itself perfectly to this use.

Tips on spring lawn care

Spring weather is on your side. It yearns to turn a lawn attractive, urging the grass to fresh new growth. And you can lend a few assists.

If the lawn is discolored, the grass foliage scorched brown by winter weather, mow it closely and sweep up the duff. One such scalping early in the seasons does no harm and lets sunlight penetrate deep into the sod warming the soil quickly.

The added warmth hastens revival. And young leaves hidden in the turf are better displayed with the spent herbage gone. Dont' do away with new green leaf, though; the grass needs all it can muster for making food to carry on the revival.

If the lawn is thin, or lacks modern lawngrass varieties that you would like to have there, scatter top-quality seed lightly wherever thickening is in order. But seed stands a reasonably good chance of rooting only if it strikes moist soil. So, it's a good idea to scratch-in overseeings. Sacrify bare soil especially, to make it receptive (tiny lawnseeds will find a good home in the scratches).

Adequate fertility is another "must" for quick revival. An early feeding is essential if lawn `fertilization was neglected in autumn.

Fertilizer encourages lusty grass growth ahead of the weeds, and is the best possible deterrent to unwanted invaders.

Gradual-release fertilizers provide nutrient constancy, and over a series of years accumulate in the soil sufficiently to sustain grass for many weeks even should feeding be delayed.

Home pool buying tips offered

Buying a home swimming pool this year can be compared in many respects to buying a new car. Sizes and price ranges are about the same, each can be custom equipped with a variety of accessories, and the buyer has a number of places to shop for the best deal.

Unlike the car, however, the swimming pool will apprecate in value over the years and more favorable financing is generally available.

Prices for an above-ground pool large enough for family splashing and fun begin around several hundred dollars. Large pools of this type with decking attached along with the smaller in-ground pools are generally comparable to the price of an economy car. Larger, more elaborate in-ground pools can be considerably more expensive, matching more closely the price of a luxury automobile today.

But the National Swimming Pool Institute stresses that, like most autos, most pools built are in the mid-range price. The latest industry figures, for example, indicated that the average in-ground pool, depending upon equipment and deck, cost between $12 and $15 per square foot of water area. Such factors as excavation site difficulties and pool design will also affect cost.

The biggest cost saver is adequate prior planning. Uses of the pool ranging from family frolicking to serious swimming should be first anticipated before pool size, design and location are considered.

Next in rank for cost savings is shopping to narrow the field of pool contractors to two or three which seem right for your pocket. Make sure each contractor offers a pool which meets or exceeds the suggested minimum design and construction standards for residential pools formulated by the National Swimming Pool Institute.

Most pools today are constructed of various forms of concrete, with vinyl liners or with fiberglass. Each type has certain advantages in particulars applications and differs somewhat in costs. The pool contractors will be able to assist the family in making wise decisions about the pool size and design and guide homeowners as to homeowners as to the costs assocated with each type of pool construction.

Homeowners should also investigate the costs and availability of the many accessories offered on standard pools. Such equipment as pool heaters and automatic chemical feeders and pool cleaners all have benefits in making the pool less work and more enjoyable for longer periods of time each year, but also costs to the pool.

Built-in seats with therapy jets like those installed on the new White House pool add costs, too, but may "pay for themselves in one sitting," especially if you are afflicted with backache, other muscle and joint ailments, or chronic tension.

Additionally, if you have plans for a garden pool, spa, or waterfall in your backyard, check in the beginning with the pool contractor. It will be less expensive in the long run to get all the work done at one time and you can finance it along with the pool.

Energy conservation ideas are worthwhile

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Do you really save money on energy conservation improvements, and, if so, is it enough to make it worthwhile?

A study by the National Bureau of Standards, in conjunction with the Federal Energy Administration, gives affirmative answers to both parts of that question. How much you should invest depends equally on climate and energy prices, since both affect your heating and air conditioning bills. The bureau gives this example:

"When prices for home heating oil doubled in Washington, D. C., the effect on a home owner's heating bill was the same as physically moving his house to Minnesota."

Increases in the cost of energy for heating and cooling homes has led the government to recommend much higher levels of insulation — often double or more the amounts that were thought sufficient even a year or two ago. The NBS now says:

"In some parts of the country, when higher-priced fuels are used, R-38 insulation (about 12 inches of mineral fiber batts) in the attic is recommended to give the best results. Even in milder climates, R-30 insulation (about 10 inches) may be economically justified if you use oil or electric heating at current high prices. For instance, for a home in Indianapolis, recommendations are for R-30 ceiling insulation, full insulation in walls, R-19 insulation in floors over cold spaces, and storm sash for all windows nine square feet or more in area."

A colder climate calls for buttoning-up a house even more tightly. Requirements may be less in a warmer climate, but not if a home is air conditioned, because then energy is saved in the summer, too.

"R" numbers call for a little explanation. Energy savings result from decreasing the heat flow through the exterior shell of a building. The resistance, or R value, of insulation is the measure of its ability to decrease heat flow. Although two different kinds of insulation may be of different thicknesses, they'll perform equally well if the R numbers are the same. If R numbers are different, the one with the higher R will perform better. To meet federal specifications, R values are generally marked on packages of insulation. If they aren't, be wary.

How much will it cost? Here's a list of some of the costs the NBS used in figuring out its recommendations. They include an allowance for contractor installation:

Storm windows, up to 100 inches of height and width combined — $30. More than 100 inches — add 60 cents an inch.

Storm doors — $75.

The NBS adds: "Many of these items can be purchased at substantial discounts if you watch the advertised sales. Considerable savings may be made by installing these materials yourself."

Because of the considerable cost variations, the National Mineral Wool Insulation Assn. advises home owners to check building supply dealers, home centers and mail-order houses for prices of insulation batts, blankets, and pouring wool. For contractor installation, ask for quotes from two or three contractors, specifying exactly what you want.

The same applies to storm windows and doors. Check building supply dealers, home centers or retail dealers in window glass for do-it-yourself installation. For contractor installation, get cost quotations from home improvement contractors or glass dealers. Prices of weatherstripping and caulking materials are available at hardware stores and home centers.

(You can get a copy of Andy Lang's booklet, "How To Save Money by Insulating," by sending 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743.)

Not too late to find cuttings

It's still not too late to find rooted cuttings of grape varieties for the home garden. Plant them in full sun with the top bud at the soil level and mound some soil over them. New plantings will need no pruning until next winter. At that time select one strong cane and remove the others.

World's population will reach 4 billion Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The human population of the world will reach four billion on Sunday, according to the Population Reference Bureau, and more than one of every three persons will be under the age 15.

The population is currently growing at a slightly slower rate than experts believed a year ago, but many of those under 15 will soon reach their childbearing years.

It has taken 16 years — since 1960 — for the population to grow from 3 billion to 4 billion, but population experts say it will be only 13 years, until 1989, before the earth will count 5 billion humans.

Today, approximately 195,000 persons are added to the population each day. The bureau arrives at this figure by subtracting the 133,000 daily deaths from the estimated 328,000 babies born each day.

The bureau reports that approximately 135 persons are added each minute and 2.25 per second.

The United States' population continues to increase, according to the bureau, a nonprofit educational organization. By mid-July, the U.S. population will total 215 million, 86 times more than 200 years ago. The U.S. population makes up 5 per cent of the world population.

East Germany shows the slowest growth rate in the world, losing three-tenths of one per cent of its population each year. Kuwait has the world's fastest growth rate — 5.9 per cent a year.

Tentative agreement reached for ending Las Vegas strike

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Negotiators are putting the final touches today on a contract aimed at ending a two-week strike against 15 Las Vegas Strip casino-hotels. A smaller strike remains to be settled, however, before hotels that are closed can reopen.

The major strike involves some 22,000 maids, waiters and other service workers who belong to the Culinary Workers Union and union bartenders.

Jess McColl, a spokesman for the culinary workers, said attorneys for the union and for the Nevada Resort Association were ironing out details of language in a tentative agreement reached Thursday. He said he foresaw no major stumbling blocks toward settling on the pact.

However, ending the work stoppage was another matter. That hinged on negotiations underway between the resort association and the musicians and stagehands unions.

"It is understood by both sides that the settlement by culinary workers and bartenders is absolutely contingent upon the Nevada Resort Association also resolving stagehands' and musicians' contracts," said Al Bramlet, secretary-treasurer of the culinary workers.

Talks on the musicians' and stagehands' contracts recessed after 12 hours early today with one final session expected later in the day and the possibility of a settlment during that meeting.

Before reopening, the hotels will also face the problem of getting in touch with entertainers.

Eleven of the struck clubs, among them some of the biggest names in this resort city, have closed their doors. Bigname entertainment has been missing from Las Vegas since March 10 when musicians struck. Culinary workers, bartenders and stage hands struck a day later.

Hotels have been losing an estimated $1.4 million a day, not counting what they could have taken in at the gambling tables. Gambling provides a major portion of the state's tax revenues and about 40 per cent of gambling revenues are generated here.

Bramlet would not discuss details of the tentative agreement, but other sources said a major compromise involved a much-debated lockout clause sought by the hotels.

The clubs had wanted the right to lock out their employes if members of one union refused to cross a picket line of another union. Sources indicated the new agreement provides that hotels may not lock out employes who refuse to cross picket lines set up with the permission of the Southern Nevada Labor Council. The agreement would allow the lockout if employes tried to honor picket lines not recognized by the labor council. Those would include so-called informational pickets or pickets set up by persons trying to start a new union.

The sources also said the wage portion of the agreement would provide a $1.55 an hour raise for bartenders and culinary workers over four years. The unions had wanted a three-year contract to provide a $1.35 hourly raise. Waiters and waitresses now make $2.40 an hour, bartenders $4.50.

Tight security measures for Ford's California visit

President to stay overnight in L.A.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tight security measures were in force today for President Ford's visit to the city where a woman's pistol shot missed him last September.

Ford's California schedule for today called for speeches at two downtown hotels here and a mid-afternoon flight to Los Angeles for an evening speech.

On Saturday he has an airport news conference at Fresno and a speech to state Republican leaders there before an afternoon departure for LaCrosse, Wis.

The Secret Service, San Francisco police department and California Highway Patrol coordinated in the security preparations, but would not discuss details or the number of men involved.

On Tuesday the Secret Service tried to question five alleged terrorists about a recent and unsubstantiated FBI report that they had plotted assassination attempts on Ford and Ronald Reagan, his opponent for the Republican nomination for President. The alleged assassination attempt was to have been made at this summer's GOP convention in Kansas City, the FBI said.

Attorneys for the five alleged terrorists refused to allow the Secret Service interviews, saying their clients knew nothing of such a plot. The five, arrested in a raid last month in nearby Richmond, Calif. have been linked with the terrorist Emiliano Zapata Unit and several bombings.

Lt. Jim Ryan of the San Francisco police said, "We're aware of those assassination plot reports, but we're not changing anything." He said security would be routine, with traffic control to keep the presidential motorcade moving, foot patrolmen deployed in the crowds, and riflemen stationed on strategic rooftops.

On the one visit the President made here since last September when Sarah Jane Moore fired a shot at him as he left a hotel on Union Square, security measures kept the President away from crowds and virtually out of public view.

Miss Moore and Lynette Fromme, who pointed a gun at Ford in Sacramento last September, both are serving life prison terms for the assassination attempts.

After arrival at a Coast Guard Station at San Francisco International Airport Ford was scheduled to speak for about 10 minutes at the Fairmont Hotel to the American Textile Manufacturers Institure convention. The audience of about 900 is mostly from the Southeastern states.

Ford's next stop was to be a fundraising luncheon at the Grand Ball Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel a dozen blocks away.

Due in Los Angeles late this afternoon, Ford will confer with staff members for a couple of hours, attend a private reception for party bigwigs in his campaign.

Postal Service okays moratorium on cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service has agreed to a moratorium on cutbacks in mail service, the chairman of the House Postal Service subcommittee said today.

Rep. James M. Hanley, D-N.Y., told a news conference he interprets the moratorium to mean:

—No additional closings of small post offices.

—A cutback in business deliveries, scheduled to go into effect Monday, will not be made.

—Elimination of Saturday delivery service, which had been seriously considered by the Postal Service, will not occur.

"The Postmaster General, for his own reasons, has not been definitive. But this is my interpretation of what he told me," Hanley said. He said the Postal Service is taking the steps in order to court the support of Congress members for additional postal subsidies.

Hanley released a copy of a letter from Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar that said, "If the constraints of our current financial crisis could be eased by the infusion of additional funds, otherwise inevitable reductions in service could be avoided."

Bailar's letter did not specify what service reductions could be avoided.

U.S. overtures to Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost 11 months after the chaotic collapse of the U.S.-backed government in South Vietnam, the United States has signaled its willingness to discuss issues with Vietnamese government officials which could result in establishment of diplomatic relations.

U.S. officials said Thursday night that the United States has sent a carefully worded message to Hanoi through a foreign government, probably France, that it is willing to begin talks. Paris is considered a prospective site.

However, a French official source in Paris said today that France has not been an intermediary for passing a message from the United States to North Vietnam exploring the possibility of establishing diplomatc relations.

French officials said North Vietnam has an embassy in Paris and that the U.S. Embassy there could make direct contact if it wished.

U.S. officials here said the first order of business would be settling the fate of Americans missing in the Indochina war, and indicated the United States is awaiting a response from Hanoi.

It is understood that discussions with the Vietnamese Communist government officials could easily move beyond the fate of missing Americans to talks on Hanoi's relations with Thailand and its other neighbors in Southeast Asia.

Vote Sunday

Teamsters expected to reject union bid

CHICAGO (AP) — The trucking industry's nationwide contract offer to Teamsters — about 90 cents-an-hour short of what the 400,000 unionists want — is expected to be voted down this weekend, a source close to the negotiations says.

Members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters from around the nation are scheduled to vote Sunday on whether to approve the latest proposal or give approval to a strike. Union negotiators have recommended a rejection of the industry's offer, the source said.

The Ford administration has expressed fears that a nationwide strike by truckers could seriously hurt the country's economic recovery, and government officials have vowed to bring the talks back to Washington if the current deadlock is not broken.

They also have voiced concern that an agreement granting a hefty wage-benefits increase to Teamsters could be used as a basis for other labor negotiations this year and trigger renewed inflation.

The current National Master Freight Agreement between the trucking industry and the Teamsters expires March 31. Both sides say they have made their final money proposals, though negotiations continue on supplemental items.

At a meeting Wednesday at a hotel in suburban Chicago, nearly 1,000 Teamsters officials from 350 locals heard Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons outline details of the latest proposal from Trucking Employers, Inc., the industry's representatives.

It calls for hourly increases of 85 cents over 39 months, plus cost-of-living increases of at least 15 cents an hour in both July 1977 and July 1978, the source said. The industry also wants to impose a cost-of-living ceiling at 25 cents an hour in both years, the source said, while the union is demanding an uncapped increase.

For over-the-road, long-haul drivers were offered a 2-cent-a mile increase over the 39-month period, according to the source.

Industry representatives were unavailable for comment.

Currently, the truckers make between $7.18 and $7.33 an hour and over-the-road drivers make 18 cents a mile.

The union wants $1.75 an hour increase over three years with a 3½-cent-a-mile increase for over-the-road drivers, the source said.

The industry is offering improved health, welfare and pension increases totaling $11 a week over 39 months, while the union seeks weekly fringe increases amounting to $17.

The industry's complete package offer is 20 per cent higher over 39 months, but the union is asking for 30 per cent, the sources said.

2 L.A. councilmen near blows on vote

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two city councilmen have nearly come to blows over joint city and federal assistance to small and minority owned businesses.

A police sergeant-at-arms stepped between Arthur K. Snyder and Dave Cunningham as the pair stood inches apart, glaring at each other at a council meeting Thursday.

Cunningham apparently was angry over Snyder's motion to revamp an advisory group that makes recommendations on assistance to businesses considered economically disadvantaged. Snyder said the current structure of the group does not include representation of Mexican-American businessmen.

Acting Council President John Ferraro ruled Snyder's motion out of order and called for a vote on the original motion to extend for three months the contract between the city and the U.S. Office of Minority Business Enterprises.

The council voted 7 to 3 for the extension, less than the eight votes required for passage.

That enraged Cunningham who had earlier moved unsuccesfully for an adjournment to stall the vote until more members were present.

Cunningham then steamed around to the side of the council table where Snyder was seated. An angry exchange threatened to turn into a fistfight until the officer intervened and Councilman Gilbert Lindsay pulled Cunningham away.

Diamond Lane alterations

LOS ANGELES (AP)—State transportation officials have announced alterations aimed at easing traffic congestion related to the Santa Monica Freeway's experimental "Diamond Lane" for buses and carpool vehicles.

Donald E. Burns, secretary of California's Business and Transportation Agency, said Thursday that a Harbor Freeway transition ramp previously closed to westbound traffic will be opened. Access via the ramp to the Santa Monica Freeway will be contolled by a metered signal.

The operation sets aside a specially marked lane in each direction during rush hours for buses and for cars with at least two passengers. The experiment began March 15.

KENNETH HOUSEHOLDER

San Francisco man is No. 1 in Irish lottery: $800,000

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kenneth Householder, architect, says, "I've always loved those marvelous 18th Century houses in Dublin. I might even buy one." He'd just struck it rich in the Irish Sweepstakes.

Householder, a 58-year-old bachelor, found out Thursday his winning ticket is worth $800,000. So he's thinking of traveling to Ireland.

"Nothing would please me more," he said, "than getting on a slow boat for about a year."

Householder is only the eighth American to win the sweeps. He did it with ticket number XJB 13365, drawn from a huge drum in Dublin. Most winning tickets match horses listed for the Lincolnshire Handicap race at Doncaster, England, on Saturday, but Householder drew top prize, which is independent of the race.

Householder said he entered the sweepstakes "many times over the years but I'm not much of a gambler. I just did it for the charity causes, the proceeds going to hospitals and that sort of thing.

"I feel great about it, of course. But I'm still in a state of shock."

When a telephone call awakened him at dawn with the news, he said, "I didn't believe it. I thought some friend was putting me on. But later, the Irish brogue gave it away."

The call was from the Dublin Express, a newspaper in Ireland, and soon he was being deluged with calls from local news media.

With that, he said, "I knew for certain it was real. Now, I'm thinking of disappearing for awhile just to get some rest. Fortunately, nobody has asked me for a loan."

Householder, now on vacation from a post in the San Francisco Bureau of Architecture, grew up in Dallas and received an art degree from Southern Methodist University in 1942 and an architecture degree from Yale in 1947. He said he moved to San Francisco 23 years ago.

He said his joy is tempered by awareness of the Internal Revenue Service, "I don't know the first thing about taxes in that income bracket. I've just been a poor architect all my life."

$200 million in state purchases proposed

Prime Southland coast sites on list

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state's coastal commission has released a list of 154 coastal sites, worth up to $200 million, which it believes the state should buy for open space, recreation and wildlife habitat.

The land on the California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission's list totalled 36,500 acres.

Among the 51 top priority projects were expensive beach and upland sites near Los Angeles and on the Orange County coast.

The largest single project would involve purchase of 1,050 acres of the Irvine property in Orange County for an estimated $20 million.

Such sites could be "irreversibly committed to non-public uses if not acquired within the next few years," the commission said Thursday.

It also said purchases of top priority and the 56 second priority projects should be paid for by a bond issue on the November ballot. Two bond issue proposals are pending in the legislature.

Along with the Irvine property, top priority projects on the commission's list included:

—Whiskey Shoals, south of Point Arena in Mendocino County, 100 acres on the shore worth an estimated $1.3 million.

—Marina Dunes, north of Monterey, 169 acres, $1.7 million

—Soberanes Point and Notley's Landing in Big Sur, 300 acres, $3 million.

—Nicholas Canyon-Zuma beaches and upland support areas on Los Angeles County coast north of Malibu, more than 50 acres, $7 million, partly funded by Los Angeles County.

—Malibu Bluff, 130-acre park, vista point and camping area, $2.3 million, and Malibu Lagoon habitat area, 62 acres, $860,000.

—Ballona Lagoon near Venice, park and support area for nearby beach, 5 acres, $1 million.

—Point Vicente North, 184 acres of bluff and shoreline recreation land, $4.3 million.

—Bolsa Chica, wetlands and scenic open space, including park area overlooking Sunset Beach, 560 acres, $4.5 million.

—Central Laguna Beach Bluffs, bluff park adjacent to beach, 5 acres, $1.9 million.

—Dana Point Headlands and Palisades, north of San Clemente, blufftop view park and recreation areas, to support public investment in Dana Point Harbor, 160 acres, $3.8 million.

—Batiquitos Lagoon, northern shore, near Leucadia, San Diego County, 300 acres for recreational use, $1.6 million.

—Tijuana Estuary, at Imperial Beach, to preserve resource and habitat values and agricultural lands, 390 acres, $3 million, financed from state park funds.

Other projects in the commission's top priority list included:

—San Mateo Mid-coast Beaches, south of Half Moon Bay, expansion of state beach by 39.8 acres, $450,000.

—Morro Bay-South Bay, habitat and wetland protection at Otto Estate, Los Osos Creek, Sweet Springs and Cuesta Marsh, Cuesta Inlet and Sunset Terrace, 246 acres, upwards of $586,000.

Chairman M. B. Lane said the price estimates were based on county assessor valuations. He said in some cases owners might agree to sell public easements for scenic or access purposes, or might sell property allowing private use until the owner's death when the state would get full title.

"The commission strongly urges that these alternatives to full-fee acquisition be explored and implemented wherever appropriate," he said.

Can't order Cuban visas—judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge has refused to order the State Department to issue visas to five Cuban filmmakers who were to show their works at the Los Angeles Film Exposition.

Supporters of the filmmakers' planned visit said they believed the State Department's withholding of the visas was part of an election-year hardening of the Ford Administration's position vis-a-vis communist countries.

U.S. District Court Judge Malcolm M. Lucas said he believed there would be value in the visit, but said he had no jurisdiction because the Cubans had not yet applied for visas.

But paradoxically, said Filmex attorneys, no applications were made because the State Department had earlier told the filmmakers they would be able to get their visas at the last minute with no trouble. The exposition begins Monday.

Exposition officials said if entry is denied the filmmakers — Saul Yellin, Gutierrez Alea, Santiago Alverez, Julio Simoeau and Alina Sanches — their works will probably not be shown.

Preparations were made starting last October to bring the Cubans here for the exposition. But 11 days ago, the State Department told Filmex officials the visas would not be granted "because the time is not propitious" for the "purpose of the visit."

County sheds $145 million in projects from budget

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County supervisors have voted to postpone more than $145 million in building projects, including an intensive care medical center, as the Los Angeles County budget undergoes preliminary trimming.

Shelved by the supervisors Thursday were the $102 million stroke rehabilitation center at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital, a $32.1 million administrative complex for the Sheriff's Department, and a civic center in Bellflower costing $11.6 million.

The delays were seen necessary because of a raft of budget requests that, if approved, would require a property tax rate increase of $1.09 per $100 assessed valuation in 1976-67. The current rate is $4.52.

Supervisors decided not to put off construction of an $8 million health center in El Monte; likewise, they declined to delay the $6.6 million John Wesley Comprehensive Health Center.

Bachelor uncle determined to play dad to 4 kids despite suit

WILLOW SPRINGS (AP) — A 31-year-old bachelor who is playing mother to four daughters of his sister and brother-in-law, both deceased, is being taken to court by his sister's mother-in-law.

But that's only one small facet of the life of wiry Terry Fulton and his wards in a new two-story A-frame chalet he built himself in the softly rolling rangeland of northeastern California.

Fulton, who sports muttonchop whiskers, is "Uncle Terry" to Debbie, 12; Laura, 11; Tina, 7, and Tamara, 4. He holds an English degree and teaching credential, but is working as a therapist.

He says one of the nicest things about his situation is the help he gets from relatives and neighbors.

One want-ad for a babysitter produced "thousands of calls. I was never so overwhelmed," he said in a recent interview.

"I met some of the neatest people in Amador County. Some called and talked for hours. One man with 11 kids of his own said he knew I was single and probably would like to get away for a weekend once in a while so he told me just to leave the kids any weekend and take off," he added.

The girls' father died in 1973 at age 28 of cancer of the spine. Their mother, Fulton's sister, died of cancer last August at age 32.

Fulton took the children at his sister's request.

"I don't think it's so unique. These are kids that I love. They need a home and I am the one most capable of providing it,", he said.

They moved to the hills from Sacramento in November. One problem is transforming the girls into country folk. Hence Fulton's six acres have become a menagerie of horses, calves, chickens, dogs, cats and pet mice.

Fulton's guardianship is being challenged by Alsey Hamner of Sacramento, the children's grandmother. But Fulton looks on his bachelor-uncle-mother role as permanent. He doesn't anticipate any problems he can't handle.

He doesn't even plan to marry: "I have all the advantages of a family without a wife."

Neither does he think the girls are lacking a woman's influence, because of their contacts with female relatives and teachers.

"I don't feel I am masculinizing the girls," he said.

Fulton credits the book "On Death and Dying" with helping him prepare the girls for the death of their mother — at home.

"We protected the kids from the death of their father, and they suffered terribly when their dad died. I wanted them to remember (their mother's death) and appreciate that she wanted to die at home.

"The girls were very solicitous, doing whatever it took to make her comfortable. A real sense of maturity happened with the two oldest girls," Fulton said.

Quits job to be wife; to get unemployment benefits, judge rules

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A woman who quit her job in San Francisco and took up domestic duties with her husband in Sacramento will receive unemployment insurance benefits, a judge has ruled.

Sacramento County Superior Court Judge William H. Lally issued the order. It was limited to this one case, but it could be a precedent for thousands of California women who have quit jobs to be housewives, said attorney Richard Keith Corbin.

Corbin represented Judith A. Brittain, 32, who had worked nearly 5½ years for United Airlines in San Francisco as a $790-a-month computer operator.

Her husband, Bud, was transferred to a Sacramento job, but Mrs. Brittain said she was unable to transfer, too, and quit Jan. 15, 1975, after three months of living 100 miies apart.

The state Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board rejected her claim for benefits, saying "as it is the wife's duty to accompany her husband to a new location, it must be held that (she) had good cause to quit ... for domestic duty.

The board said she was ineligible because she did not provide the major supporting income for the family.

Mrs. Brittain said the law was discriminatory and that two incomes are needed to live.

Judge Lally ordered the state to pay unemployment benefits back to Jan. 12, 1975, which at $90 a week would amount to more than $5,000.

U.S. military heroin syndicate uncovered

$300 million in dope smuggled aboard Air Force cargo planes; 14 indicted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Operating from the safety of U.S. military bases in this country and Thailand, a syndicate led by Army and Air Force sergeants smuggled more than $300 million in pure heroin into this country on Air Force tanker planes, federal officials say.

The heroin was hidden in false bottoms attached to wooden tables and other furniture shipped from U Tapao Air force Base in Thailand as military baggage or was concealed in black AWOL bags — the small hand luggage carried by returning GIs.

That was the account given Thursday by officials here and in Washington after federal indictments were returned in Raleigh against 14 persons, most of them present or former military men, on charges of conspiring to import heroin.

The three-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury was made public after 11 of the defendants were arrested in a series of coordinated raids by military police, federal agents and local police. Three of those indicted were already in jail, one in this country and two in Thailand.

The heroin arrived via Strategic Air Command planes at Mather and Travis air force bases in California, Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C., and Langley Air Force Base, Va., officials said, and was soon on it way to the streets of New York and other major cities.

At least 220 pounds of heroin came into this country that way between August 1974 and last October when the operation began to fall apart, officials of the Justice Deaprtment and the Drug Enforcement Administration said.

But the syndicate had been operating since 1968 from the American Star Bar on Pittbury Road in Bangkok, and officials refused to say how much heroin the ring might have shipped into this country.

Peter N. Bensinger, federal drug enforcement administrator, said in Washington that the demise of the syndicate would "have a major crippling impact on importation of heroin into the United States."

The 220 pounds of heroin covered in the indictment would supply 20,000 addicts for one day when diluted for street sale, he said.

Federal officials placed the street value of a kilogram of pure heroin — 2.2 pounds — at more than $3 million, which would bring the value of the drugs involved in the case to more than $300 million.

"I would say that this organization would have to be classified as one of the largest heroin smuggling organizations in the world which would directly affect the United States, particularly the East Coast," said Don Ashton, chief of the drug enforcement agency in North Carolna.

One of those indicted in the heroin conspiracy was Leslie "Ike" Atkinson, 50, a retired Army master sergeant from Goldsboro, N.C., who is serving a 19-year sentence in the federal prison in Atlanta on a previous conviction for importing heroin from Thailand.

The indictment said Atkinson had continued to run the operation from his prison cell with the help of his daughter, Leslie Sharon Atkinson Arrington, 24, and her husband, Michael Otis Arrington, 24, of Raleigh, both of whom were also indicted.

Among the others indicted were James Smeddley, 54, described as the procurer of heroin, and Jasper Myrick Jr., 23, of Montgomery, Ala., an alleged courier. Both are now serving terms in Kalang Prison in Bangkok.

The syndicate began to crumble last October when a U.S. military customs inspector made a routine check of household goods that Myrick, then an Army specialist in Bangkok, planned to ship home.

The inspector noticed that a wooden table Myrick was shipping home was unusually heavy. He took it apart and found several plastic bags full of white powder. The Army sent a team of investigators to the scene. Before they were finished, they came up with more than 100 pounds of heroin in Myrick's furniture.

Also named in the indictments, for allegedly serving as packers, couriers or mailers of heroin to other defendants in the United States were Freddie Clay Thornton, 40, Detroit; Rudolph Valentino Jennings, 49, Goldsboro, N.C.; William King Wright, 30, Washington; William Thomas, 42, Goldsboro; Monroe Lorenzo Martin Jr., 43, Long Beach, Calif.; Robert Ernest Patterson, 34, Hampton, Va.; William Kelly Brown, 38, Augusta, Ga.; James McArthur, 40, Fayetteville, N.C.; and Charles Murphy Gillis, 40, Goldsboro.

The maximum penalty for conspiracy to import heroin is a $25,000 fine and 15 years in prison.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decline in U.S. agricultural exports helped trigger the second consecutive monthly deficit in the nation's foreign trade accounts during February, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the United States imported $140.8 million more than it exported in February. That compared with a $72.6 million deficit in January and marked the first monthly back-to-back deficits in just over a year.

Imports exceeded exports by a combined total of $656.8 million in December 1974, and January 1975. The nation then registered 11 consecutive monthly trade surpluses before this January's deficit.

The monthly surpluses, which produced a surplus of $11.05 billion for all of 1975, were expected to shrink gradually this year due to the interplay of the U.S. economy with its trading partners.

But the two monthly deficits represented an erosion more sudden and dramatic than expected.

Over-all, imports fell by 2.6 per cent in February, marking the first decline since October. Exports, however, plunged even more sharply — 3.3 per cent — for their third consecutive monthly decline.

The major export categories registering declines during the month were wheat, down by $91.1 million to $302.2 million; soybeans, off $79.2 million to $743.5 million; raw tobacco, down $52.1 million to $105.2 million, and coal down $39.3 million to $186.4 million.

The February deficit was registered despite a 19.3 per cent drop in the volume of petroleum and petroleum product imports, which have been a crucial factor in the nation's trade balance over the last two years.

The American Petroleum Institute had reported mounting petroleum imports during the month but these apparently were not recorded in the Commerce trade figures because of differences between the institute's method of collecting data and the Custom Bureau's system for registering imports.

The general expectation this year is for mounting oil imports as the U.S. recovery stokes demand for energy.

Commerce said the only major trade category showing an increase on the export side was the machinery and transport sector, which includes aircraft, motor vehicles, electrical and agricultural machinery. That sector climbed $82.1 million to $3.9 billion.

The softening of the market for U.S. exports was an indication that the economies of U.S. trading partners generally have not recovered strongly enough from the recent worldwide recession to spur demand for American goods. On the other hand, the strength of the U.S. economy has been expected to increase demand for the raw materials and consumer goods which constitute the bulk of U.S. imports.

Defense official quits over payment by firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The resignation of Asst. Defense Secretary Albert C. Hall was accepted by President Ford Thursday, following disclosures that Hall received what were described as termination payments for past services as an executive with the Martin-Marietta Corp.

ALBERT C. HALL

The brief White House announcement said the resignation was effective Thursday.

It added that in accordance with the request of the 61-year-old Hall Ford will withdraw his nomination of Hall to be an assistant secretary of the Air Force for research and development. The nomination was sent to the Senate on March 3.

Dr. Hall has been serving as assistant secretary of defense for intelligence, his second Pentagon post in the last dozen years.

Previously he was a research specialist with Martin-Marietta. Hall said that payments he received from 1972 to 1974 were for prior services to the firm and that there was no conflict of interest with his Pentagon post and that he had no commitment to return to Martin-Marietta.

Hall previously had left the firm to accept a Defense Department post in the office of research and development in 1963 to 1965 and afterwards worked for the firm, which has defense contracts. He left the firm for the second time in 1971 to return to the Defense Department.

Ontario garage blazes erupt

Ontario police and firemen this morning are searching for three or four juveniles believed to have set fire to a series of garages behind an apartment complex at 210 N. Begonia St., Thursday night.

The fire, reported at 8:24 p.m. by nearby residents destroyed three vacant car garages, causing several thousand dollars' damage. Fire Inspector Mikel Park on the scene said that the fire was intentionally set, but the method used to set the fire has yet to be determined.

An apartment tenant told police that just before the fire he had seen four juveniles around the carports. Several residents of the area reported hearing an explosion just as the fire was reported.

Park said that lately there have been a rash of intentionally set carport and garage fires in west end with juveniles believed responsible.

Chino man rearrested in heroin ring controversy

A Chino man was one of three men rearrested by members of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Detail Thursday in the investigation into an alleged $8 million Southern California heroin ring.

Ramon Rodriquez of 4431 Los Serranos Blvd., Chino, was among 17 persons released on a $500 personal bond Tuesday by U.S. Magistrate Lek von Kaesborg of San Bernardino shortly after their arraignment on various narcotics charges.

Rodriquez was rearrested at his home Thursday afte the federal investigators criticized the magistrate's action as far too lenient and appealed to a federal court on Wednesday. U.S. Dist. Court Judge William Gray in Los Angeles ordered the higher bonds.

Rodriquez is now in Los Angeles Coiunty Jail along with the two other men rearrested in the investigation in lieu of $25,000 bail each. The two other men rearrested were Jerome Pavese of San Bernardino and William McGranahan of Bloomington. One other man is still being sought, not named by authorities, and will be rearrested. The four are charged with conspiracy to import heroin, conspiracy to possess heroin and possession of heroin with intent to distribute it.

The remaining 13 persons were considered responsible enough to pay a higher bail of $10,000 each without being rearrested. The 13 others have until April 2 to post the increased bail or show cause why it's too high.

The 17 were among 32 arrested Monday by DEA agents in Southern California on various federal narcotics charges.

DEA spokesman said the arrests culminated a seven-month investigation into a large-scale heroin ring they believe did as much as $8 million a month in sales in Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

Guardsmen in cycle marathon

Valley units of the California National Guard will demonstrate their support of the Easter Seal Society for crippled children and adults by conducting a 20-hour cycle marathon coinciding with the National Easter Seal Telethon on Saturday and Sunday.

At local Army and Air National Guard units in Pomona and Ontario, volunteer members will pedal stationary odometer-equipped exercycles for "per-mile" contributions to the society.

Flu risks are too high to gamble, says researcher

NEW YORK (AP) — The lessons of the history of influenza, in its cyclical sweeps around the globe, lend support to the decision to vaccinate the American population against the flu, a leading researcher says.

No one knows for certain if there will be a flu outbreak in the United States this coming winter, but the risks are too high to gamble on doing nothing, officials said as the medical drama unfolded.

"I think we really have no other choice," said the flu researcher, Dr. Edwin D. Kilbourne, of the decision to develop a vaccine. President Ford on Thursday asked Congress for $135 million to pay for the flu vaccination.

The aim is to produce enough vaccine to inoculate the entire population of the country — 215 million people — to prevent a re-enactment of the devastating pandemic of 1918-19. A flu outbreak at Fort Dix, N.J., last month was blamed on a swine-type virus, similar to the one that caused the worldwide outbreak.

"We would all be comfortable with more evidence of a spread outside Fort Dix, but the lessons of history are that every time there is a virus shift of this magnitude we've had a pandemic," said Kilbourne, who is chairman of the department of microbiology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine. A pandemic is a worldwide epidemic.

Kilbourne, one of those who recommended that the vaccine be produced, discounted suggestions that Ford's decision was politically motivated. "The initiative came from the scientific community," he said, "from scientists outside of government."

"It's an urgent kind of situation," the researcher said in an interview. "The Presidet made a bold and courageous decision. This is something that's never been tried before."

Kilbourne said, "We have definite evidence of human transmission of swine virus and that's never been seen before. We predict something's going to happen."

In the pandemic of a half-century ago, the death toll throughout the world reached 20 million, including 548,000 Americans. One virologist has said the mortality from a flu outbreak this winter could be 2 per cent — a conservative estimate — and that could mean 4 million deaths in this country.

The flu comes and goes in cycles. About every 10 years there is a major change in the virus and major epidemics result.

The changes apparently occur in the surface antigens of the virus. The antigens are the parts of the virus structure that trigger the body's defense mechanisms, antibodies. With new or changed antigens, the body has no way of recognizing them, and the individual is vulnerable, naked against the enemy.

President Ford asked Congress to approve his plan for a massive vaccination plan against swine flu virus before the April recess so that an adequate supply of vaccine can be available for full-scale immunization by the beginning of September.

Officials Thursday established the following timetable for production, testing and distribution of the vaccine: first small lots available in mid-April for clinical testing, test data ready by early June; then a decision on the concentration and dosage form of the vaccine, with coordinated distribution beginning later in June.

Burbank airport to close

BURBANK (AP)— Operators of the nation's largest privately owned airport with commercial airline service say airlines and tenants at the Hollywood-Burbank Airport will have to move out by May 1977.

Lockheed Air Terminal, Inc., which operates the airport, had said earlier that the airport would be closed unless public agencies prevented sale of the 600-acre site for private development.

The airport's 88 tenants will receive termination notices by April 30.

Rabin party faces ordeal over myriad problems

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli officials are quarreling over money and the fuss ranges from military training to free orange juice for mailmen.

Political commentators are saying that budget problems, labor relations and the tightening grip of recession could present Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor party government with the gravest domestic ordeal since it took office almost two years ago.

Part of the problem is inflation, which has hit Israelis at a combined rate of 117 per cent for the past two years. Now the Defense Ministry complains that Israel's military machine faces another 32 per cent jump in prices this year.

Ministry officials have protested to the treasury that the vital defense allotment of $4.4 billion — more than one-third of the country's entire budget — allows for only 25 per cent higher prices, and the military needs another $175 million.

The treasury has refused, and Defense Ministry sources say this means less army training, less research and development for new equipment, and no reduction of Israel's dependance on the United States for weapons.

Rabin's Cabinet voted later, however, to review the budget if the Defense Ministry can't pay its bills.

The financial pinch extends beyond the Defense Ministry. Postal rates are going up by 33 per cent and an Israeli lucky enough to get a new telephone will have to pay $217 to install it. The national bus company has reduced its services and fired 450 drivers, but says it will still be unable to meet its next payroll.

The Friedman Co., a Jerusalem firm whose stoves and burners heat most Israeli homes, has laid off half its workers. The Red Sea town of Elath is deeply concerned by the government's decision to close its Timna copper mines, which were smelting ore in Biblical times but now produce at a loss of millions of dollars a year.

Income Tax Commissioner Yitzhak Mann has resigned, complaining that Israel's tax reforms have not gone far enough toward increasing government revenues. Michael Bruno, economic adviser to the treasury, also quit on the grounds that his urging of tighter budget measures was ignored.

The latest stir is from 20,000 civil servants who threaten "drastic action" if their special tax-free bonuses are cut, as a government - appointed committee has recommended.

Prof. Haim Barkai, head of the committee, looked into Israeli civil service fringe benefits and found that postal workers for years have been getting an extra $10 a month for emptying mailboxes, and that mailmen draw an allowance of $2 a week for riding bicycles.

Mailmen, the Hebrew University professor said, also get a $3-a-month allowance for orange juice or other beverages.

Income tax workers get a "social alienation" allowance because collecting taxes is a shameful occupation, by an Israeli standard harking back to the days of Jewish ghettos. Oil workers receive a "smell" increment because of the odors they endure.

The newspaper Maariv calculated that the scores of special allowances cost taxpayers $12 million a year.

Barkai told the government that 20,000 civil servants were getting unnecessary payments — such as danger money for scrubbing floors — and another 22,000 were demanding similar payments.

Rabin's cabinet promptly split on whether to act, but the ministers compromised, accepted the report and passed it on to another committee.

Maariv said the dispute could "turn the civil service into a battlefield."

Rescue units to practice in L.V. mock disaster

Residents of La Verne will be wasting their time looking for a fire when the city's fire alarms sound early Saturday morning.

It isn't often that the community can be warned in advance of a "disaster," but the Pomona Red Cross is doing just that.

On Saturday morning, disaster-training groups will gather at La Verne College for a mock disaster, which will depict an airplane crashing into a campus dormitory.

Participating in the training session will be Red Cross units, Citizen Band radio groups, paramedics from Los Angeles County, La Verne Fire Department personnel, staffs from Pomona Valley and San Dimas community hospitals, local ambulance crews and volunteer first aiders.

Students will be made-up to resemble "victims" of the disaster.

The mock disaster will last into the early afternoon, according to Robert Fields, disaster training chairman for the Pomona Red Cross Chapter.

Regulation for S.D. scenic zone disputed but approved

The San Dimas City Council has tentatively approved standards for a scenic highway zone designed to preserve the natural setting along various streets.

But the 3-2 vote Monday saw members Jim Lough and James McLean dissenting in an issue over whether uniform setback requirements should be required on two streets or each property should be considered individually

At the urging of Doug Fordyce, president of the Via Verde Homeowners Association, Mayor Marvin Ersher and Councilmen Terry Dipple and Philip Wax agreed to uniform setbacks for Via Verde and Puente Street.

Lough and McLean both objected.

Planning Director Mark Goldberg explained in his report that the purpose of the zone is "to provide a means of implementing the scenic highways element of the General Plan by reviewing the development of adjacent property to minimize the impact upon scenic corridors."

The zone will conserve the natural landscaping, creeks and lakes adjacent to the major thoroughfares within the city, and architectural development must be consistent with the natural setting, explained Goldberg.

The modified motion approved by the council calls for 50-foot setbacks in residential areas along Via Verde and Puente; 20-foot setbacks for three corners at Via Verde and Puente and the corners of San Dimas Avenue and Via Verde; 25-foot setback for the nine-acre proposed shopping center site near Puente and Via Verde.

Precise plans for development would determine setbacks along San Dimas Canyon Road, Arrow Highway, Puddingstone Drive and Foothill Boulevard.

Fordyce said this latter was a "piecemeal approach with insufficient guarantees that what is left after going piece by piece will end up a scenic highway." He voiced a preference for the setback approach rather than parcel by parcel.

McLean answered that it would not be "piecemeal," but would be individual consideration of each setback in order to allow "flexibility and room for existing structures and future development. To dictate a definite setback may not be conducive to existing or future development."

Lough agreed, saying such definite setbacks could "cause hardship on some property owners, I don't want to take a shotgun approach to this."

Ersher said he had no strong opposition to the precise plan, but would prefer requirements. He also suggested that the Via Verde Homeowners Assocation establish an agreement for a maintenance district to unkeep the slopes of the highway in that area.

The mayor then moved for modification of the precise plan and establishment of exact setbacks for Via Verde and Puente. Dipple seconded the motion.

In opposing the motion, Lough said the council could be faced with a possible suit from individual property owners because such setbacks might render their land unusable.

The ordinance will go back to the Planning Commission now for report before returning to the council for final report.

ETHELYN RICHARDSON of Diamond Bar has been named manager of Bank of America's office in Pico Rivera. She has been with the bank since 1964, and formerly was assistant manager for loans in the La Puente office. She and her husband, David, have five children.

Environmental group lists 'Dirty Dozen'

Rhodes calls it a 'cheap publicity gimmick'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental group has put House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes and 11 other congressmen on its "Dirty Dozen" list and vowed to work to defeat them in the November election.

Environmental Action, Inc., claimed that it has helped knock off 22 of 31 incumbents it named to three prior "Dirty Dozen" lists since 1970. It said the targets were chosen on their voting records, their seniority and committee assignments, and the "quality" of their opponents in the election.

Rhodes, who has represented his Arizona district for 24 years, termed the list "a cheap publicity gimmick and a phony test of environmental concern. Most of the members on the list are not antienvironment, but proemployment."

Another target, Rep. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, said he was more worried about protecting jobs and "ten-toed babies" than about "protecting lizards and three-toed salamanders."

Nine targets are Republicans and three Democrats. Environmental Action, which said its campaign is nonpartisan, said it would produce radio and newspaper ads for use against the 12. A staff member will visit each district to help organize local opposition, it said.

Environmental Action tabulated votes on 14 issues, including strip mining, nuclear energy research and insurance, automobile fuel conservation and solar energy development.

The "Dirty Dozen" averaged less than two correct votes in Environmental Action's eyes. Two congressmen were graded zero: Donald D. Clancy, R-Ohio, and Albert W. Johnson, R-Pa. Rhodes and Symms each voted the way Environmental Action wanted only once. Richard C. White, D-Tex., voted Environmental Action's way three times.

Samuel L. Devine, R-Ohio, is on the list for the third time and Burt Talcott, R-Calif., for the second.

Environmental Action claims it had a hand in defeating former Rep. Wayne Aspinall, then chairman of the House Interior Committee, in 1972.

Of the 31 different men on previous lists, two retired, five lost primary fights and 17 were beaten in general elections, the group said. During the same period, only 10 per cent of all House incumbents lost, it said.

Rhodes noted that nine of the 14 votes on the "Dirty Dozen" list were energy related. "Environmental Action has overlooked the relationship between energy and jobs," said Rhodes, adding that the Ford administration has estimated that "the votes in question represent close to a half a million new jobs. Environmental Action must be working for a world consisting of unemployed people living in cold, drafty caves."

Rhodes said the ratings were "arbitrary, misleading and grossly unfair." He and other members on the list have signed a letter asking the Fair Campaign Practices Committee to investigate the ethical questions raised by such ratings, the Republican leader said.

Dynamics gets arms job worth $10½ million

The General Dynamics plant in Pomona has received a $10.5 million contract from the U.S. Army Missile Command to develop the Viper, an anti-tank weapon.

A shoulder-fired rocket, the Viper weighs less than seven pounds but has substantially greater tank-killing capability than previous light anti-tank weapons, said officials.

The compact weapon is 27-inches long when carried and extends to 44 inches for firing.

The Viper's front and rear sights deploy automatically when the gunner extends the launching tube which holds the rocket. The gunner then simply arms the weapon, aims and fires. The launching tube is then discarded.

The anti-tank rocket can be used at ranges from 10 to 500 meters.

Under the 43-month engineering development phase of the new contract, the Pomona plant will design and develop the Viper's warhead, firing mechanisms and sights.

Atlantic Research will provide the rocket motor and Brunswick the launch tube. Final assembly of the weapon will be conducted at the Army's ammunition plant in Burlington, Iowa.

Several thousand of the new weapons will be delivered during the engineering development phase, with long range production expected to be in "multimillion quantities," officials said.

INFANT TRAINING

Mrs. Judy Cook, a teacher in the infant stimulation program at Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens, offers Tom Duncan suggestions for helping his daughter, Sarah Ann, 10 months old. Parents participate in the infant training program.

Parents playing bigger role: teaching retarded

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

The newest program offered by the Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens is designed to stimulate retarded or developmentally slow infants to reach their maximum potential.

Called an infant stimulation class, the program is geared toward training the parents to stimulate their baby and enhance its development.

According to a teacher in the program, Judy Cook, the OPARC staffers are basically in a supportive role to the parents.

She stressed the importance of reaching the family when the baby is very tiny and immediately starting a program which will establish good developmental training in the infant.

"We evaluate each baby and then work with the parents to encourage techniques and skills to help their child," Mrs. Cook said.

She stressed that as soon as a child is identified as handicapped, stimulation should begin. This program at the center is geared for infants from just a few weeks to 36 months old.

Activities in which the parents and child work together under supervision include using belly boards to encourage crawling; exercises in front of floor-level mirrors, and introduction to cup drinking and spoon handling to encourage the child's skills.

"I've seen handicapped 6-year-olds on a bottle only because some parent didn't encourage the baby to use a cup," the teacher reported.

Mrs. Cook said probably the most important value in the OPARC program comes from the parents sharing experiences with each other.

"When one parent sees something which works with another baby, the parent is encouraged to try it," added the teacher.

The infant class is held at OPARC Monday through Friday mornings and parents usually attend about twice a week. This staggers the 12 children enrolled so that about four are present each morning.

Mrs. Cook said that some funding for the class is available to families through the San Gabriel Valley Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled, through welfare and other aid programs and through the United Way.

While the infant stimulation class is a newer service of OPARC, the program for developing the sensory and motor activities for preschoolers between the ages of 2 and 5 is no less important, said Lilah Beer and Jean Corrigan, teachers.

IT'S NOT EASY

Most children learn to scamper over steps rapidly, but Andy Anderson, a student in OPARC preschool, needs help from teacher Jean Corrigan to maintain balance.

The dozen youngsters now attending these classes each morning at the Montclair center are taught balance, grasp control, and the basic requirement for feeding and caring for themselves.

These youngsters also learn hand-eye coordination, the identification of body parts and pre-speech skills.

They, too, have the opportunity to share experiences with their peer group and thus gain self-esteem, the teachers said.

Another program at OPARC is for adults who are taught techniques needed to cope with community living.

Hetty Doesberg, a director of the educational program, said about 35 adults are learning domestic skills, music appreciation, crafts and other self-sustaining procedures in classes each morning.

Teachers take groups of students into the community to teach them how to shop, visit beauty shops and order meals.

Mrs. Doesberg said that while the school could handle 122 students, the current enrollment is 70.

"We are trying hard to seek out those handicapped children and adults in the community who can benefit by our center," she said. "We carefully evaluate each potential student and often direct them to other agencies in the valley which can help."

Mrs. Doesberg added that, at present, state funding for programs at OPARC, have been frozen. She said this means that some youngsters who need help are not being admitted to the school.

But she added encouragement by saying that there are still some financial aid programs available to families.

Mrs. Doesberg is interested in talking with parents who have a child which has a handicap. She can be reached at OPARC, 9160 Monte Vista Ave., Montclair, or by calling 626-5108.

Claremont man held in rape cases

A Claremont man has been arrested by sheriff's deputies and named as a suspect in several kidnapings and rapes in the valley area.

The man, Gerald McDonald Rogers, 36, 530 S. Carleton Place, was arrested by deputies from the Industry station after a license number given them was traced to him. The number was supplied by a West Covina woman who was attacked earlier this month.

Sheriff's Lt. Ray Schartau said Rogers, a solicitator, is suspected of being the man who grabbed an 18-year-old girl in Hacienda Heights Feb. 18, dragged her into his van, drove to a remote area and attacked her. He also is suspected in a similar attack in Covina March 19.

Rogers was identified by the two victims at the industry station after his arrest, Schartau said. The case has been submitted to the District Attorney's office for study, he added. Meanwhile, Rogers, reportedly a parolee, was being held without bail on suspicion of kidnaping and rape.

Police chief post disclosed statewide

An invitation seeking applications for the vacant post of police chief for the city of Pomona has been mailed to law enforcement agencies throughout the state.

The position became vacant March 1 with the resignation of F.P. Wallich who was chief since 1973.

Applicants' resumes will be accepted through May 7 and should be directed to Jerrold R. Gonce, city administrator. Selection of the chief will be made by Gonce with the concurrence of the City Council.

A screening committee of seven persons has been set up for an oral review of the most qualified applicants. Among the board members is Officer Richard M. Tefank, president of the Pomona Police Officers Association.

The Pomona Police Department is made up of 141 sworn personnel and 31 civilian employes.

Before leaving, Wallick appointed Richard A. Slaght acting chief, an appointment okayed later by the City Council. Slaght is the department's highest-ranking officer, and only captain.

NAACP not in repair project

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) is not in any way involved with the "Pilot Community Action and Youth Project," said project Spokesman Ben Trammell of Pomona.

Trammell is one of a group of citizens spearheading a drive to convert abandoned service stations in Pomona into self-service automotive repair centers.

In a March 14 article in the Progress Bulletin announcing this project, it was reported that a representative of the Pomona Valley Branch of the NAACP was involved in planning it and would attend a public meeting at which it would be explained.

This was a misrepresentation, said Trammell.

Pomona night club hit by blaze

The fire was intentionally set in a storage area between the commercial operation owned by Ronald Richardson and Dan Marshall and a home at the rear of the property, according to Fire Chief John Fowlkes. The fire was discovered at 1:22 a.m. by Pomona policemen on a routine patrol of the club.

There were only a few patrons at the club and they were quickly cleared out. Two engine companies, a truck and rescue responded to the call from the police officers. Battalion Chief Dwaine Lindebaum was in charge.

There was light smoke damage, and glasses and other materials stored there were destroyed.

Checks, balances of economics

A number of writers have called attention to the fact that 1976 is not only the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. It is also the bicentennary of the publication of another work which was to profoundly influence the course of history — Adam Smith's "An Inquiry Into the Wealth of Nations."

That both appeared in the same year may have been a coincidence of the calendar, but there the coincidence ends. Each document was in its own way a radical statement for the times which ignited the imaginations and energies of men, the one in the sphere of politics and government, the other in economics.

If the American experience has proved anything, it is that political freedom and progress and economic freedom and progress are inseparable.

For all the sweeping assertions in the Declaration of Independence, the signers of that document, many of whom later participated in the framing of the Constitution of the United States, were pragmatists and students of history.

Aware of the natural tendency of men, and of governments composed of men, to seek their own self-aggrandizement, they wrote into the Constitution a system of checks and balances designed to ensure a division of power among the three branches of the new federal government. They also recognized, in the First Amendment, that the free competition of ideas was an indispensable bulwark against tyranny.

Similarly, the Scotsman Smith argued that "it is not from the benevolence of the butcher, the brewer or the baker that we expect our dinner, but from their regard to their self-interest. We address ourselves not to their humanity but to their self-love, and never talk to them of our necessities but of their advantage."

It was through the free competition of these individual self-interests, Smith argued, that the general good of society was served. In an economic counterpart of the political system of checks and balances, he postulated an "invisible hand" which regulated supply and demand, production and consumption, prices and wages.

This, of course, was a description of an ideal state, unattainable by men, as Smith, a pragmatist himself, fully realized. Far from being the apostle of pure laissez faire capitalism, as he has often been characterized, he knew that "people of the same trade seldom meet together but the conversation ends in a conspiracy against the public, or in some diversion to raise prices."

It was, however, chiefly against the then-prevailing system of mercantilism — the government's chartering of monopolies to favored domestic industries at the expense of colonies, the infinitely detailed laws regulating prices and wages, production and trade — that "The Wealth of Nations" was directed.

If Adam Smith had been George III, there never would have been a Boston Tea Party, the result of a monopoly vested in the British East India Tea Company. Had Parliament been composed of Adam Smiths, the Americans would have been permitted to sever their ties with Britain peacefully to pursue their own destiny, to the benefit of both mother country and colonies.

One likes to think that were Adam Smith to return today, he would be pleased at the nation which has been the most outstanding example of his philosophy in practice. For all its obvious shortcomings, the United States has achieved the greatest economic justice for the greatest number, as well as the greatest measure of individual freedom within the confines of necessary law.

That is as much as he, or the signers of the Declaration of Independence, could have hoped for in 1776

A bargain for the state

Dear Editor:

I would like to reply to your Sacramento columnist Earl G. Waters who wrote in your Tuesday edition that state college presidents live in mansions valued from $70,000 to $393,000 but the rents paid are as low as $142 a month.

Since I have never visited Chancellor Glen S. Dumke's residence in Bel Air, nor the presidential residences at Chico, Fresno or San Luis Obispo, I cannot speak for the merits of the landlord-tenant arrangements there.

However, I can, with some authority, speak for the Cal Poly Pomona arrangement, since my family lived in the same residence now occupied by the Robert C. Kramers from 1927 until 1943. And I suspect that many of the plus benefits for the university of having the first family live there would apply with equal justice to the other situations as well.

True, the Kramers are getting a lot of shelter for the alleged modest rental charged them, but please bear in mind that this residence was built in 1926. Fifty year old houses develop some real problems. Even at 25 years wiring becomes inadequate. By 50 years the plumbing and also the heating ducting, not to mention the fixtures and furnaces begin to show signs of needing replacement or rehabilitation.

It's a little known fact that the Kramer residence suffered from an economy program during construction. Normally quite frugal, W.K. Kellogg came back to himself after an uncharacteristic spending spree and decreed certain economies which adversely affected the quality of the finished house.

Mute testimonial of this is the fire which occurred in the late '20s in the dining room area. Although the Pomona Fire Department performed with its usual efficiency even in those days, inadequate firestops and unseen construction short-cuts resulted in an unsafe condition. The Kramers are living with this.

I'm sure if he had his druthers, President Ford and family would opt to live at Camp David, but the White House (once burned by the British in 1812) is the symbolic residence of the first family. So is the Kramer residence at Cal Poly Pomona and very likely the other presidential tenants at the other campuses. This makes them targets of whatever could happen during times of stress such as occurred in the late '60s and early '70s. This proved too much for President Howard Neville (and his wife Fredrika) at Claremont Men's College who was driven away after only one year's tenure by student and off-campus agitators who made this residence less than a joy to live in.

On the positive side, the Kramers have been gracious hosts to campus and community groups. They have opened their home to ever so many social occasions. And it is most presentable in spite of its age and infirmities. A quick comparison of this residence (built at a third of the cost) with the main W.K. Kellogg home further up the hill will convince the most casual viewer that the state has a splendid tenant. Kellogg Hall, as it's called, is a shambles. The cost of restoring to anything like the Kramer residence's condition would be prohibitive. It would be cheaper to rebuild, perhaps.

Sure, the Kramers are getting low cost square footage, but they are contributing a lot. They are also putting up with a lot of inconveniences in the way of outdated residential carry overs. They also expose themselves as the first family of the nation does to a goldfish bowl existence. For this, I submit, their low cost square footage arrangement is a bargain . . . for the state! — Norman Williamson Jr., Claremont

WASHINGTON — Secret intelligence reports warn that the shah of Iran, if he wanted to, could land his army in Saudi Arabia and annex its oil fields.

This possibility worries high-level U.S. officials. The shah, they realize, is living beyond his means. For all his vaunted riches, he is deeply in debt. Iran owes several billion dollars in bilateral and multilateral loans. The outstanding debt to the United States alone is over $1 billion.

Iran's oil reserves, meanwhile, are expected to last no longer than two decades. World demand for Iranian oil, at the same time, has fallen off sharply. This has left the shah embarrassingly short of money to pay for his grandiose of a modern Persian empire.

He is burdened down, heaviest of all, with expensive armaments. The United States has sold him $8.6 billion worth of weapons during the past three years. The purpose has been to make the shah the protector of the Persian Gulf, the source of oil now needed to run America's factories and automobiles.

But some Arab nations, particularly Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, are beginning to wonder who will protect them from their protector. Intelligence reports tell of mounting tension in the vital Persian Gulf area.

The Pentagon's intelligence estimates, stamped "Secret-Sensitive," indicate that the shah's military machine could overwhelm Saudi Arabia. According to these documents, Iran has an Air Force of 75,000 men, including 645 pilots of whom 450 are trained to fly jets.

Saudi Arabia, in contrast, has a far smaller 15,000-man air force. Of these, 200 are pilots and only 90 are jet-trained. The Saudi's 114 fighter planes would also be no match for the shah's 338 planes, which include 162 supersonic F-4 Phantoms.

Iran also has a fleet of 483 helicopters, many of them suitable for airlifting troops. Saudi Arabia has but 35 helicopters, all of them described as "utility" aircraft.

On the sea, the shah's 18,500-man navy is training to man three destroyers, four frigates and three submarines recently purchased from the United States. Saudi Arabia's insignificant 1,500-man navy doesn't possess a single warship of any size.

The shah, meanwhile, has established peaceful relations with neighboring Iraq, a traditional enemy of Iran. If the shah should move against Saudi Arabia, however, some analysts believe the Iraqis would break their agreement with the shah and support the Saudis.

This would involve a 15,000-man air force, with 358 jet fighters and 171 helicopters, plus a 3,000-man navy, with 11 missile boats. And from a greater distance, Egypt and Jordan would also be expected to back Saudi Arabia. This would add another 628 fighter planes, 37 jet bombers, 5 destroyers, 12 submarines and 14 missile boats to the Arab forces.

SCREW SCANDAL: In a classic case of a battle being lost for want of a horseshoe nail, shoddy screws have cost the government billions and have contributed to air crashes.

Metal screws hold together everything from computers to high-stress airplane parts. When screws snap or loosen, the equipment may cease to function or may even self-destruct.

Yet unscrupulous manufacturers have produced screws that have caused costly accidents. The nut-and-bolt industry could have avoided these disasters by manufacturing more craftsmanlike products. But the specifications for screws and nuts are fixed by industry-run "standards committees," which have been more interested in profits than in safety.

Footnote: Industrial spokesmen insist that "the present specifications have served industry well" and that any new testing method would be "too costly and unnecessary."

Big government campaign issue

By Terry Wade
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — There are times in every nation's history when government becomes the point rather than the result of political debate. Such was the case nearly 200 years ago when a young colony, after decades of debating issues — stamp taxes, tea taxes, etc. —, made government, English government, the issue.

Now, two centuries later, government may once again overshadow other societal problems as the issue. Fortunately the system born of armed struggle has provided for such a review, without the need of arms. Unlike the temper of 1776, few believe we need dramatic change and even fewer believe the means used by our forefathers is necessary now.

The elections of 1976 may afford the same opportunity to Americans as the arms of 1776. All the major presidential candidates have expressed themselves on our government. Republican President and candidate Gerald Ford presides over the biggest government history has ever known, yet he acknowledges, "to hold down the cost of living we must hold down the cost of government."

Was that State of the Union remark rhetoric? Despite proposing the largest federal budget to date Ford did cut the growth of government in half and has promised a balanced budget within five years.

Ford's GOP opponent, Ronald Reagan, in January said "They (the American people) want government off their backs and out of their pocketbooks." Reagan emphasized his anti-government philosophy with his ill-fated proposal to shift $90 billion in government programs to states. He also proposed a "Transfer of funds" along with the responsibility.

In the Democratic nomination race an anti-Washington candidate leads the pack. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter has predicted his entire campaign on the need for change in the Capitol city.

He has proposed a restructuring of the 1,900 federal agencies into 200 or less to clean up the "horrible bureaucratic mess." Unlike the Republicans the Democratic candidates, excluding Gov. George Wallace and including Carter, aren't against government. They simply want more efficient government. "Tight business like management and planning techniques must be instituted . . ." Carter has said.

By the nature of his 35 years in Congress Sen. Henry Jackson can hardly run against government. In fact the Washington senator thinks it is "logical that the federal government should assume greater responsibility in (education and welfare) areas."

Arizona, U.S. Rep. Mod Udall is the most pro-government of the candidates and has openly said, "I don't think the public wants a smaller federal government." There are other candidates and non-candidates, but these are the men who offer the alternatives.

Just in jest

California, land of the sundown sea, the golden state where towering redwoods and snow capped Sierras vie with the desert's purple majesty and the wonderland that is Yosemite to lure tourists from all over the world. And what do those eager visitors like the most about this new world Garden of Eden? — Funny you should ask, for that is just the question recently asked of a large cross section of those ohing and ahing tourists. The results of that survey are now in. First on the preference list was Disneyland.

Golden Staters head for Oregon

By Earl G. Waters

In what appears to be an astounding reversal of attitude, if not state policy, Governor Robert Straub of Oregon came to California to thump the tub for Californians to move to his state.

This bit of chamber of commercism is completely out of character for the Oregonians who have viewed Californians as the modern day Philistines to be kept out of their state at all costs. Reportedly they have even considered barriers at the border.

As it is, one almost needs a tourist visa to venture into that state from this side of the border. Of course, like most other places, the natives love the tourists but only as long as their dollars last and only as long as they remain tourists. Californians report having seen signs along the way announcing "visit Oregon but don't stay" or sentiments similar in vein.

And, truthfully, Governor Straub's solicitations were not directly a great departure from that thinking. He wasn't out to entice just any old Californians to his wonderland, but rather to select few who could bring with them some industries to provide jobs for his unemployed.

Neither is he looking for just any industry. Again he was most select making his pitches only to the movie and electronics executives and similar so-called light industrial executives. He is not looking for the heavy installations which would bring more than just jobs with them, not the least of which would be smog and other environmental contaminations.

For Oregon is more than unusually mindful of its environmental responsibilities. It is a state which has outlawed non-returnable beverage containers. If its environmental protection laws are no tougher than California's it will be a near insurmountable obstacle for any new industries to hurdle even though its taxes may be less than here.

Still, there can be little quarrel with a state desiring to keep itself as pristine as possible. Its problem is it hasn't been all that successful fending off boarders. Straub, himself a former Californian, says Golden Staters are swarming across his border in droves with some 30,000 taking up residence each year.

Unfortunately for that state's economy they are not all retired or otherwise self-supporting and the unemployment rate has become a major problem, hence his efforts to attract some desirable industry at California's expense.

His scheme sounds great for his state until close examination. Then it becomes nothing more than the old chamber of commerce pitch that more industry means more jobs, more business, higher economy, less taxes, all spelling "progress".

Straub would do well to take his plan back to the drawing board. He will find that more industry means more problems, period! Even if that weren't so he is looking in the wrong direction. The movie and electronics industries probably have a greater percentage of unemployed than any other. He should study the experience in Alaska with the pipeline. Sure it brought into that state a huge project providing jobs for thousands. It also attracted many thousands of newcomers. In fact about three times the number for which jobs existed. The result was an even higher unemployment rate than before the project.

More people, unfortunately, usually means more crime, more welfare, more school bonds, and higher taxes. This, of course, is what some California communities have discovered and why they have taken steps to at least slow growth down. Most notable is Petaluma which just recently won a landmark case before the United States Supreme Court upholding its right to limit growth.

Thoughts

"He has showed you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?" — Micah 6:8.

"I expect to pass through life but once. If therefore, there by any kindness I can show, or any good thing I can do to any fellow being, let me do it now, and not defer or neglect it, as I shall not pass this way again." — William Penn, Quaker founder of Pennsylvania.

Extended benefits finally received

I am writing in regard to my employment benefits.

At the end of Jan. I filed for extended benefits against the state of Hawaii.

Within the first two weeks of Feb. I received a letter from Hawaii approving my extended benefits.

When I went to the local unemployment office 10 days ago I filed tracers for some of the checks owed me and turned in a claim form for the rest.

My husband is out of work and not eligible for unemployment so we need this money very badly. I would appreciate any help you can give. — A. F., Pomona.

Twelve days after we wrote to the Unemployment Insurance Division of Honolulu's Department of Labor and Industrial Relations, Thomas Mayeda, division administrator, wrote that after our inquiry, you were paid benefits for all claims filed by you.

The sum amounted to $504, you wrote to us.

Mayeda pointed out to us that the unemployment level is high and his staff has encountered some problems because of the heavy workload.

This situation has been compounded by occasional breakdowns in computer service, he said.

He and his staff are quite aware of the necessity to make reasonably prompt payment of benefits to all claimants and "we are working toward achieving it," he said.

I'm desperate for my husband.

He is 57 and has been a mechanic for many years. His last place of employment was a firm here in the valley.

In August 1975 he took two weeks off with the boss's consent to go to Indiana due to an accident his brother had.

When he got home he had a registered letter saying he was terminated due to not reporting for work in the second week. When he signed for his unemployment, he won through the appeal board because the boss had given him verbal consent to be off for two weeks.

He has been everywhere looking for a job. In December, another valley firm gave him a job. The man who interviewed him said his qualifications were just what the firm wanted. He worked one day. The next morning he was told he wasn't the man for the job.

He has had many good interviews but he doesn't get called.

Today was the payoff. A man at another firm had interviewed him Monday. He told him he had the job and would start working Thursday. Today, Wednesday, he was called and told the firm couldn't use him.

We called the labor relations board and were told there is nothing that can be done.

Please try to help us. My husband is getting so depressed that I am getting worried for his welfare.

If only we knew what the problem is. He really is a good mechanic. — Mrs. C. P., Pomona.

We called your husband and gave him the names of several agencies which make an effort to find jobs for people but he was primarily interested in finding out why he was at first accepted for jobs and then turned down.

You later told us that he thought he was being given a poor reference by the firm where he had been employed last.

The secretary-treasurer replied to our inquiry into this possibility.

He disagreed with your report that your husband had received verbal consent for his absence. He cited a section of the firm's contract with a union which stated: "Employment rights cease when an employe does not report back to work promptly at the expiration of his vacation period or authorized leave of absence, unless excused by the employer."

He said there had been a few inquiries regarding his previous employment with his firm and "in all fairness our service manager merely stated that he (your husband) was a fair mechanic. We feel the above statement is true and just to the best of our knowledge."

Ann Landers

Burn that chapter from life

Dear Ann: When I was a graduate student in college, I had a homosexual experience. At the time, I had been married to a wonderful man for three years. It was a traumatic period in my life and I was afraid my marriage would not survive. In an effort to sort out my feelings, I kept a detailed journal in which I expressed my deep devotion for my woman friend.

That was three years ago. Miraculously, our marriage did survive. We moved to another city and I broke off with my lover completely. Soon after, I became pregnant. We now have a beautiful little daughter and my husband and I couldn't be happier.

My problem: Should I destroy the journal? It is well hidden, but I have this terrible fear that if I should die suddenly or if it is discovered by the wrong person it could be very damaging. (My husband knows of the affair.)

I am torn because I spent an enormous amount of time writing that journal and one day I might want to use it as the basis for a novel. What do you advise? — Nom de Plume

Dear Plume: Put a match to it. That journal represents a chapter of your life that is over — and one that might have resulted in total disaster. You will feel greatly relieved once you've destroyed it.

Dear Ann Landers: You're not going to believe this, but I beg of you to take me seriously. I'm a 16-year-old girl. The problem is my 12-year-old sister. She is making a nervous wreck out of me.

Pat has the idea that the way to have fun is to scare the living daylights out of a person. No matter where I go in the house, she is lurking behind a door, ready to jump out and scream, "I gotcha!" Or she'll hide under my bed at night and after I've turned out the light she'll suddenly pounce on me like an animal. Last night she hid under the dinner table and bit my leg. I nearly fainted.

Is this girl a little nuts? Has she seen too many horror movies? Or is there something wrong with my sense of humor? If I'm a "sourpuss" (as she calls me) please say so and I'll try to be a better sport. In the meantime, what should I do? — Heck Of A Wreck

Dear Wreck: Are you an orphan? Where are your parents when all these "jokes" are being pulled? Pat needs some firm discipline and since your mother and dad have obviously abdicated their responsibility, you have a right to protect yourself.

The next time Little Sis jumps out of a closet, pounces, bites, or does anything else to scare you, let her have it — with a whack on the backside. I seldom advocate physical retaliation, but in this case I believe it's the only way to cure that nutty kid.

Dear Ann Landers: You have a knack for exposing gross violations of simple etiquette. Will you please say something about people who have telephones beside their dining tables and insist on carrying on a long conversation while they are eating? It's so rude it makes me sick. Thanks, Ann. — Super Bugged

Dear Super: The solution is simple. Repeat as follows: "Please phone me when you've finished eating. I can't understand a thing you say when you have food in your mouth."

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Men's styles don't suit me

Well, now that Easter is approaching I guess it's time to start thinking about my spring wardrobe. Actually, I have thought about it from time to time, but I get to giggling so hard I get hiccups and Nanny sends me out of the room.

I haven't spent much time leafing through fashion magazines since I was a boy scanning the Montgomery Ward catalogue. (I was NOT looking at the corset ads!) Now I find the world of fashion has left me behind.

The language of men's styles today has turned as erotic as anything in a woman's fashion publication — even a trifle, er, dainty. "Star yourself in olive underglow Frostloom Mohair," croons one ad. "Cool to look at with its intermixed weave of 'iced' colorings." On the rocks?

Another brochure from the garment industry sighs of a suit with "an intriguing hint of iridescence," and another wants to get me all worked up about "subtle tones of muted blue Glenn plaids." A cravat hawker urges "Let your hands caress one of these ties and know what real quality is like." (I'm getting a little feverish.)

One ad sings the praises of something called a hooded popover and a foul weather suit. What a movie that would make — "The Hooded Popover Meets the Foul Weather Suit." (Rated X.)

There is also in current advertising, I discovered, a distressing emphasis on boldness, adventure and excitement. The ads depict young muscular chaps surfing, skin-diving, parachuting and piloting racing cars. All I want is an old sport shirt and a pair of slacks to mow the lawn in. Maybe I don't qualify for a new spring wardrobe. Do they give you a physical examination?

"Boldness at the beach is typified by the surf suit in bold red and white stripes, and Lastex trunks for the surfer who is young at heart, lean of frame and bold in spirit."

You probably have to play pro-football or know judo to buy that ensemble. Boldness at the beach. How about shyness at the shore? Haven't you something in TIMID red and white stripes? Are we turning into a nation of 007's?

One patch of prose mentioned "the excitement of the one-button sport coat." I may be getting blase, but it's been a long time since I was excited — I mean REALLY stirred — by a one-button sport coat. On a man.

I think I'll stick with the Hooded Popover.

Dr. Lamb

Diabetic needs strict diet

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am supposed to be a diabetic and have been for two years. I am still concerned about this because at times I feel like I'm not. The way I felt before going to a doctor was always thirsty, dizzy and hardly able to see. I had double vision and also weight loss of about 20 pounds in two weeks. I made an appointment to see the doctor and he told me to eat something real sweet two hours before coming in, which I did. He ran a urine test and also a blood test and then put me in the hospital. They said my blood sugar went to 450. I don't really know what this means. They started me on 38 units of insulin. I can't stay on my diet. What effect will this have on me? Does this mean I am really a diabetic and I just don't want to accept it?

DEAR READER — You are a diabetic. Even considering the variations in laboratory tests and the temporary peak rises in blood sugars that people may have, your level is way out.

Your symptoms were typical of an untreated diabetic. The basic defect is the failure of the normal insulin mechanism to enable glucose (sugar) to be transported into the cells for energy. It builds up in the blood. Normally the blood level even after eating a very sweet meal is not over 170.

The excess glucose in the blood is spilled into the urine producing what the old medical sages called "sweet urine." This food energy is literally lost into the urine and is not available to the body, resulting in weight loss.

The kidney has trouble concentrating sugar and uses a lot of water to flush out excess glucose. When you lose a lot of water you are thirsty. A typical advanced diabetic is thirsty, drinks a lot of water, passes a lot of urine, is weak and may have weight loss despite eating lots of food.

All carbohydrates from any source including milk merely help build up the level of blood glucose and are not used properly for energy. In the advanced diabetic the body protein including that in the muscle may be broken down and converted into glucose. This causes the blood glucose level to rise even if the carbohydrate intake is restricted.

You have to correct the basic defect as best you can. That means providing insulin. The amount of insulin you take has to be balanced against the amount of food you eat. That is why you must be consistent in your diet and follow your doctor's directions carefully. Exercise also influences the utilization of food energy. It becomes important to regulate your physical activity level. The intelligent diabetic follows a consistent pattern of the same amounts of energy intake in the diet and energy expenditure in terms of physical activity. This enables satisfactory control with a relatively constant level of insulin.

You are very unwise if you are not staying on the diet your doctor asked you to follow in relation to the amount of insulin he is giving you. Diabetes is a serious disease. A great deal can be done to control it and prevent complications in the patient who is well supervised and cooperates with the doctor.

You have an advanced form of diabetes and you need all the help you can get. Those who want more information on diabetes can send 50 cents for The Letter, number 3-10, Diabetes, the Sweet Sickness. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

West's queen of spades is allowed to hold the first trick. He continues the suit and dummy is in with the king.

A low diamond is led and it is up to you to play from the East hand. What do you play?

If you have been reading this week's articles, you should have no problem. You play your ace of diamonds. Second hand high!

This play is not at all hard to make in a bridge column. It is much tougher at the table, yet any expert worth his salt would make it.

He can see that the only way to beat three notrump will be for his partner to score some spade tricks. He can also see that West can't hold much in high cards. But he can be looking at the king or queen of diamonds and it is up to East to let him keep that high diamond in his hand until the ace of spades is knocked out.

Ask the Jacobys

The same Iowa reader wants to know what we bid next after responding two clubs to partner's spade opening with:

♠ x x ♥ A K x x ♦ x x x
♣ A Q x x if he rebids two spades.

With one of our favorite partners we would raise to three spades. With others we would bid two notrump. Either call is generally satisfactory.

Winter season of discontent

FOOTBALL INJURIES

Q. "When do the most football injuries happen, during practice or regulation play?"

A. Practice. The record shows two out of three occur then.

It's also known that women have better memories than do men. About 8 per cent better, according to one set of tests on the matter.

If you talk English at a rate of 220 syllables per minute, you're average. A typical French citizen delivers 350 syllables per minute in that language. The Polynesian conversationalist ordinarily only utters about 50 syllables per minute.

Pick three words that must be pronounced identically, but both spelled and defined differently. Words like pare, pair, pear. Or two, to, too. Or bye, by, buy. Or I, aye, eye. Or you, ewe, yew. WON'T EAT

It happens, though rarely, that the medicos bump into people who won't eat anything. They pretend they've already eaten. Or they hide their food in napkins. Or they just flatout say no thanks. They get thinner and thinner. They have an ailment called anorexia nervosa. Sometimes, to save their lives, they have to be strapped down and fed in the veins. What puts them into this condition is not too clear. A mental matter.

Most chewing gum used to be made out of chicle. Not anymore. Biggest supplier of the gum base now is the Goodyear Rubber Company's plant in Houston. It's no second-rate practice to gnaw on rubber, please note. When he wasn't chomping down on a rolled-up wad of twine, the great Will Rogers was chewing on rubber bands just about all the time.

Only AMC reports decline

Domestic car sales up from last year

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic auto sales for the second 10 days in March have soared 42 per cent over year-ago levels, chalking up the second-best mid-March of the 1970s.

Sales of 249,231 units reported by the nation's four major car makers compared with 175,674 during the same March 11-20 period in 1975. Last year at this time, the companies had wound up a rebate program designed to lift the industry out of a two-year slump.

Auto industry officials said the sales spurt was paced by continued strong performance of intermediates and full-size cars. Small-car sales continued to lag, with small-car oriented American Motors Corp. the lone major U.S. auto maker reporting a selling decline.

One reason for the jump in sales is a number of dealer sales incentive contests which are continuing through the month, analysts noted.

"We are entering the traditional spring selling season with considerable momentum," said Ford Motor Co. Vice President Bennett E. Bidwell. "The March seasonally adjusted sales rate for the domestic passenger-car industry will be in the nine million unit range — a substantial increase from the seven million North American-built cars sold in calendar 1975."

The daily selling rate, the yardstick used by the industry to compute sales, was 27,692. Only mid-March 1973 was higher, when daily sales for the period reached 35,088.

Chrysler Corp., crediting the success of its new Volare and Aspen models, reported sales up 51 per cent over mid-March 1975. General Motors Corp. said its sales jumped 47 per cent, while Ford Motor Co. reported a 36 per cent boost. AMC sales declined 9 per cent.

For the calendar year, domestic car sales of 1,703,135 are up 28 per cent from last year's 1,313,699, based on the daily rate.

But gas hikes approved

Refunds expected on electric bills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Customers of California's two largest utilities appear certain to get an estimated $230 million refund because of overcharges on their electricity bills.

But members of the Public Utilities Commission, while indicating they will approve the refund April 6 in San Francisco, also approved rate hikes for gas company customers this week.

At a meeting here, commissioners approved gas rate hikes totaling more than $52 million for customers of Southern California Gas Co. and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. However, a spokeswoman said two-thirds of all residential customers will not be affected.

SoCal Gas was permitted to raise its rates $48.3 million effective April 1, when its wholesale costs are scheduled to rise. SDG&E, which buys bulk gas from SoCal Gas, was granted a $4.4 million hike.

Under the PUC's so-called "lifeline policy," residential customers who use 75 therms or less of gas per month will not pay increased rates.

A SoCal Gas customer using 100 therms faces a 25-cent monthly increase, while SDG&E users will pay 54 cents more each month for 100 therms of gas.

The PUC postponed action on the electricity rebate until its April 6 meeting so two of the five commissioners could prepare a minority report. The refund would go to customers of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and Southern California Edison.

"It was very clear at the hearing that it will be a 3-2 vote," in favor of the refund, said PUC spokeswoman Carol Kretzer.

The refund would total about $15.90 for SoCal Edison customers and $9.07 for PG&E ratepayers.

At the request of commissioner Leonard Ross, the PUC staff last week prepared a report which said SoCal Edison had overcharged its customers by $150 million, and that PG&E made overcharges of $80 million.

Ross emphasized that the overcollections were not illegal, but resulted from flaws in the controversial fuel adjustment tariff.

Newsman saddles cycle to find out what Mexico is really like

Editor's note: Associated Press newsman Jack Schreibman, lacking a horse but possessed of a powerful urge to see Mexico surrounded by as much open space as possible, saddled up on a motorcycle for a 6,000-mile round trip journey.

By Jack Schreibman
Associated Press Writer

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The customs official shot an arched eyebrow at the purple motorcycle, shifted it to the orange helmet and goggled head within, then issued a dubious, "pase, senor."

And now, Mexico.

Ahead of bike, rider and 75 pounds of gear to keep both alive lay some 6,000 miles of deserts, seashores and mountains — which is what Mexico is, along with 50 million people, more or less.

Tijuana, its tourists, tacos and tinsel fell behind quickly as I headed south to Ensenada on the new highway at 90 miles an hour, sometimes 100. I burned gasoline that was selling for 93 cents gallon.

The aim of the seven-week trip was to cycle the entire 1,000-mile length of Baja California to the southernmost tip at Cabo San Lucas, ferry to the mainland at Puerto Vallarta, and continue into southern Mexico via Guadalajara and Mexico City. A fair project, I thought.

I would find, my friends assured, an assortment of pistoleros hidden behind every cactus and that all Mexican officials had their hands out for the "mordida," bribes which encouraged them to do their duty.

Much as I looked for them, no cactus ever disgorged a highwayman nor did the uniformed people — local policia or the federales — ever approach me with a "gimme hand." Much the greater hazard navigated on four legs, not two: cattle strolling or sleeping on the roads.

One of the animals, I was told, had caused the death of a youngster from the United States at a dust-dry, cactus crossroad deep in the desert near Santa Ines. The lad's father, driving a camper at night against all advice, hit a cow. The boy was impaled by something in the camper, and died shortly after.

Depressed, I detoured 40 miles east to the gulf and the peaceful, wavelapped Bahia de Los Angeles, the province of a happy, happy man named Papa Dios. As I arrived, a super high tide driven in by a storm on the gulf inundated the sand spit of Punta La Cringa, and a couple of campers floated out to sea and sank. I drank my beer and pondered the uncertainties of life, and took off again the next day.

Somewhere out there in the desert a humorless scorpion convinced me to abandon the idea of desert camping. I had set up my zippered nylon tent, made a supper of beans, salami, tortillas and tequila, and lay down to sleep. No way.

The nocturnal desert beasties had set up a scary symphony of scraping, slithering, cooing and whatnot. My eyes would not close. I opened the tent. Something bit me on the hand. A crescent shape scuttled off, and a painful day followed. I was lucky.

Now, more than 400 miles into the peninsula, temperatures were hitting 115 degrees. Cactus stretched in every desolate direction. In the far disfar distance, diffused shapes of the peaks of the Sierra San Pedro Martir shimmered in the brutal heat.

The bike was getting too hot so I stopped and filled the crankcase with 50-weight oil. I guzzled half my canteen, and took off again into the savage Vizcaino Desert. No hitchhikers here. To walk unwatered in the midday sun for an hour is to die.

The oasis mission of San Ignacio reared up out of the rubble. Nearly in tears from relief, I rolled past a freshwater lake hard by a stand of palms, an old impoverished town and a luxury hotel off to the side.

It was a sad time. The talk was that a rabid coyote had bitten five San Ignacio citizens, all of whom died.

Finally the desert ended and the Gulf of California appeared. I celebrated with two days of sleeping and swimming on a magnificent beach at Mulege. At night, spears of lightning cracked the southern sky. Torrential rains lashed the tip of the peninsula 300 miles away.

The road is cursed by hundreds of "vados," steep dips that often coincide with the beds of dried up streams. When it rains, the vados quickly fill up with water. In five minutes, the roadbed is under water. In 10, rocks, silt and rubble come crashing through.

One such depression was running three feet deep at a good 15 knots when I pulled up north of Ciudad Constitution. I stuck out my thumb. A smoke-belching flatbed with 15 men aboard stopped alongside.

"Hay problema, senor?", one strapping fellow asked, and shortly the farmers were hoisting my 500-pound machine aboard the truck, with a hand for the gringo.

With muchas gracias and hearty back slapping, we got across the flooded vado, then made for a macho cantina for some beer, rotgut mezcal and good tequila. Some time later, the interval escapes me, the farmers helped me to my mount and aimed me at the road. I continued unsteadily past busy La Paz to land's end — Cabo San Lucas, where the Pacific meets the gulf in a sun-dappled wedding beneath the Tropic of Cancer.

A night aboard the spectacular auto-ferry Puerto Vallarta brought me to the tourist trap of the same name. Here, the locals believe it is the Norteamericano's duty to spend his last peso.

A climb through lush mountains and a swift run over the 68-D toll road ends in the No. 2 city in Mexico, Guadalajara. Here's where I got my first taste of real Mexican traffic. Smoke-spewing cars and trucks, and buses dangling with pigs and chickens cut in front at 60 m.p.h. with inches to spare.

En route to Mexico City, over a road that appeared to have been bombed, I dodged huge pot holes. Outside Penjamo the bike ran into a crater, but luckily a dog was asleep in the bottom. Over my shoulder I saw the apparently unharmed mutt stretch his neck out of the hole, utter a token bark of disapproval, and go back to sleep.

The road gradually improved, but curiously the asphalt left off abruptly as it entered the pueblos. Suddenly, the road disintegrated to a hard-packed, uneven dirt path. Asphalt resumed on the other side of town. Clearly, local politicians don't have much clout.

Life in the busy capital is enlivened daily by great smashups of cars, buses, trucks and motorcycles. The intelligent policemen watch with a great deal of interest. I didn't touch the bike for two days.

After Mexico City, I plunged into jungly southern Mexico, discovering U.S. citizens who had dropped out years before for the relatively free and undemanding life south of the border. It's a bit boggling to find a gentle longhair running a pizza and jug wine joint hidden away in the Mexican greenery.

Southward went the purple motorcycle, when heavy rains and warnings of flooded roads ahead forced a halt within 100 miles of Oaxaca. So ended the outbound part of the odyssey.

Miles back to home: 3,000.

Naval Academy names women who'll enroll

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The U.S. Naval Academy has named the first seven women who will attend the academy.

The seven were in a list released recently naming 247 appointees who will begin school as plebes at the academy in July. The plebe class usually has about 1,250 members; and the secretary of the Navy has authorized as many as 80 women in the class of 1980.

In announcing the appointments, the academy said it expects most of the plebe class to be picked by May 1.

The seven women are: Elizabeth Belzer, Westminster, Md.; Donna J. Bucter, Washington, Mich.; Peggy S. Derry, Bushnell, Ill.; Maureen P. Foley, Alexandria, Va.; Bonnie J. Schaefer, Raytown, Mo.; Patricia A. Thudium, Falls Church, Va., and Barbara A. Webb, Collingswood, N.J.

While some changes in academy curriculum, rules and facilities are being made to accommodate the women, most things will remain unchanged, including titles. Girls and boys alike will be called midshipmen, the academy has decided.

Bon Voyage

Employers in many nations are required by law to pay severence allowances to employes, The Conference Board reports. In Switzerland, workers who leave must justify their actions before they are granted severence pay. In other countries, employes who quit are eligible only if they have worked for a company for a given period of time: six months in Pakistan, two years in Egypt and, if over age 40, 15 years in Mexico. Severance allowances in the United States vary from state to state, industyr to industry, and even company to company.

Malibu asks for cityhood

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County supervisors have received petitions from Malibu residents seeking to make their exclusive beach community the county's 79th city.

Richard A. Schoeni, an aide to the supervisors, said he received petitions from about 2,750 Malibu voters Wednesday. He said they would be checked to see if the signatures amounted to the 25 per cent required for an election on the issue.

Voters rejected incorporation for Malibu in 1964 and another cityhood proposal was turned down in 1972 by the Local Agency Formation Commission.

The latest proposal would create a 25-square mile city running along the coast from the Ventura County line to the Los Angeles city limits.

Thought for today: Love's like the measles — all the worse when it comes late in life — Douglas Jerrold, English writer, 1803-1857.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, American soldiers under Benedict Arnold were erecting batteries on the Plains of Abraham outside Quebec and building ladders to storm the Canadian city.

Sentence doubled at con's request over job program

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An inmate who says he's finally found a prison with a good job training program has been granted a request to have his sentence doubled.

U.S. District Court Judge Willis Ritter of Salt Lake City granted the request by David Royce Clark, 31, to lengthen the sentence.

Ritter earlier sentenced Clark to 18 months in federal prison, minus five months spent in the Salt Lake County Jail. Clark decided after his transfer to federal prison he wanted to complete the job training program offered there and asked that his term be extended.

Ritter agreed to sentence Clark to three years minus the five months already served.

It wasn't known what kind of program Clark is taking.

Auto race fans ready for Sunday

Auto racing addicts get a chance Sunday to see one of the two biggest events on the motor sports calender.

One is the first Long Beach Grand Prix. The other is the seventh annual running of the California 500 at Ontario Motor Speedway Sept. 5 (also a Sunday)

Backers of the Sunday's Long Beach race hope to turn it into an annual event. Whether or not they will depends on two things.

First, the race will at least have to break even as far as money is concerned. Secondly, there will probably be a review by the city itself of how many complaints arise from sealing off the downtown area so that the race (on city streets) can be run.

Money, as in almost everything, could be a major problem. The sponsoring Long Beach Grand Prix Association has a $1.2 million "nut" to crack.

That means at least that much must be taken in if expenses are to be met. The Formula 5000 race last Sept. had a total of $607,593 worth of tickets sold.

But the race still ended up losing $305,000 which Sunday's race has to makeup for. Long Beach City Auditor Ted Courson says there will have to be $1½ million worth of tickets sold for Sunday's race in order to "stay afloat."

When last sighted, representatives of the LBGP appeared confident they would meet or exceed the obligations.

Big day Saturday

Saturday's schedule calls for qualifying at 10 a.m., a 10,000 meter foot race at 11:40 a.m., an Olympic Trials bicycle race at 12:30 p.m., more qualifying at 2 p.m. followed by practice for a celebrity match race.

Big event of the day Saturday, besides practice of the Formula One drivers and cars is the Historic Formula One Car Exhibition Race slated for 3:15 p.m.

In that one, racing greats of former years such as Stirling Moss, Jackie Stewart, Phil Hill, Dan Gurney, Carroll Shelby and Juan Manuel Fangio (to name a few) will drive.

Niki Lauda and Emerson Fittipaldi, two of Sunday's entrants, will serve as Grand Marshals.

Fangio, perhaps the greatest of them all, will drive the silver Mercedes-Benz he drove 21 years ago. Fangio won five Formula one world championships, four in a row, in three different makes of car, Mercedes, Ferrari and Maserati.

He hadn't driven the Mercedes in 21 years prior to a special "testing" run arranged this Tuesday at OMS. A number of foreign and U.S. writers and broadcasters were on hand to witness the historic run.

The Mercedes had been taken from the factory's museum, overhauled and flown to America. Both the car and driver looked in top condition. In fact, when asked how he keeps in shape, the 64-year-old Fangio smiled and gave this answer through his interpreter.

"This machine (tapping his chest) has a lot of miles on it. I do what the ancient auto collectors do. I keep restoring the machine."

After slipping on his helmet and goggles, Fangio took the old Mercedes out and did a few laps around the track. A bigger thrill awaited the writer.

A ride with Fangio

Several Mercedes production-line cars were on hand and company officials announced that members of the press desiring a ride around the track would be accomodated.

Fangio would drive one of the cars.

The writer saw which car Fangio was in and sprang inside. Bob Russo, OMS publicist, had already begun a circuit of the track in another production car and had disappeared around the first turn when Fangio started.

As the writer had hoped, Fangio was not out to cruise, he drove the track. Downshifting then accelerating in the turns, Fangio caught and passed Russo in the back straight.

Fangio completed the circuit, changed passenger loads and was starting out again when Russo entered pit road at the beginning of the main straightaway.

For the writer, the ride with Fangio produced the biggest thrill of the day. For the five-time champion himself, the day's great moment came when he climbed behind the wheel of the big silver racer and roared onto the track.

"It was like a beautiful memory come to life," he related. "It is to bad one cannot go back (in time) to stay as long as one would like."

Fangio, Hill, Gurney and the others will be spectaters Sunday.

There will be a pre-race parade and motorcycle race prior to the running of the main event at 1:15 p.m.

Is the UCLA mystique gone?

A powerhouse team that played the favorite's role for as long as anyone can remember, UCLA is in the unfamiliar position of underdog as the NCAA prepared to hold its championship semifinal doubleheader Saturday at the Spectrum.

Indiana, which routed UCLA 84-64 in the first game of the season last November, is a six to eight-point choice to beat the Bruins again after Rutgers plays Michigan in the opener.

"Opening games are often not a reliable yardstick for comparison," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, uncertain that his Big Ten brutes should be rated that much better than the defending national champions. "UCLA has improved greatly over the season."

It must be pointed out that Indiana has also improved. The Hoosiers, in fact, appear to be peaking with a 30-0 record that includes victories over St. John's, Alabama and Marquette in the regional playoffs.

"The availability of Scott May makes us a stronger club at this point than a year ago," said Knight referring to the fact that the All-American forward was virtually useless in last year's playoffs with an injured left arm.

The Bruins, winners of 10 national championships under John Wooden, started this season under new coach Gene Bartow in atypical fashion. After that embarrassing loss to Indiana on national television, they continued to fumble and feel their way while adjusting to the traditional program.

"Our players were still learning about a new coach," says Bartow. "We ran a lot of people in and out."

The once-mighty Bruins were even beaten on their home court—something that hadn't happened for 98 games at Pauley Pavilion. Bartow got hate mail, obscene phone calls and there was talk of a mutiny. He admits it wasn't easy following a man of Wooden's stature.

"I wouldn't recommend it for young coaches, a steady diet of following John Wooden," says Bartow. "But seriously, I'm happy to be in the final four. I think things have gone as well as expected when you follow a living legend."

Bartow agrees that perhaps his Bruins should be cast in the role of underdog but predicts a closer game than the odds-makers have determined.

"They haven't talked to Dave Greenwood, our center," said Bartow. "I don't know that the oddsmakers are always right. We can't worry about those things. We've got to worry about execution. We've got to worry about good shot selection.

"No doubt I feel Indiana has a fine, fine basketball team. Bobby Knight has done a tremendous job, losing only one game in two years and that was when Scott May was injured. But since our game in St. Louis, we are stabilized and I feel it will be a better, closer game...two great teams going at each other."

Before the Hoosiers and Bruins go after each other in front of some 15,000 fans at the Spectrum and millions more on national television, Rutgers and Michigan will match strikingly similar fast-breaking styles.

"I think it's going to be a very exciting game," said Michigan Coach Johnny Orr. "People tell me we're two of the fastest teams in the country and if we both play well, it should be a very, very exciting game."

Tom Young, the Rutgers coach, echoed Orr's sentiments.

"I don't think we'll change our game plan at all and I'm sure Michigan won't," he said. "Our game should just be a high-scoring contest, and we just feel it's going to be a great basketball game."

Young was not overly concerned over relatively poor performances of his All-American forward, Phil Sellers, in the regional playoffs.

"Sellers had two poor shooting nights, that's true," said Young, "but he rarely has a poor game. He does so much for us besides scoring. The last game he was six for nine from the field. That shows a bit of class that he took nine shots when he usually takes 15 or 16.

"We're not worried. He's been too good a shooter over 31 games. He's our money player and he'll be our money player on Saturday."

Rutgers, with a 31-0 record, and Indiana are the only major college unbeaten teams in the country. UCLA has a 26-4 record going into Saturday's semifinals and Michigan is 24-6.

The winners will play for the national championship Monday night.

Ickx, Jones enter LB race

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jacky Ickx of Belgium and Australia's Alan Jones were late additions to the lineup of drivers entered in Sunday's historic, inaugural United States Grand Prix West—the race even the optimists predicted would never happen.

Ickx and Jones, two drivers who did well in last weekend's non-points Formula I race at Brands Hatch, England, swelled the list of cars to which drivers had been assigned to 26 for the $265,000 event.

Jones, a newcomer who gained considerable praise for leading the Race of Champions before eventually finishing second behind Britain's James Hunt, was named to the No. 19 Cosworth Ford-powered Surtees TS19, a team car with Brett Lunger of Wilmington, Del.

Ickx, a Grand Prix veteran who went into semi-retirement last season to await development of a more competitive car, replaced Austrian Harald Ertl in the No. 20 Williams-Cosworth.

Rumors that had circulated up until early this week that the race would not be held due to financial problems were completely denied by race organizer Chris Pook, who said, "The event is costing a total of $515,000 which includes the purse and $250,000 for transportation and expenses of the Formula I teams.

"That money has been guaranteed and the race will go on as scheduled." Pook also said advance ticket sales had exceeded $500,000 a week ago.

Between 100,000 and 150,000 persons are expected for Sunday's race, third of the Grand Prix circuit this season. Some 96,000 seats have been erected along the scenic beachside and city street course.

Activity Thursday around the 2.02-mile circuit of the usually placid city centered around sealing off the route to regular traffic in anticipation of the start of practice Friday.

Only five hours of practice were scheduled to prepare for the 200-mile race. Most drivers have never seen, much less piloted a race car over, the testing layout.

The few who have, including Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Penn., Jody Scheckter of South Africa, Chris Amon of New Zealand, and Welshman Tom Price, are considered to have a slight edge.

They were all in last September's dress-rehearsal race here with Formula 5000 cars. The winner of that race, Brian Redman of England, chose not to run the volatile Formula I cars for safety reasons.

"I was burned in Formula I once before and I have no desire to return. I'm happy doing Formula 5000 and other forms of racing of my choice," Redman said recently in scotching any rumors that he might file a suprise entry.

The driver who seemed to best master the course last year before mechanical problems struck was promising Britisher Tony Brise, who died with Graham Hill in a light plane crash in January.

Andretti, who had the fastest qualifying time and led the race early last fall, describes the course as "very demanding, with several types of road surface—asphalt, concrete, and so forth—and very difficult to adjust to."

Andretti, a confirmed street racer who loves the Monaco layout which spawned the Long Beach idea, added, "For that reason, and the atmosphere, I like it a lot."

The Formula I machine, bulkier but more powerful than the cat-quick Formula 5000 cars, are aiming for Brise's track record of 91.008 miles per hour.

Ohio State picks Miller

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Eldon Miller, who led Western Michigan out of the basketball doldrums in the last six years, was assigned the task today of rebuilding Ohio State's basketball fortunes, which have hit a record low.

Miller, 36, introduced at a news conference today, takes over as head coach of the Buckeyes, who finished last in the Big Ten after losing a school record of 20 games this winter.

Miller succeeds Fred Taylor, 51, dean of the Big Ten basketball coaches who resigned after finishing his 18th year with the Buckeyes.

Miller flew into Columbus on Wednesday to consider the job. He met with the university president later in the day and accepted the offer Thursday morning, a member of the athletic department said.

Sutton, Bryant look impressive

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The senior member of the Dodgers pitching staff, Don Sutton, and newcomer Ron Bryant turned in impressive performances in their spring debuts.

Sutton gave up just two hits in six innings, and Bryant allowed but two hits in the final three innings as Los Angeles blanked Philadelphia 7-0 in Vero Beach, Fla. Thursday.

Bryant, battling for the spot in the Dodger rotation vacated by Andy Messersmith, said, "I have to be encouraged after what I did today. I felt really good out there."

Bryant, a 24-game winner for San Francisco in 1973, was signed as a free agent by Los Angeles this spring.

He injured his back in a swimming pool accident after his impressive 1973 season, was 3-15 with the Giants the next year and 0-1 last year with St. Louis.

Dodger Manager Walter Alston expected to take a look at Tommy John, another pitcher trying a comeback after an injury, who was scheduled to pitch against the New York Mets this afternoon.

Relief pitcher Mike Marshall reported to the Dodgers' camp Thursday, one week after spring training opened, and immediately began working out. He is expected to pitch in exhibitions Saturday and Sunday and then return home to East Lansing, Mich., to continue his running feud with Michigan State University officials.

Marshall has a court date Wednesday, facing misdemeanor charges over use of a recreational facility at the school.

In Thursday's Dodger victory, Dave Lopes and Ivan de Jesus provided the firepower. Lopes homered and doubled in driving in three runs, and de Jesus also hit a homer as Los Angeles won its second exhibition contest.

Angels lefty pitches well

PALM SPRINGS (AP) — It had been some time since California's Andy Hassler had been pleased with his pitching, as he lost his last 11 decisions in 1975.

Thursday, after Hassler pitched three scoreless innings and notched a 4-1 victory over Oakland in Mesa, Ariz., he said, "It felt great."

It was perhaps the first time since last April — that's when he last won a game — Hassler had been able to say that.

"I can't remember when I pitched that well," the Angel southpaw said. "That did a lot for my confidence. I lost it about halfway through last year."

Hassler's good outing was another positive sign for Angels Manager Dick Williams.

"I've seen six pitchers so far," Williams said, "and I have no complaints at all."

The Angel staff has allowed only two runs in the club's two Cactus League contests.

California was scheduled to host Cleveland today, with Gary Ross, Dick Lange, and Baylor Moore sharing the Angel pitching chores.

In Thursday's game, Ed Herrman drove in two runs to spark the California victory.

Shaw crowned freestyle king

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Tim Shaw was crowned the new 500-yard freestyle king, dethroning John Naber, and the University of Southern California took some giant strokes toward its third consecutive team title at the 53rd NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships at Brown University Thursday night.

Joe Bottom of Southern California won the 50-yard freestyle in near American record time and Lee Engstrand of Tennessee took the 200-yard individual medley to join Shaw as the night's individual swimming champions.

Shaw swam a classic race against two-time defending champion Naber, of Southern California. Neither swimmer had ever been beaten in championship competition at 500 yards. But Shaw, the freshman freestyle sensation from Long Beach State, outswam Naber in the final 250 yards to win by nearly a body length.

Shaw, the 1975 Sullivan Award winner as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete, improved Naber's previous American record of 4:20.45 by clocking 4:19.05. Naber also was under his old mark in 4:19.71.

At the completion of the race, Naber embraced Shaw and held the new champion's arms aloft as a packed audience of more than 1,300 cheered wildly. The defeat ended Naber's string of consecutive NCAA titles at six.

As a freshman and as a sophomore, Naber had won gold medals in the 500-yard freestyle and the 100 and 200-yard backstroke events.

He is heavily favored to repeat as champion in both backstrokes this year. No swimmer can compete in more than three individual events in any meet.

Three titles here would have tied Naber with Jack Medica of Washington and Roy Saari of Southern California who each won nine NCAA titles. Naber still has one year of eligibility remaining.

Hacienda cagers earn CIF honors

Alta Loma High's Anthony Vasquez and Jamie Eagle and Bonita's Steve Sly have been named to the CIF 2-A basketball team by the Citizens Savings Athletic Board.

Vasquez, a 6-foot-2 senior, earned a second-team berth while Eagle, a 6-0 guard, and Sly, a 6-4 center, were selected for the third team.

Greer, a three-time All-CIF selection, recorded the highest scoring average in the state — 34.6 points for 25 games. He scored 54 points in one game and more than 40 on 12 occasions.

The big center averaged 17.8 rebounds as Elsinore notched a 21-4 record.

Vasquez and Eagle led Alta Loma through an undefeated Hacienda League season and a 26-2 record overall. The Braves lost in the second round of the playoffs to Rowland, the eventual 2-A champion.

The Hacienda League's Most Valuable Player, Vasquez averaged 16.8 points, 6.8 rebounds and 4.4 steals in league play. He was used as a ballhandler to break a press on several occasions by coach Jeff McCall, and shot 54 percent from the floor and 79 percent from the foul line.

Eagle averaged 8.6 points, 5.2 assists, 4.1 steals and 1.5 blocked shots as the Braves' playmaker and an excellent defensive guard.

Sly averaged 21.9 points and 15.1 rebounds while leading the Bearcats to an 18-8 record and second place in the HL. He made 53 percent of his shots from the floor and 64 percent of his free throws.

Poly girl wins race at Los Al

LOS ALAMITOS — Girl students Carol Brennan of Cal Poly Pomona and Julie Morgan of USC swept California's first collegiate harness race in history Thursday night at Los Alamitos when they finished one-two in the mile exhibition race.

Brennan, a liberal studies major, trained under Los Alamitos driver-trainer Gerry Lono and learned her lessons well as she took the lead from the start, withstood Morgan's bid around the first turn, opened a comfortable margin and drew away to an impressive five-length victory.

Carol, an Arcadia High School graduate who is working with the Arabian Horse program on the Cal Poly campus, sent her horse, Dandy Bronco, through a 30 3/5 quarter, 1.03 1/5 half, 1.36 three-quarters and a 2.11 final clocking.

The winner, who earlier in the week had defeated fellow student Jeff T

Morgan, a resident of Honolulu, Hawaii, maintained her second-place standing throughout the mile race although she was losing ground near the finish but still managed to hold off UC Irvine's Harry Osbon for the place. Dave Ferrell of Cal State Fullerton was fourth. Each of the first four students received scholarships for both themselves and the schools.

In the consolation race at Los Alamitos, another girl managed a victory as UC Irvine's Clara Gontero closed with a rush to nose out early leader Jeff Tracy from Cal Poly in 2.14 4/5.

Mounties win, 6-2; gain share of first

The Mt. San Antonio College baseball squad gained a share of first place in the South Coast Conference standings Thursday by beating Santa Ana 6-2.

That win, coupled with Grossmont's surprising 8-1 victory over Cerritos, leaves MSAC, Grossmont and Cerritos all tied for first with 4-2 records.

The Mounties, in notching their fourth straight SCC win, received an outstanding pitching job by southpaw Ron Roenicke. Roenicke limited the potent Santa Ana attack to six hits, as he fanned 11 Dons.

Brian Menasco led the MSAC offense with a home run and two singles, and added three stolen bases to his afternoon's work.

Santa Ana catcher Steve Till tied the game at 1-1 with a solo homer in the second, but visiting MSAC erupted for four runs in the top of the third for the margin of victory.

In that inning, Menasco led off with a single off S.A. hurlder Dennis Burtt. Orv Neconie followed with a bunt single, but Burtt bore down to get the next two Mountie batters.

However, Danny Gans walked to load the sacks and Burtt hit Forrest Brown with a pitch, forcing in Menasco. A walk to Larry Marsh followed, forcing home another MSAC tally, before Val Primante capped the rally with a two-run single.

Menasco's solo homer in the fourth pushed the Mountie advantage to 6-1, and Roenicke weathered S.A. threats in the eighth and ninth to register the win.

MSAC is now 12-5-1 on the year, while the Dons fall to a 3-3 SCC and 15-6 overall ledger.

The local entires in the Mission Conference did not fare as well Thursday. Citrus was upset by Saddleback by a 10-5 score while San Bernardino edged Chaffey 5-4 in 12 innings.

Saddleback jumped off to a quick 6-0 lead off of Owl starter Hank Ritchey and held off Citrus to post the win. The loss was the Owls' first in seven league outings, while the Locals now stand at 14-4 for the year.

SBVC used a Chaffey error and Fred Smith's double in the last of the 12th to win a see-saw contest. Larry Jones' two-run single had put the Panthers ahead 4-3 in the eighth but SBVC battled back to tie the game and send it into extra frames. Virgil Moore, who worked the distance, suffered the loss on the hill.

Howard Garcia led the Panthers attack with three hits, while Larry Whitmer had three hits, including a two-run homer, for the Indians. Chaffey is now 3-4 in Mission outings and 9-10 on the year.

All three local JCs continue league play Saturday. Citrus will host San Diego City College at 1 p.m., Chaffey entertains Grossmont at 1 p.m. and (in a key SCC tilt) Grossmont will be at MSAC for a 12 noon start.

Stanford, ASU play

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Undefeated Stanford and hard-hitting Arizona State meet tonight in what could be a preview of the championship in the Riverside collegiate baseball tournament.

Arizona State pounded Delaware 13-5 Thursday afternoon and blasted UC Riverside 13-2 in a night game.

Clay Westlake led the Sun Devils with a homer against Delaware and drove in three runs with a pair of doubles against Riverside.

The Sun Devils and Stanford's Cardinals now have identical 5-0 records.

Stanford downed Oregon State 8-6 Thursday led by Tom Guardino's solo homer and another run batted in.

In other action Thursday, Eastern Michigan, still alive in the bracket with Arizona State with a 3-2 mark, downed Delaware 11-5, and Geoff Doyle singled in the winning run as Oregon State got by Riverside 3-2 in 14 innings.

'Pack girls beat Chino

Claremont High's girls track team defeated visiting Chino Thursday afternoon, 58-33, in the first league meet for both squads.

Staci Johnson of Claremont equaled her own school record to win the 100-yard run in 11.4 seconds and won the 440 in 62.2. Teammate Cherry Henry set a school record of 2:34.0 in the 880 and Kathy Orozko shattered a school mark with a shot put of 34 feet, 3¾ inches. Four contestants — two from each school — went over 30 feet in the shot.

Chino's Pam Hofstra recorded double wins in the 220 (28.0) and 880 (2:32.3) while teammate Lynn Hawkins won the high jump at 5-4.

Tarkanian plans camp at La Verne

Jerry Tarkanian will be teaching his basketball magic at La Verne College this summer when he conducts a pair of one-week camps at the Supertent beginning August 1 and 8.

Boys, ages 9 through 17, are welcome to attend. Because of a limit of 100 campers per session, it would be wise to make plans now.

A week's tuition, which includes room and board at La Verne, costs $175. To apply, send a deposit of $75 to: Choice Sports Camps, P.O. Box 36006, Los Angeles, CA. 90036. Additional information is available by telephoning (213) 939-7092.

Tarkanian, who led Nevada Las Vegas to a 29-2 season, is the winningest major college coach in the nation. In eight seasons at Long Beach State and Las Vegas, he has compiled a 195-33 record.

Eddings steals the SAL show

The field of unbeaten track teams in San Antonio League dual meets narrowed to two — Pomona High and Garey High — Thursday afternoon, but Ganesha's Floyd Eddings stole the show on an individual level.

The Giant junior won an incredible four events as Ganesha fell to defending champion Pomona, 72-46.

In an important meeting of previously undefeated squads at Upland, the Vikings knocked off the Highlanders, 68-50. Garey and Pomona, both 3-0, will meet in the final dual meet of the season five weeks from now.

Eddings turned in the valley's best prep efforts to date in the 100 and 220, with times of 9.6 and 22.0 seconds. He also won the long jump at 22 feet, 7 inches, and the pole vault at 10 feet.

The 100 was particularly impressive at Ganesha, with Eddings followed by Pomona's Jim Donaldson (9.7) and Terry Andrews (9.8).

Barry Boettcher of the Devils won the 880, mile and two mile while Hank Zibell heaved the shot 58-7¾ for a victory.

Ganesha's Lloyd Jones won the 440 in 50.6 and the 330 low hurdles in 37.8, the valley's best time for that event and the second-best mark in the CIF. But Jones aggravated a sore left knee in the 440 and tripped and fell, injuring his right knee, in the 120 high hurdles.

Pomona's Ernest Jarnagin won the highs in 14.5. Only two CIF times, including Jones' 14.4, are better.

Garey's Webster turned in another area best with a 23-2 long jump, placing him third in the CIF. Teammate Morris Cole won the 100 (9.8), 220 (22.4) and 440 (50.1)

Upland's Roger Innes won the mile and tied for the victory in the two mile while Casey Cox won the 880.

Poly defeats Hawaii, 8-4

HONOLULU (AP)—Cal Poly Pomona erupted for four runs in the top of the seventh inning to defeat Hawaii 8-4 in the seven-inning opener of a scheduled doubleheader here Thursday night.

A 10-minute downpour left the field in an unplayable condition, forcing cancellation of the second game.

The Broncos, who upped their record to 14-13-1, got three hits and took advantage of one Rainbow error and two wild pitches for their four-run outburst.

The two teams meet in a doubleheader Friday night, weather permitting.

RECORD PERFORMANCE — Upland High's Howard Hyde steams toward a San Antonio League record in the 200-yard individual medley Thursday at the league swim finals.

Records fall in SAL finals

PB Staff Writer

Nine San Antonio League swim records fell Thursday afternoon at Upland High as Claremont won the varsity and overall titles in the league finals.

Junior Jim Moore of Claremont set two league standards and helped set another as did Upland junior Howard Hyde.

Moore won the varsity 200 freestyle in 1:48.4, shaving 1.2 seconds from the league record he set Tuesday in the prelims. He won the 500 frestyle in 4:55.3, better by 3.2 seconds than his record time at the prelims. Moore also teamed with Steve Smith, Jim Martin and Craig Hildebrand to set a league mark at 3:27.6 in the 400 freestyle relay. The old mark of 3:31.2 by Upland had stood since 1967.

Hyde won the 200 individual medley in 2:07.3 and the 100 backstroke in 59.4. The old records of 2:08.1 and 1:00.0 were set by Claremont's Craig Himmler in 1973. Hyde, along with David Oakes, Dallas Munroe and Doug DeYoung swam through the 200 medley relay in 1:45.1, two seconds better than Claremont's previous SAL mark of 1967.

The only other varsity record went to Montclair's Mike Harbottle, whose 51.1 in the 50 freestyle exactly matches the CIF qualifying time.

Maples, who broke the record Tuesday with a 1:04.0, went 1:02.8, while Mages, whose 1:11.5 in the prelims was a record, recorded a 1:12.5.

Oakes, an Upland junior who set the varsity 100 breaststroke record in 1:04.2 at the prelims, won the event Thursday in 1;04.7. However, Oakes finished second in the 100 butterfly to teammate Munroe, whose time of 57.9 qualified him for the CIF prelims.

This year's CIF prelims and championships will be held at East Los Angeles Community College. Diving prelims will be held Saturday with the swimming prelims for the 3-A division — of which the San Antonio League is a part — Monday.

The 4-A prelims will take place Tuesday with the swimming and diving championships for both divisions Wednesday. The 3-A events will get under way at 3 p.m. Saturday, Monday and Wednesday.

Participation in the CIF prelims and championships is based solely upon meeting time standards in any sanctioned meet.

Swimmers who met those standards for the first time this year Thursday included, besides Munroe in the 100 butterfly, Chino's Steve Monike in the varsity 200 freestyle, Upland's Jeff Anderson in the frosh-soph 100 fly and the Upland frosh-soph 200 medley relay team of Grey D'Antonio, Steve Siffert, Anderson and Jim Etchason.

Athletes who had met qualifying standards in the prelims or previously include Upland's Hyde (varsity individual medley, butterfly and backstroke), Oakes (breaststroke and backstroke), D'Antonio (frosh-soph backstroke) and Etchason and Siffert (f-s 200 freestyle); Claremont's Moore (varsity 200 and 500 freestyle) Smith (varsity 50 freestyle) and Jim Gaylord and Paul Beasom (varsity 100 backstroke); Montclair's Harbottle (varsity 50 and 100 freestyle), 200 individual medley and 100 breaststroke), Matt Tedder (100 breastroke) and Maples (f-s 100 butterfly); and Chino's Steve Moenicke (varsity 500 freestyle).

Varsity medley relay teams from Claremont, Montclair and Upland are eligible for CIF competition, as are Claremont's and Montclar's varsity freestyle relay squads and Upland's frosh-soph medley relay team.

Chuck Lovejoy, the SAL diving chamion, will go to the CIF prelims, and other league divers may be made eligible by petition.

Claremont's the league dual champion with a 4-0 SAL record and an 11-0-1 overall mark, won the varsity title Thursday with 361 points to Upland's 261 and the overall championship with 552 points to Upland's 533½. Upland won the frosh-soph competition 272½-191 over Claremont, with Montclair third in each category.

Stockton upset with Nastase

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The top four seeds have advanced to the quarter finals in the $200,000 Tennis Games, but Ilie Nastase has drawn the ire of yet another opponent with his courtside behavior.

Jimmy Connors, the top seed, breezed to a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Bob Lutz Thursday, and Arthur Ashe, seeded second, downed Cliff Richey 6-3, 6-4.

But Nastase, the fourth seed, had to struggle back from a first set loss to down Dick Stockton 3-6, 6-0, 7-6. During the second set, Nastase argued with officials frequently and upset Stockton.

Later Stockton said, "I was going to default. But then I thought, 'I'll hang in there and beat him.'

"Nastase should be suspended for several days, because fines don't seem to do any good," Stockton added. "He is no fun to play against and he does the same thing to all the players."

In later games, John Alexander, the defending champion of the tourney, and third-seeded Bjorn Borg took advantage of a dark sky and a slight wind with high lobs to advance.

Borg downed Stan Smith 7-6, 7-5, winning a 12-point tiebreaker in the first set and fighting off a 40-love score with Smith serving in the final game to win the second set.

Alexander, seeded ninth, has not won a tournament since last year's tourney in Tucson. "Certainly I would like to win this one to prove that it was no fluke," he said after a 6-2, 6-3 win over Raul Ramirez.

MERCURY MONARCH
a $12,000 look

A Mercury Monarch may look like a $12,000 car, but it doesn't cost like a $12,000 car. In fact you can buy a Monarch for less than $5000.

After you drive a Monarch. Feel the way it responds. The way people respond to you driving it, you'll appreciate the moderate price tag even more.

Mercury Monarch is designed the way a lot of cars may be designed tomorrow. Precision-size. Over a foot shorter than most mid-size cars, yet it has just about as much head room and leg room. Fully independent front suspension. Hotchkiss rear suspension. Over 100 pounds of body insulation to control noise. And this year tests show Monarch's ride is smoother and quieter than last year.

A car designed for tomorrow. Today.

Tagging goes on at Lake Perris

What's all this nonsense about tagging fish and offering rewards for the tags? Does the Department of Fish and Game obtain any useful results from recovering tags, or is it just a public relations gimmick?

"Tagging is important because it enables us to obtain a wealth of information we could get no other way," says fishery biologist Ken Aasen, who, as chance would have it, is putting 120 tagged catfish into Lake Perris, Riverside County.

The tagged catfish, from the department's Imperial Warmwater Hatchery near the Salton Sea, are part of a load of 5,000 yearlings, weighing five to the pound.

"We're going to give $5 to each person who turns in a tag, also a life history of the fish and the department's popular Catfish Manual and Cookbook," Aasen said.

What does Aasen expect to learn?

"First, we'll be able to tell the rate of return. This gives us an idea of how many fish to put in the lake. If they are not coming back to the angler, why put them in? If they are coming back at a very low rate, is it because we are planting at the wrong time of year, or are we planting the wrong size?

"If, for example, we can obtain the same rate of return for fish planted in the fall as for those planted in the spring, then we can save money by not holding the fish for so long at the hatchery.

"Second, we should learn something about angler acceptance of this species. If no one is fishing for channel catfish, then why plant them? It's simple to learn this by sampling the reservoir periodically — say with an electroshocker. If we find plenty of catfish, yet receive few if any tags, then they are not being sought by the angler.

"On the other hand, if we don't find any catfish, we know there is trouble; perhaps the water might not be suitable for catfish.

Ask DFG to expand nongame projects

The Citizen Nongame Advisory Committee to the Department of Fish and Game has called on the DFG to expend at least half of its programs and resources on nongame species work.

To help finance work under the revised alignment, the committee suggests in its first report to DFG Director E. C. Fullerton that the department seek new sources of funding as well as larger allocations from the state's general fund.

As a special fund agency, the DFG receives virtually all of its support from hunting and fishing license fees, stamps and permits, commercial fishing taxes and its share of excise taxes on the sale of sporting arms and ammunition and fishing tackle.

For the past two years the DFG has obtained $1 million annually from the state's general fund for nongame work, and next year's proposed budget provides for considerably more to finance projects of this type.

The seven-member advisory committee was named early last year to review and evaluate ongoing nongame programs, recommend new and augmented projects and suggest means of financing programs.

In the ensuing year the committee, which is headed by Maxine McCloskey of Piedmont, has reviewed the DFG's nongame programs and developed a list of nongame program objectives. It is from the list of objectives that the proposed new emphasis is derived.

Efforts should be directed toward achieving self-sustaining populations of all native species, the committee says, with particular emphasis on endangered and rare species.

To help do this, the committee recommends clarification of protection and management authority, stepped-up law enforcement, systematic monitoring of populations and the establishment of reserves.

To better reflect the commitment to nongame programs, the name of the department should be changed to something along the lines of the Department of Wildlife Conservation or the Department of Fish and Wildlife, the committee report states.

Other committee proposals would have the DFG:

— Identify the natural ecosystems in the state with the aim of establishing reserves large enough to assure the continued existence of the ecosystems and their constituent wildlife species.

— Strengthen and give top priority to programs to return threatened species to self-perpetuating levels and to prevent the decline of other species to threatened status.

— Halt introductions of exotic animals except when it can be demonstrated the introductions would not harm native species or their habitat.

— Mount an aggressive program of public and intradepartmental education to help development of "an awarness of the importance and fragility of our natural ecosystems and a concern for all wildlife."

Director Fullerton will meet with the committee soon to discuss implementtation of the report's recommendations.

Copies of the report may be obtained from the DFG at 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento 95814.

Appointment of the nongame comittee was the most recent step in an accelerated DFG program to better manage the state's nongame fish and wildlife.

Salmon landed at Dana Point

If a silver salmon caught in San Juan Creek near Dana Point in Orange County is any indication, at least some of the 100,000 salmon planted in the Southland by the Department of Fish and Game last year have found their new territory to their liking.

The salmon which was caught last week by Corky Crowell of Glendora weighed two-and-a-half pounds and measured 21 inches from nose to tail-tip. DFG biologist Parke "Bud" Young, in charge of the department's ocean sportfish planting program, says the fish almost certainly was one of a lot of 50,000 yearling silvers planted in the spring of 1975 in Calleguas Creek in Ventura County.

Although a similar plant of 50,000 silvers was made last spring in the Santa Margarita River near Oceanside in San Diego County, Young doubts that the salmon taken in San Juan Creek was from that plant.

"All of the Santa Margarita River fish were finclipped," he says, "while none of the Calleguas Creek fish were marked. Naturally-occuring salmon are such a rarity in Southland waters that we feel resonably sure this fish is one of the salmon stocked in Calleguas Creek," he added.

The salmon plants are part of a DFG project to determine if Southern California ocean sportfishing can be improved by stocking large numbers of yearold silver salmon in coastal streams.

After stocking, the salmon move downstream into the ocean where most of them will remain for two years before returning to the areas in which they were released. It's not unusual, however, for a few of these fish to return to a coastal stream after one year at sea, Young says.

'On a fairy tale kick'

Danny Kaye stars in TV 'Pinocchio'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When he was in England to conduct the London Symphony Orchestra, a reporter asked Danny Kaye why didn't he make some more comedy films. His reply:

"Because movies are not like they used to be, times are not like they used to be, and most of all, I am not like I used to be."

For the same reason he rejected the notion of a return to the London Palladium, where his postwar appearances made him something of a national hero.

"Sure, I could probably go back there and do the same routines and get a fine reaction," he said. "But it wouldn't be the same. There was something about that era that made it just right, and I would never be able to recapture what happened 20-25 years ago. It would be walking backwards.

"Likewise I don't want to go to Las Vegas; I've done that. Another television series? Those four years I did on CBS were among the most enjoyable of my life. But I wouldn't want to repeat. Nowadays I just want to do the things I want to do."

Right now he is on a fairy tale kick. He recently taped a new version of "Peter Pan" in London, playing Captain Hook to Mia Farrow's Peter, with a score by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley. The special has appeared in England and will be seen here at Christmas on NBC.

Kaye has been taping "Pinocchio" in Hollywood, not the gospel according to Walt Disney but a new interpretation from the Colladi classic. Danny is Gepetto, Sandy Duncan is the boy-puppet with the expanding nose. Also in the cast: Flip Wilson, Clive Revill, Liz Torres. CBS will telecast the special at 8 p.m. Saturday.

"Who knows, this might start a series of fairy tales for me," Kaye speculated.

Baseball plays an important part in Kaye's future plans. He is part owner of an American League expansion team which will start playing in Seattle's new Kingdome in the spring of 1977. It's a natural adjunct to his ownership in radio stations in Seattle, Spokane and Portland and an outgrowth of his long-

THE NOSE KNOWS — Sandy Duncan, as Pinocchio, sprouts a long nose to the astonishment of Danny Kaye as Gepetto, creator of the boy-puppet. The scene is from "Pinocchio," a CBS-TV special to be shown at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

'Sherlock Holmes'.

Shubert does Doyle drama

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

For anyone not familiar with A. Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, the Royal Shakespeare Company production of "Sherlock Holmes," which opened Thursday night at the Shubert Theater in Los Angeles, would be a source of rich laughter. To anyone familiar with the stories of the wizard of Baker Street, the show provides even richer laughter.

The Leonard (Spock) Nimoy-Alan Sues melodrama is low comedy in high style, loud, fast, silly and fun, a delightful spoof on Doyle's pontificality. The play was written by the turn-of-the-century American actor-author William Gillette — whether he designed it as an elegant lampoon or a serious piece for the stage, I do not know. But the English company has taken off on the high-flown histrionics with a deft, witty satire that tiptoes adroitly along the line between drama and burlesque.

Nimoy plays the great detective with the inscrutability of Star Trek, but there is a latent impishness and a carefully disciplined sense of nonsense in his characterization. His classic confrontation with the deadly Professor Moriarity (Sues) is a spritely duel of pistols and platitudes.

Much of the dialogue is word for word from Doyle — the plot is pure Gillette — but the Baker Street bravado comes out more like Gilbert and Sullivan in the present edition.

Sues, the hilarious ding-a-ling sportscaster of Laugh In, is a spectacular Moriarity, made up like Lon Chaney in "Phantom of the Opera," electrifying the stage with his wild-eyed, reptilian characterization of "the Napoleon of crime."

Ronald Bishop plays the uninteresting role of Dr. Watson uninterestingly, but the cast generally achieves a high level of skilled, integrated performance. Diana Kirkwood is a lovely spitfire as Alice Faulkner; Dalton Dearborn makes a suitably villainous James Larrabee, and Geoff Garland displays a wry talent for Cockney wit and characterization as the bowler-hatted safecracker, Sidney.

"Think of it," he marveled, a guy who spent his youth watching the Dodgers play at Ebbets Field now owns his own baseball club. It's Walter Mitty time."

He's hoping to call the new club the Rainiers and he has his own ideas about what the operation should be: "Seattle is a major league city and this will be a major league team, but I would like the stadium tc have a small-town feeling.

Unplugging the rivers

New race against death in Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Foreign and local volunteers are battling to provide shelter for the homeless and to clear blocked rivers and streams before the rains arrive sometime in May.

The rivers are dammed by massive landslides and the collapse of mountainsides during the devastating earthquake of Feb. 4 that killed some 23,000 persons, injured 76,000 and left more than a million — one sixth of Guatemala's population — homeless.

Government officials fear Guatemala could suffer another major disaster — this time flooding — if the rivers are not unplugged before the rains come.

One of the most dangerous areas is on the Pensativo River, northwest of Guatemala City. It threatens to flood the one time capital of Antigua, some 30 miles from here. Antigua is now an important tourist site.

Government engineers have also located several dams on the Rio Madre Vieja, including one at a spot known as "Los Chocoyos," between Patzun and Godinez, where they estimate a million cubic meters of earth must be removed to free the river. There is another bad spot on the Rio Pixcaya near Chimaltenango.

U.S. Army engineers and Mexican construction crews are helping Guatemalans clear blocked highways. They estimate it will take three to six months to clear more than 100 massive landslides in a 35-mile stretch of the main highway leading east from Guatemala City to the key ports on the Caribbean Sea.

The government has estimated it would cost $35 million to reconstruct damaged highways and more than $1 billion for reconstruction throughout the country.

The National Geographic Institute has estimated the quake affected 15,544 square miles out of the national territory of 42,042 square miles. There is severe damage in 17 of the country's 22 states.

One of the most expensive projects is President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud's "Operation Rooftop," a pledge to provide shelter for every homeless family before the rains arrive.

It is estimated 500,000 sheets of corrugated metal roofing are needed. The idea is to replace the traditional heavy roof tiles which killed so many people when adobe houses collapsed.

The government has pledged to construct 44,000 provisional shelters in the capital and another 107,000 in the countryside.

The government is seeking loans from the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID), the International Development Bank, the International Reconstruction Bank and the World Bank. In addition, the government intends to issue $65 million in bonds through national banks.

International aid continues to flow into the country and is being distributed according to need as determined by army officials, the Guatemalan Red Cross, and private relief agencies.

There is no official estimate on the dollar value of the aid nor a breakdown by nation.

Every Western hemisphere nation has sent aid, with the United States and Mexico leading the donors.

European nations such as Belgium and West Germany have sent supplies and material has arrived from as far away as Japan, Pakistan and Israel.

U.S. AID officials in Washington reported the United States spent $3.5 million in Guatemala in the first month after the disaster, mainly for food, clothing, medical supplies, transportation and personnel.

The Ford administration has asked Congress to approve another $25 million in aid to the survivors, including $7.5 million for shelter.

Italians are helping reconstruct the town of San Juan Comalapa, the Spanish are in Zaragoza, the Norwegian Red Cross in Patzun and Mexican prefabricated houses are being erected in Tecpan.

Mexican machines and men are rebuilding the highway between Godinez and Patzun, while a U.S. Army engineer battalion is working on the route to the Atlantic.

The Guatemalan army and the municipal government of Guatemala City received $5.5 million in a grant from the National housing bank to clean the capital's streets and to restore services.

The job consists of removing 200 million cubic meters of debris and toppling 38,000 buildings damaged beyond repair.

The government estimated 20 per cent of the underground, 1,000-mile-long grid of sewers and waterlines was damaged in the quake and succeeding tremors there have been more than 1,300 of the tremors since the quake.

Most of the tremors, and the Feb. 4 earthquake, had epicenters about 50 miles northeast of Guatemala City.

People continue to live in the streets in Guatemala City in makeshift tents and in cars, afraid to spend the night in their quake-weakened homes.

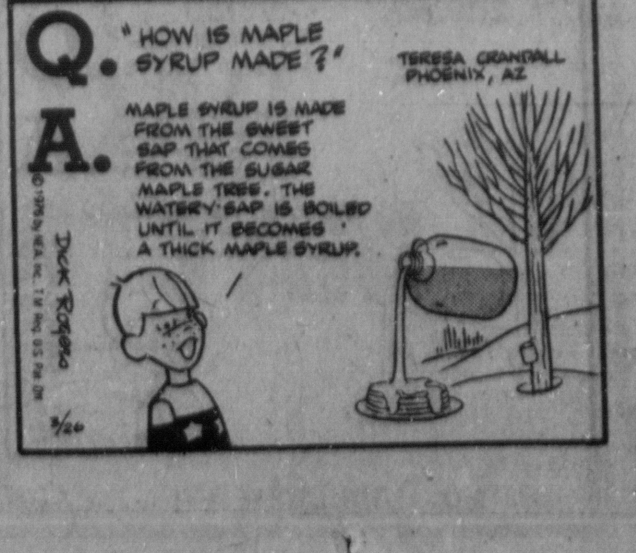
JOHNNY WONDER



Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER
Q. "HOW IS MAPLE SYRUP MADE?"
TERESA GRANDALL PHOENIX, AZ
A. MAPLE SYRUP IS MADE FROM THE SWEET SAP THAT COMES FROM THE SUGAR MAPLE TREE. THE WATERY SAP IS BOILED UNTIL IT BECOMES A THICK MAPLE SYRUP.
DICK ROGERS
3/26

Maple syrup is made from the sap that comes from the sugar maple tree.

In early spring, when the sap flows best, the maple farmer bores a small hole into the trunk of each sugar maple. Then he puts a spout into each hole and hangs a pail from the spout to collect the watery sap.

The sap is only faintly sweet as it drips from the tree. It must be carefully boiled before it becomes maple syrup.

Each day, the maple farmer collects the sap and takes it to the sugar house. Here, the sap is boiled until most of the water is boiled away, leaving a thick maple syrup. Boiling the sap also gives the syrup its delicious maple flavor and golden color. If the syrup is boiled longer, it forms maple sugar.

Each tree produces about 10 gallons of sap, which makes about a quart of syrup or about two pounds of sugar.

A Message To CLASSIFIED AD USERS

You are about to invest money for an Ad and you are entitled to get results. To accomplish this, it is necessary for you TO TELL ALL about the details of your offer. Be sure you don't make any of the following errors that prevent results.

Readers can't guess on important details. Remember, a well written informative ad will get results faster and cost less in the long run.

1. Don't Omit The Address

Many out-of-town readers will write you but will not spend money for a long distance call.

2. Don't Omit The Phone Number

Many readers will call you but do not find it convenient to come to your home.

3. Don't Use Blind Box Numbers

They are difficult to answer and many people are suspicious of them.

4. Don't Conceal The Price

5. Don't leave Home On The Days You Advertise

Many good prospects will not call the second time if your phone is unanswered.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY — The colonial craftsman (top) had his musket at his side for protection from frontier dangers, while the modern handyman needs safety goggles to protect him from possible eye injury when using striking and struck tools.

America founded on 'do-it-yourself'

Our forefathers called it "old fashioned self-reliance;" today we call it "do-it-yourself."

Whatever its name, an increasing number of modern day Americans, forced by mounting inflation, rising repair costs and tightening energy supplies, are returning to the values of early Americans who did just about everything themselves for their homes and families.

The spirit of independence on which our nation was founded was sparked by the self-sufficient householder of that day who not only could perform each job but intimately knew each tool required for the task.

It was the practice for most of this country's early settlers to make their own tools, inscribe them with the family name and proudly hand them down from generation to generation. These hand-fashioned tools were such an intimate part of the early craftsman's daily life that many were given familiar first names.

Most of the tools of that day were used to work with wood — axes, adzes, chisels and mallets were among the most common. The use of iron nails (squared) and hammers was not as popular because of the penchant of early settlers to use wooden nails or pegs.

Do-it-yourselfers in America...

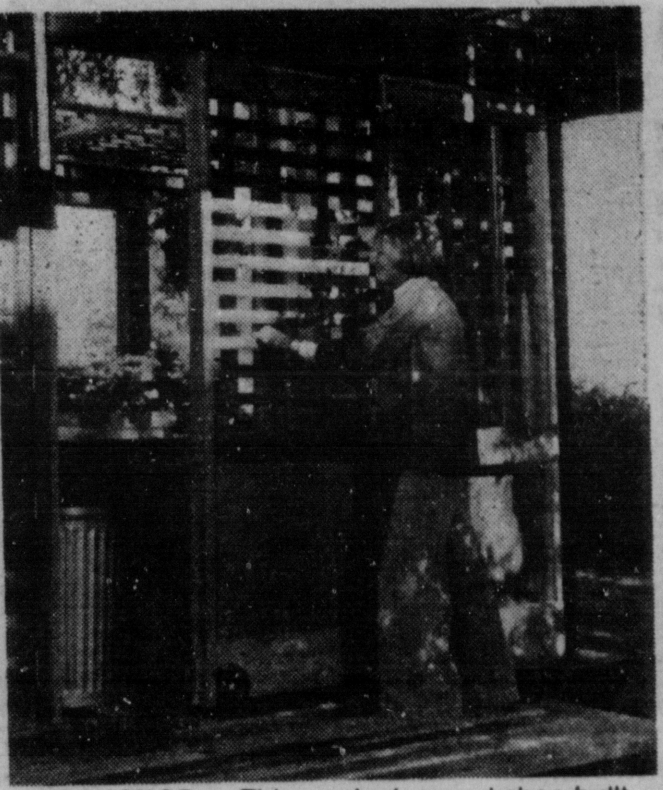
Today's self-reliant handyman with a wider range of materials to work with also has a broader variety of hand tools to help him perform his various household tasks. To help him do these jobs better and safer here are some safety guidelines for the use of both striking and struck tools.

First — wear safety goggles while hammering. This is especially important for such jobs as pounding nails into concrete, chipping masonry, splitting bricks and striking chisels.

Next — select the right tool for the job. For example, a nail hammer is to be used for common unhardened nails only. It should never be used for hammering hardened concrete or masonry nails, striking chisels, star drills or other metal products.

Keep striking and struck tools in top condition.



WORKSHOP — This gardening workshop built of rugged garden grades of redwood includes special cupboards for long-handled tools, shelves for pots and small tools, and a work surface under which garbage cans fit. A sliding door locks in everything securely.

Design your own workshops for many uses

Do-it-yourselfers will be digging into more home gardening projects this spring than ever before. For green thumbing or outdoor living in general, a redwood garden shelter can make a graceful and practical multipurpose outdoor room in your backyard.

This year you can design and build your own shelter with garden grades of redwood for much less than you think. These knot and sapwood-containing grades — Construction Heart, Construction Common, and Merchantable — have the weatherability and stability of more expensive clear grades, with a rustic texture ideal for a garden shelter.

GARDEN SHELTER — A redwood garden shelter, built with economical garden grades of redwood, makes an attractive outdoor party room that can serve many practical uses. A serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface. Shelves, cabinets, and cupboards for folding lawn chairs, bench cushions, and garden party knickknacks can also store long-handled garden tools, power tools, a lawnmower, garbage cans, and hoses. The lattice-grill roof can be left open or covered with fiberglass, matting or canvas, depending on the climate.

whatever you want it to. It can be a practical potting and planting center as well as an outdoor party room or secluded retreat.

You can build shelves, cabinets, and cupboards for folding lawn chairs, bench cushions, and garden party knick-knacks. These spaces can also store long-handled garden tools, power tools, a lawnmower, garbage cans, and hoses. A serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface.

As extra storage space or a poolside service room, a shelter can frame a view or screen out too-close neighbors, show off favorite plants, or give a garden a new focus. Some garden layouts suggest other redwood structures, for example, a trellis or colonnade that can be used as a shaded walkway or entry.

DESIGN A REDWOOD SHELTER

Depending on your skill and needs, you can build a redwood garden shelter with simple post and beam construction, or design a more complicated structure. You should also think about where to put your shelter. Do you want to use it to catch or escape from the sun — and wind — or let in some sunlight for potted plants?

Different roof materials can control light and blend uniquely with your garden. Shingles, shakes, reed fencing, bamboo, window screening, lath, louvers, canvas, glass, or plastic can be simply nailed on. Perhaps you want removable roof members attached to a framework fastened to the rafters in sections, or eggcrate blocking covered with canvas or matting.

Where do you want water outlets, or electrical outlets for lanterns and power tools? Cabinets can be designed especially for long-handled tools, or with shelves for small tools. You can plan to store your lawn-mower in a ground-level cupboard that lets you roll it straight in.

Your gardening counter can be high enough to fit garbage cans underneath. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels to enclose your workshop can be locked.

REDWOOD SHELTER MATERIALS

Decay and insect resistant Construction Heart grade redwood is recommended for posts, retaining walls, planters, steps, greenhouse framing, and shelves subject to periodic moisture, on, in, or within six inches of the ground.

Less known but most economical for decking, fence boards, trellises, and benches above ground are Construction Common and Merchantable grades. These contain knots (as does Construction Heart) and cream-colored flashes of sapwood that blend naturally with a garden, but should not be used in actual ground contact.

In building a redwood garden shelter, you'll find that aluminum alloy nails and non-corrosive fastenings far outlast plain iron, steel, or cement-coated nails in outdoor use. Nails galvanized by other than the hot-dip process deteriorate, leaving black marks on the wood, and lose holding power.

FINISHING TOUCHES ON REDWOOD

Redwood's pink to cinnamon brown colors blend and weather without finishes to a bleached gray. However, redwood also holds finishes and paint better than most woods, eliminating many maintenance problems.

Redwood has low density, high dimensional stability, and high resistance to checking. Available in smooth-planed or rough resawn textures, its long straight grain and long board lengths make it easy to work with and it contains no pitch.

If you want your shelter to match the color of your house, you can add lightly pigmented stains that preserve the grain and texture. Bleaching oil provides an instant driftwood gray effect.

If a natural redwood color tone is your preference, an easy-to-apply clear water repellent solution will protect from dirt and stabilize redwood color to a buckskin tan. Recommended for application to lumber before use, it can be followed with a second coat after construction, with reapplication every two to three years. Varnishes or film finishes that can't stand weathering outdoors are not recommended for garden shelters or any outdoor uses of redwood.

Succulents, Cacti easy to care for

When it comes to gardening, if you have a purple thumb instead of a green one, you may find cacti and succulents your answer to growing plants easily.

They're easy for children to grow and for those with little time or patience to care for plants. And they thrive under what are normally adverse conditions — dry, overheated apartments, for instance. Requirements are few — sunlight, low humidity, infrequent watering and sandy soil.

When a succulent and when a catus? Actually all cacti are succulents, but not all succulents are cacti. The cactus plant family is only one variety of numerous succulents. All have the special capacity, though, to store water in stems or leaves. And that means you can leave these plants unwatered for as long as a month and they will probably be thankful for the "neglect."

Cacti and other succulents offer a multitude of intriguing sizes, shapes and textures. You might plant several in one container for an instant garden in a pot. And several pots planted with cacti and succulents make a beautiful desert-like scene.

Holes in the planters and removable saucers prevent overwatering and insure proper drainage, which is essential to all succulents. And speaking of watering, a simple rule of thumb is to water them well when they are growing (April to October), but otherwise not at all unless they begin to shrivel. Do let the soil dry out completely between waterings, however.

To rot-proof wooden containers paint them with copper napthenate, which won't hurt plants or make vegetables inedible. DO NOT use creosote or other toxic wood preservatives, especially the chemical called "Penta" or pentachlorophenol.

Mulches insulate the soil from the sun's warming rays, making spring frost hazards a greater risk. Wait until late spring to apply mulches in the vegetable garden, when they will do the most good to keep soil temperatures down and reduce water loss.

Flower buds formed under sunny conditions will bloom successfully after moving the plant into the shade. This means annuals normally grown under full sun can provide portable color throughout the summer. Bring the plants back into bloom by setting them in the sun again.

The vegetable gardener whose garden plot doesn't receive a full day of sun, can successfully grow vegetables grown for their leaves and roots such as carrots, chives, lettuce, mustard greens and beets.

Remember to sow vegetables like lettuce, radishes and corn in successive planting to lengthen your harvest time.

When planting a tree, especially bare root specimens, make sure the tree needs a stake before you go ahead and provide artificial support. Thin out the branch structure so that when the tree leafs out it won't catch the wind like the sail of a boat.

Succulents, Cacti . . .

To make your cactus garden, begin with the right potting medium — a combination of perlite, peat moss, and coarse sand or vermiculite works well. A teaspoon of bone meal will help plants flourish.

Place the potting medium directly into the planter and arrange your selection of cacti and succulents. A variety of shapes, textures and sizes makes the most attractive garden. Choose the familiar ball cactus (Echinocactus), Phyllocactus with its leaf-like stalks, and the succulent Mexican firecracker (Echeveria setosa) with its brilliant flowers. A Burro's tail (Sedum morganianun) with its trailing chains of silvery, blue-green leaves makes a contrast to the prickly and spiny varieties in a cactus garden.

Another indoor variety, which is small and grows quickly, is commonly called the peanut cactus (Chamaecereus selvestrii) because it grows in a cylindrical manner about the size of a peanut.

The aloe plant is a succulent that's often called the medicine plant, and many claim its juice, rubbed on minor burns and cuts, gives quick relief and speeds healing. The elongated, spiny leaves are distinctive, and aloes will grow to several feet or more under the right conditions.

Grafted cacti, achieved by taking two different plants and cutting them so fleshy parts join to make a single plant, make interesting additions to a cactus garden, too.

Don't be afraid to plant cacti and succulents close together. They like to be pot-bound and roots require little room.

Once your garden is planted, top it off with a layer of brightly colored sand or pebbles for a real desert-like effect. Sand or pebbles serve a dual purpose: they insure topsoil will drain freely, a critical factor, since rot occurs most often here; and they also keep the top of the soil from forming a hard crust.

Try your own cactus garden. And see how much fun indoor gardening can be — even for purple-thumb people!

Energy-saving ideas explored

The sun's naturally abundant supply of invigorating and non-polluting energy which produces millions of healthy tans each year on poolside loungers now has a more utilitarian function as well — heating the pool water to comfortable swimming temperatures.

"Implementation of solar heating systems is, at least in the pool industry, a here-today reality," states Ira C. Rigger, a pool builder serving this year as president of the National Swimming Pool Institute.

"It's now a matter of calculating the economics for any particular installation and integrating the required equipment into the total landscaping plan."

Depending upon the size of the pool, local utility rates and the amount of energy available from the sun, producers claim that a solar system used to heat a home pool can pay for itself in three to five years, even if a small supplemental heater using more traditional forms of energy is also required.

Enough energy from the sun falls on the surface of the United States each year to total seven times our current annual energy consumption. The problem is to economically trap and use that energy. The pool industry, for its part, has apparently solved that problem.

"Solar heating system for, pools are relatively simple," says Rigger. "Thin, flat black panels about equaling the pool surface area are used to collect the sun's energy which heats water flowing through the panels. This heated water is then pumped to poolside to heat the pool water."

Retrofitting pools for solar heat is also a possibility, but it may be economically impractial.

"If the owner has already equipped the pool with a heater, he has a substantial investment in that equipment and, "Rigger admits, "it probably wouldn't pay to add a solar system."

A notable exception to this rule is that a home pool may be the key ingredient in making solar energy home heating and cooling technically and economically viable.

Such systems require large storage tanks, or "heat sinks," in which the energy collected during the day and stored as heat in water can then be recovered for use during the night or on cloudy days. A home pool has more than sufficient capacity to hold enough energy for this purpose, yet not be heated above a temperature comfortable for swimming.

"A typical home pool receives sufficient solar engery from the sun each day to heat a six-room house for several days," Rigger says. "Currently, most of this energy is lost again, even though a number of products have recently been introduced to cut this loss."

A special pool blanket is one of these new products. Produced by several manufacturers, a pool blanket is a sheet of transparent plastic which allows the sun's engery to penetrate into the pool.

Pots and plants

Roots important to plant life

By Janet Tara
(Fifth of a Series)

Roots are the lifeblood of any plant. Many leaf-damaged plants can make a comeback even after a severe pruning of dead leaves, leaving naught but a bare stem. But once the roots die, there is no hope.

Once you determine the best routine for watering a plant according to the combination of plant variety, size and type of pot, you must stick to it.

Long dry speels followed by heavy watering can cause trouble. Each time a plant is allowed to severely dry out some of the roots die. If you follow this dry spell with a large amount of water to make up for the neglect, the surviving dried out roots are flooded and can't cope with the sudden change. This is how root rot starts.

The best solution for dried out soil is to bring the plant gradually back to its regular watering routine. But if you have damaged the plant, the lower leaves will turn yellow and fall off. Here's what to do to try to correct the damage:

Gently remove the plant from the pot and soil. Examine the roots and smell for decay. Remove all dead and hollow roots. If the soil is still wet, repot in dry sterilized soil. Add a small amount of water. Gradually increase the amount. Keep the plant on the dry side until there are signs of improvement, i.e., the leaves stop yellowing.

This will only work if the roots haven't been very badly damaged. Once severe root damage has taken place, there is very little chance for survival.

Be carpet-wise for the best buys

Carpets aren't what they used to be. Neither are their prices.

They're better. In fact, if you're considering buying a carpet, the time and market are right. Man-made fibers, such as nylon and polyester, have been coupled with advanced industrial technology to put style into carpets without increasing prices.

In the last 25 years, for example, carpet prices are down 50 per cent when compared with other commodity prices, which are up 50 per cent according to the Carpet & Rug Institute.

But all this good news means nothing if when you consider a carpet, you don't put your consumer-sense to work. Here are several quick carpet-buying tips which should set your standards high, and give you the best value for your dollar.

FEEL IT. Always feel a carpet's top side for thickness. Bend it back to check density. A good quality carpet is designed so each fiber is supported closely by the others. This feature confines abrasion mostly to the top of the pile. If you bend the pile back and you see spaces, that usually means the pile is skimpy. The exception is shag because the longer length of the pile contributes to the total amount of fiber. A good rule of thumb: the more fiber to the square inch, the better the carpet will wear.

FLIP IT. The underside of a carpet should have fibers rooted in backing that is uniformly smooth and tight. Check the entire backing surface for loose spots or puckers. And remember a jute underside is subject to mildew, because of its natural substance, and should not be used in kitchens, bathrooms, patios, basements, or any area where there is risk of moisture. A polypropylene backing is becoming more prevalent in the industry because its quality is more consistent and it can be used in wet areas.

READ LABELS. You can find many carpet facts by reading labels affixed to the backing. Information such as style, color, width and pile is clearly identified.

EVALUATE TRAFFIC. Select a carpet texture that complements the type of foot traffic it will receive. Bedrooms usually have light traffic, living rooms get average traffic, and stairs and family rooms heavy traffic.

CONSIDER THE COLOR. White or light colors expand a room, while dark shades or patterns make rooms seem smaller, sometimes cozier. Solid colors show soil more quickly than tweeds or patterns. Warm colors, such as reds, yellows, oranges and golds, make a room appear brighter. Cool colors, including blues, greens and purples, create a more subdued atmosphere.

CHECK THE LIGHT. Warm and cool colors can change a room depending on the varying light conditions. Before making any final buying decision, take home a large sample of the carpet. Remember, vast areas of color will have greater impact than your sample.

THINK PADDING. Every carpet should have a padding to help prolong the carpet's life, increase the feeling of resiliency underfoot, reduce noise transmissions and increase sound absorption, provide additional insulation against heat and cold, help to compensate for minor irregularities in floor surfaces, and prevent a carpet from "crawling" on the floor.

Two types of padding to avoid: very thin foam or sponge rubber, because they are not thick enough to do much good; and all-jute, the lowest priced, which tends to bunch up with use and even accelerate wear spots in carpets.

These tips should make you a consumer-conscious carpet buyer. And there is nothing wrong with that.

All-America Awards

Four roses win 1976 honors

For 38 years, All-America Rose Selections has been admitting new roses into its 26 official test gardens scattered about the United States. These test gardens are open to all of the new hybrids whose breeders have the courage to submit their originations to what is readily admitted to be the most rigorous and exacting rose testing program in the world.

Gaining All-America honors this year are four outstanding new rose creations — America, a hybrid of William Warriner of Tustin, California and the first climber to win an award in 19 years; Cathedral, a floribunda from Sam McGredy IV; Seashell, a dainty golden peach and salmon hybrid tea from Reimer Kordes of Germany; and Yankee Doodle, a bombastic orange sherbet hybrid tea from the same world famous hybridizer.

Now, to examine these four in some detail:

AMERICA (Plant Patent No. 3682) — Being a climbing rose, America was born with two strikes against it to start with, in that the blooms of most climbers have neither the shape nor petal substance to be desirable as cut flowers and, in addition, the flowers of most climbers are borne in loose, floppy clusters.

Also this class of rose requires some type of support on which to climb, therefore is not adapted to many locations on the home grounds.

Its full petalled flowers are very large for a climber (some 3½ to 4 inches across) and are borne on long stems either singly or in small clusters.

The long, shapely buds closely resemble those of hybrid tea roses and open to a bright salmon with a silver sheen. To add depth to their beauty, they have a delicious, deep clove fragrance, probably inherited from one of the parents, Fragrant Cloud.

Because of the long blossom stems plus firm petal substance, and attractive tea rose shape, the blooms of this award winner should prove excellent for cutting and flower arrangements.

Probably America is more of a pillar rose than an out-and-out climber. It will attain heights of about 10 feet under ordinary conditions. The plants branch well and continue to produce large quantities of blooms throughout the season. There is virtually no fading of the flowers from opening to a salmon coral finish and the petals fall cleanly from the plant when their life is over.

The plants are vigorous and rate very well on disease resistance and hardiness, although, where winter weather is severe, the canes should be protected.

America is the result of a cross between Fragrant

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We bought an old house. It was built in 1945 and has asphalt shingles on the roof. While making a repair on the inside of one of the gutters, I noticed the channel was filled with that mineral substance that apparently originally was on the shingles. Did these granules serve a purpose and what does their loosening indicate?

A. — The mineral granules serve a double purpose. They provide roof color and texture and they increase fire resistance. Their presence in large quantities in the gutters usually means that you need a new roof or, at the least, will need one soon.

Q. — I have just finished our attic except for the floor. It presently has what appears to be a sturdy subfloor. I intend to put down resilient floor tiles. Can I put it right over the subfloor or must I put down a whole new floor before installing the tiles?

A. — The tiles should not be installed directly over the subfloor. What you should put down is either hardboard or plywood underlayment and then place the tiles on that. Get the underlayment in the 4 feet by 4 feet sizes, which are easier to handle than the larger sheets. Nail them to the subfloor, leaving about a 16th of an inch between sheets. The underlayment will serve as a solid base for the tiles no matter which type you choose.

Q. — I never seem to know when to use a paste wood filler. I have recently taken up wood finishing, but that aspect of it puzzles me. Can you help?

A. — Paste wood fillers are designed to fill the pores of certain woods, among them walnut, mahogany, oak, chestnut, hickory, ash and elm. They are unnecessary on woods such as pine, fir, cedar, cypress and poplar. Woods such as birch, maple, cherry and redwood are usually left unfilled, but some wood finishers like to use a sealer or liquid filler on them.

TOOL CADDY

With a tool caddy

Make your work easier

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Whether you are a tidy or untidy gardener, a new Lawn and Garden Tool Caddy will make your chores easier. The item is a cart made of heavy wood and metal that rides easily on 20-inch, semi-pneumatic wheels.

The cart is designed to carry the six basic long-handled tools, plant stakes, many hand gardening tools, more than 50 pounds of seed, fertilizer and plant food. A small tool caddy for gloves, twine, seed and other items fits into the top of the cart.

The cart measures 40 inches tall and 24 inches wide and weighs only 40 pounds. A "swing-leg" adds to maneuverability, even on stairways.

Quick Ground Cover

If you want to cover an area temporarily, but quickly, you can plant several annual vines. They will provide quick screens, shades or backgrounds, or may be trained on fences and walls or act as ground covers.

An attractive item is the cup and saucer vine, which generally grows to 10 feet — up to 30 under very favorable conditions. The flowers are large, bell-shaped, pink to purple. In the north, sow the seeds one or two to a peat pot indoors and move outside when frost danger ends. In the south they tend to become perennial.

The blooms are borne sometimes singly and sometimes in clusters of two or three on strong stems which are produced in abundance throughout the flowering season. The heavy production of canes tends to make the plants dense, compact and of medium height. All in all, the garden performance of this award winner is excellent — particularly in those hot weather periods when most roses are not at their best. It is rated as a very vigorous rose, which will produce great quantities of bloom because of its prolific production of flowering canes. The blooms stand up well as cut flowers and in the garden where there is some slight fading just before dropping, but the petals do drop cleanly.

This 1976 All-America comes from Germany and the famous rose breeding establishment of Reimer Kordes. It was produced by the crossing of Konigen der Rosen with an unnamed seedling and its ancestry includes many famous roses, such as Peace, Kordes Perfecta, Tropicana and Golden Scepter.

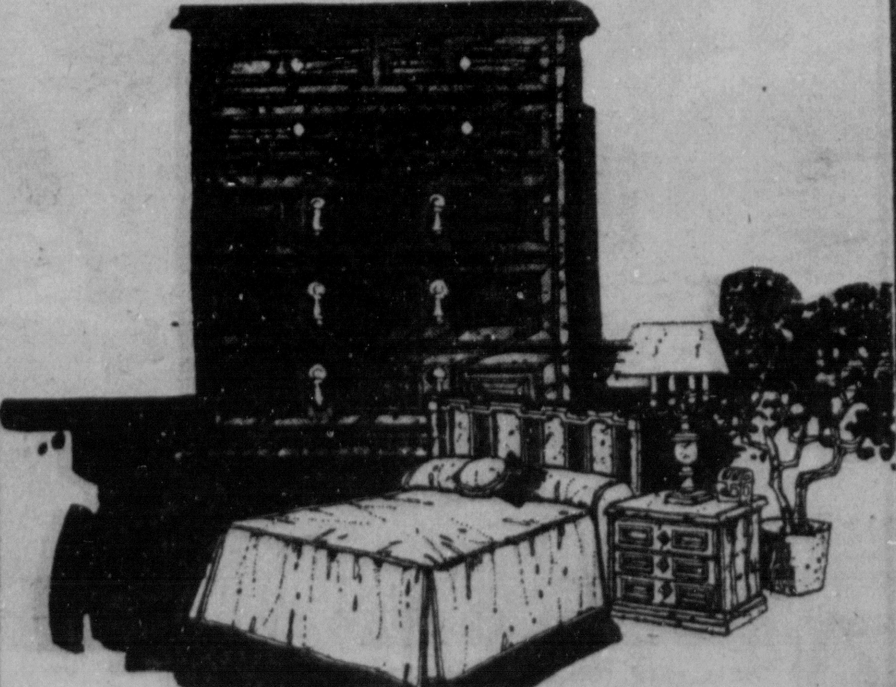
Furniture trade-ins are getting Biggar every day.



In this changing world of ours, some of the old things keep rolling along. Take the matter of trade-ins. When you buy new furnishings from us, we provide you with the option of trading in your old furniture — for which we pay a fair price, and the amount then being credited toward the purchase. (We pick up the trade-in furniture at the same time we make our delivery of the new.)

When did all this start? Well, we started this trade-in policy back in 1948. And people loved it; they kept coming back for more. This policy just naturally evolved into another Biggar enterprise — the establishment, in 1951, of our used furniture store on 2030 E. Walnut St., in Pasadena. (Phone 795-8124)

(And we must admit, this has developed into quite a side benefit — because people reasoned that since our customers bought only the very best from us, what they traded in was of a comparable quality, if a little used.)

Like we say, some of the old things just keep rolling along.

Petunias not like they used to be

Today's petunia varieties scarcely resemble the favorites of the early 1950s and 1960s. Many varieties now claim larger flowers, earlier blooming and better branching habits. The compact and free-flowering varieties of the 1970s are ideal for hanging baskets and patio containers.

In the garden mass colors for a grand effect. Free form designs of solid color will turn many a head during the spring and summer months. Plant petunias in full sun and avoid overhead sprinkling if possible.

Double-flowered petunias do best in close-up situations where the fullness of the flowers is most appreciated. Circus, a red and white double, is still an all-time garden favorite. The elegant and showy Bridal Bouquet and Sonata are two double white varieties well worth growing too.

Single petunias are available in multiflora and grandiflora type. The multifloras are quite free-flowering and where planted in large masses put on a great show. Many of the grandifloras are famous for their large flowers and sensational display of color and form.

produce an attractive vine 6-8 feet tall, with purple or white, pealike blossoms followed by flat, purple seed-pods.

The Scarlet Runner bean does double duty, producing beanlike scarlet flowers, then fruits that are edible.

For a dainty item, try cypress vine, which has fernlike leaves. The flowers are starlike, orange, scarlet or white. The vines grow 15-20 feet and may be started in a pot indoors in winter. Soak the seeds overnight before planting, starting with hot water and letting it cool.

Less vigorous is the thunbergia or Black-Eyed Susan vine, which grows to six feet with yellowish flowers with black eyes. Another use is in hanging baskets, or hanging from window boxes to run along the ground.

For planting, prepare soil as you would for any flowers or vegetables, loosening soil a spade deep, mixing fertilizer in rows, adding soil before planting seeds one half to one inch deep, depending on size. Weed as you would vegetables.

Late fall is considered the best time to fertilize narrowleaf evergreens.

How often should you water cactus? In spring and summer — the growing season — water as you would other foliage plants. They should be potted, however, in a porous sandy soil for good drainage. In fall and winter, water just enough to keep the plants from shriveling.

Trees get hungry, too

If you haven't been feeding your trees for the last year or two, it is time that you considered it.

A hungry tree may not dramatically reveal its condition to you — it has no arms to clutch a missing tummy, and no tongue to loll out. But if its leaves are not as deep or rich a green, or as plentifull, as you remember them, or if there are dead areas in the centers or edges of the leaves, a degree of starvation is present.

Trees growing in confined spaces, in compacted soil, or competing with a lawn for nourisment usually need extra help.

Planning the proper menu for your trees may seem confusing. If you shop at your local garden supply store you are confronted with stacks of bagged fertilizers, all hinting at instantaneous results but rarely clearly labeled "for trees."

Which kind should you buy? How much will you need? What is the right time of year to put it down?

The National Arborist Association, an organization of men devoted to tree care, offers these helpful tips:

— Read the numbers on the fertilizer bags. If you see 10-6-4, for example, that indicates the percentage or "grade" of nitrogen (10 per cent, phosphoric acid (6 per cent, and potassium (4 per cent contained in the bag.

The National Arborist Association recommends grades 12-7-5, 12-6-6, 10-8-6, or 10-6-4 for use as tree food.

— The amount you will need to adequately feed your trees can be gauged by measuring the diameter of the tree trunk at a height of four and one-half feet above the ground level.

The following scale can then be applied: two-three inch diamenter - 1½ pounds per inch; three-five inch diameter - 1½ to 3 pounds per inch; six inch diameter - 2 to 3 pounds per inch, and larger trees - 3 to 5 pounds per inch.

Punch holes with a crowbar or power auger in concentric circles from a base of the trunk. Stagger the holes about two feet apart and locate them under the crownspread of the tree to the outer tips of the branches. After inserting the fertilizer to a point two inches below grade, fill the remainder of the hole with peat humus or soil.

— avoid overfeeding. Too much food can be as injurious as none! Americian beech, crabapple, and white oak trees should be given half the above amounts, and never in early spring.

— When to feed them? Your hungry trees will benefit from a feeding in any season of the year. However, fertilizing them in mid-to-late fall, before the ground freezes hard, will provide nutrients for your trees to use in early spring when active growth starts.

— Don't forget that water is a vital substance important to the life support of a tree. It is a source of oxygen and hydrogen.

— Properly fed and watered, your trees will flourish luxuriantly and become more disease, drought, and insect resistant. In the long run you'll be happy that you invited them to lunch!

Permanent greenhouse

By STEVE ELLINGSON

A few months ago, we released plans for a simple greenhouse made from polyethylene sheeting. It was very popular. Since then, we've been deluged with requests for a simple-to-build greenhouse of a more permanent type. Well, we went back to the drawing boards and have come up with a jim-dandy design. It's constructed of transluscent fibergalss panels which permit the sun's growing rays to enter and weather well. They're available at dealers everywhere. Modular in design, the greenhouse can be adjusted to any size need in four-foot increments.

This greenhouse is of simple post-and-beam construction and there's a complete materials guide included. So if you love both building and growing things, here's the perfect way to extend the growing season year-round. Whether you are into growing vegetables for the family table, or ornamental plants for pleasure, here's the perfect cradle for new life.

To obtain Fiberglass Greenhouse Plan No. 573, send $2 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, Pomona Progress Bulletin Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

One of the more ambitious designs — good to consider as a community project — is an Old Glory Thirteen Star Flag, displayed in a bed 28 feet long by 15 feet wide, using red, white and blue petunias to produce the desired effect. Start the petunias indoors from seed, and transplanting into the flower bed one foot apart after all danger of frost, using 51 blue petunias to stimulate the stars, 142 red penunias to create the stripes, and 139 white petunias for the white areas of the flag.

For the best display of this floral flag locate the bed on a slight incline in full sun. Before planting it is essential to measure the area accurately, making sure all edges are straight, and the corners square. The soil should be cultivated to a depth of 12 inches, and a general purpose fertilizer.worked into the soil at the rate of two to three pounds per 100 square feet.

Leave a wide margin around the edge, allowing at least 1½ feet of space between the edges and the closest flowers. The edges are best mulched as this helps to define the design, and it reduces the need for constant weeding and watering. Keep faded flowers picked off, water well during dry spells, and apply a booster application of fertilizer during the growing season to maintain maximum bloom production, and a long lasting floral display.

A simpler design, called Bicentennial Border, requires a straight border area just 2½ feet wide. This uses red salvia as a background, blue ageratum for intermediate height, and white alyssum as an edging. These widely adapted, long lasting flowers create a beautiful red, white and blue design.

Other simple Bicentennial flower garden ideas include the planting of red, white and blue morning glories to decorate posts of mail boxes, fences or trellis. Morning glories are fast-growing annuals, like a sunny location and love to climb.

Red, white and blue cascading petunias can create a spectacular hanging basket. A nine-inch diameter basket will hold three petunias, while a 12-inch is good for six plants. Wire mesh baskets are best, lined with sphagnum moss and a potting mixture.

Hanging baskets dry out extra fast, so frequent watering is essential and the addition of a fertilizer several times during the growing season.

Do-it-yourself ceiling insulation gives you double savings. You save on the cost of installation, you save on the amount of gas you use for heating.

Check your attic or crawl space. Even if there's some insulation there, you probably need more to meet current FHA R-19 standards for energy conservation. (R-19 is simply a measure of the insulation material's ability to prevent winter heat loss and summer heat gain. All manufacturers label their insulation materials with R-values.)

You'll find installing R-19 ceiling insulation is surprisingly easy — our free booklet tells you exactly how. It only takes a few hours to complete the job, but your savings go on forever.

Keep your lawn happy

Problem lawns are easier to prevent than cure. It is certainly not too early to start now with a good watering and fertilizing program and be on the way to a thick green lawn this spring. Good lawn care results in a healthy carpet of grass that is much better able to out-compete weeds for light, water, nutrients and space! A vigorous lawn will also resist fungus diseases better.

Most of the serious diseases of turfgrass in California are caused by fungi. The spores produced by the microscopic fungi may be spread by wind and water or can be spread throughout the lawn with a mower. Since many fungi need moisture and a favorably warm temperature to germinate, it is important to water early in the day so that the grass blades have a chance to dry before the temperatures rise. It is also better to water infrequently and deeply to encourage deep roots that will help the lawn withstand hot, dry conditions through the summer.

Older lawns or compacted soild may require aeration to prevent excessive run-off and achieve soil moisture down to the desired six to eight-inch depth.

Another key to preventing problems in the lawn is the correct application of fertilizers. Too much or too little can encourage fungus growth. Your local nurseryman can provide you with a total fertilizer program for the season. Since nitrogen moves readily through the soil and beyond the reach of the roots, more than one application is necessary and beneficial.

Iris show this weekend

The Aril Society International will present its Tenth Annual Specialty Iris Show at the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum in Arcadia Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Aril iris are a species of iris of extraordinary beauty that are characterized by a white collar, or aril, on the seed. Although the forthcoming show will primarily exhibit aril species and aril hybrids, sections for other special iris such as dwarfs, medians, and Pacific Coast Natives will be included.

There will also be arrangements sections for both beginning and advanced amateurs of sufficiently wide variety to permit exhibitors to find appropriate subjects for their talents. Exhibition privileges are open to all persons and no entry fee is charged.

Specimen and arrangement entries may be made at the Arboretum tonight from 7 to 9 and on Saturday from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. Judging will be done by accredited American Iris Society judges. American Iris Society ribbons and also some special awards will be given winning entries in both the horticultural and the arrangement sections.

New energy for plants from fertilizers

Selecting the right kind and amount of fertilizer for use on your lawn or garden is an important first step toward an attractive home landscape, and productive vegetable or flower plants.

Your best sources of information for specific problems or plant needs are your county extension agent, or local lawn and garden supply center.

In addition, here are some general guidelines from The Fertilizer Institute, based on U. S. Department of Agriculture information:

Fertilizers differ in cost for a variety of reasons:

—Nutrient content. Products containing a high percentage of plant nutrients — nitrogen, phosphate and potash — cost more per pound than those containing a small percentage of nutrients.

— Ingredients. Products containing slowly available forms of nitrogen cost more per pound than those containing quickly available forms.

Form. Granular, pelleted, or soluable fertilizers cost more than powdered fertilizers.

Added materials. Products containing added micronutrient elements and pesticides cost more than fertilizers without these additions.

— Package size. Normally, fertilizer products in a small container cost more per pound than the same products in a large container.

Nutrient Content. By state law, fertilizer manuufacturers must list the guaranteed primary nutrient percentage on each fertilizer container. This percentage is known as the grade of fertilizer. For example, a fertilizer mixture showing, the guaranteed content 10-10-10 will contain 10 per cent each of nitrogen, phosphate and potash.

Manufacturers vary the fertilizer grade to meet various soil land plant needs. For example, lawn fertilizers usually are highest in nitrogen content because plants grown primarily for their leaf growth require more nitrogen. Fertilizers for use on many vegetables, such as root crops or crops grown for "fruit" are formulated with highest content of phosphate in the mixture.

Today, there are "specialty" fertilizers formulated for nearly every kind of garden or landscape plant.

Fertilizers of several grades may have the same ratio of nutrients. For example, the two grades 20-10-10 and 10-5-5 have the same ratio of nutrients (2-1-1). Fertilizers have the same ratios normally can be used interchangeably by adusting the application amount.

— Ingredients. The slowly available forms of nitrogen, ureaformaldehyde for example, are usually more expensive than forms more quickly available for plant use, such as ammonium nitrate or ammonium sulfate. The slowly-available nitrogens forms are more expensive to produce, but need to be applied less frequently during the plants growing season because of their "time-release" feature.

— Package Size. As with

most products, fertilizers cost more per pound in small package than they do in large packages. Packaging costs amounts for much of the expense of fertilizer merchandizing.

Paying the higher rate for small packages of fertilizer may be justified if you need only a small amount, if the case of handling smaller packages is sufficiently advantageous, or if storage of large packages is a problem.

For greatest economy, determine the total amount of each kind of fertilizer that you need for one season, then buy this amount in the largest available packages.

Few soils have sufficent nutrients to support best plant growth. Therefore, it's necessary to supplement the soil's store of plant nutrients ,with today's commercial fertilizers to get the most vigorous lawn, abundant flowers, and greatest yield of tasty, nutritious vegetables.

Early art inspires decor for walls

Long before he gave up believing the earth was flat, man had determined that art did not have to be. From earliest times, sculpture has been among the world's most challenging and fascinating art forms.

Of particular interest is sculpture executed in relief, either high or low, a technique closely associated with architecture and furniture making.

The use of relief sculptures on their own, rather than as integral parts of a building or as furniture decoration, is relatively recent. The word plaque, which originally referred to an ornamental medallion inserted into the wood work of cabinets, chairs, and such, now describes an increasingly popular type of wall decoration.

"One obvious reason for the growing acceptance of deep-dimensional plaques is the lack of interior architectural detailing in today's homes," noted decorating consultant Mary Ann Wills.

"Ornamental moldings are rare, as is the carved woodwork of generations past," she added. "Gone is the time when the rich would import a team of European sculptors to enrich bannisters, doors, and window frames. Even if one could afford them, the artists would be hard to find today."

Thanks to modern technology, however, the work of the few such artists remaining can be enjoyed by anyone, rather than restricted to a wealthy few. Fine sculptures executed in wood are being faithfully duplicated, at affordable prices, by companies.

What gives this kind of wall decor such strong appeal in 1976? One factor, Wills suggests, is its continuing relationship to furniture design trends. "Whatever the homemaker's choice — traditional, Early American, modern, or even Mediterranean — she'll find that complementary accessories are readily available."

Another is versatility — the way it fits into almost any room in any home, without need for special lighting or other display techniques.

A third is cost, which is remarkably low in view of the time and effort required to create a design.

Replacing window glass needn't 'pane'

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There's a knack to cutting glass for the replacement of a window pane, but it's something you can learn with a little practice. Do it three or four times with some scrap glass and you'll suddenly find yourself getting the hang of it.

The first thing you should know is that the glass should be cut slightly smaller than the dimensions of the frame into which it will be placed. This is to allow for irregularities and expansion. Deduct about 1-16th of an inch (⅛th inch maximum) from each dimension. The frame is so constructed as to permit this leeway.

Before making the cut, be certain the glass is absolutely clean. The slightest dirt or grit can interfere with the action of the glass cutter. Place the glass on newspapers which are on a flat surface, such as a workbench. Use a straightedge, preferably metal, to guide the wheel of the cutter. Put a few drops of turpentine or kerosene along the line of the cut. Hold the cutter firmly and almost vertically. Begin at the part of the glass farthest from you, drawing the cutter towards you. Use fairly heavy pressure, moving the cutter so that a line is scored in the single long stroke. There is a tendency to apply firm pressure at the start, then relax it a bit as you move the cutter. Resist it, because the glass may not separate cleanly at the point where you relaxed the pressure.

When you practice, you may find that you have no trouble making the cut, but that you run into difficulty when you attempt to break off the scrap glass from the part that is to be used in the window frame. Some persons tap along the top of the scored line with the back of the cutter; some do it on the underside; some on both sides. My own method, evolved after experimenting, is to tap gently along the underside of the cut, move the glass carefully so that the scrap part overhangs the workbench, then snap it off firmly with one hand while I hold the glass with the other. For this snapping operation, I put on work gloves.

Your cutter has a notched edge. This should be used when snapping off narrow strips of glass.

Is all this worthwhile? It is when you have some old glass on hand that can be used or when your hardware store or glass dealer charges considerably more for cutting the glass to exact dimensions than for buying one of the pieces he has in stock. It isn't if the charge is nominal. If you do have a pane cut to order, better measure the dimensions three times to be certain you haven't made a mistake and be sure to tell the dealer whether you already have made the necessary deductions.

To replace the pane — and assuming you have already removed every bit of the old glass — first apply linseed oil to the grooves of the frame in which the new glass will be placed. Use a putty knife to put down a bed of putty or glazier's compound. Put the glass into position and insert glazier's points every few inches. Make a roll of putty and press it against the frame and glass with your fingers. Do the smoothing with the blade of a putty knife. While the putty or glazier's compound is often left as is, it will stand up better against the weather if it is painted after a few days.

(The techniques of 35 do it-yourself tasks are explained in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Florida: house plant capital

APOPKA, Fla. (AP) — Caravans of trucks, ranging from pickups to tractor trailers, roll out of this small Central Florida town each day carrying the non-stop harvest of the nation's fastest growing agricultural crop: potted house plants.

"When people talk about Florida, they usually talk about tourism or citrus, but the Florida nursery industry is the big success story of not only the state but the entire nation," says Charles Dunn, executive vice president of the Florida Nurserymen and Growers Association.

In the last three years, wholesale sales of Florida-grown house plants have increased 100 per cent to $87.3 million in 1975, and University of Florida agriculture researchers have predicted a growth rate of 138 per cent by 1985.

Florida currently produces 82 per cent of all the house plants grown in the United States, and about two-thirds of the Sunshine State-crop is centered around Apopka, a garden-variety small town about 10 miles north of Orlando.

"No matter where you live, in a New York City apartment or a Dallas suburb, the odds are good that the philodendron on your coffee table came from right here," said Cecil Rogers, the nursery association's representative in Apopka.

From the small grower to the giant corporation, the sale of Florida-grown plants has expanded at a rate that would turn any Wall Street investor green with envy.

Green Thumb Crop, the largest nursery operation in the state, reported sales of $25 million in 1974 and $41 million in 1975.

"I guess you could call business good," said Green Thumb president Bob Stutzman, who recently moved from exclusively wholesale to retail sales with a marketing scheme based on the home parties used by merchants of plastic food containers.

Be sure to guard against crabgrass

Mention of crabgrass causes lawn keepers in many parts of the country to shudder. Crabgrass is a hot-weather annual, its seed wintering over in the soil, sprouting when spring temperatures teach 55 degrees or so. The weed spreads by trailing runners that infiltrate the lawn rapidly in warm weather, choking and smothering the lawn grass.

There are a number of ways to take some of the curse out of crabgrass. One is to prevent sprouting of its seed. Pre-emergence crabgrass preventers do just that. Precise timing is required (before crabgrass seed sprouts), and uniform blanketing of the lawn where the crabgrass customarily grows is necessary.

Preventers may depress lawn grass slightly, restraining depth of rooting, and perhaps altering color and texture somewhat. One can wait until crabgrass has definitely made its appearance, and then spray with post-emergence arsonates a couple of times. This kills most of the crabgrass, with only momentary discoloration of the lawn grasses.

But there is still another counter thrust to crabgrass invasion. Why not let your lawn fight most of the battle? This it will do if dense and vigorous. Moderate fertilization and high-mowing early in spring are often sufficient to help the lawn put the kibosh on crabgrass.

Especially will this be effective if your lawn was sowed to leafy, strongly-rhizoming cultivars or if these top performers are over-seeded into thin turf. Crabgrass will not grow in shade, such as under trees, neither will it grow appreciably in a tight turf blends and mixtures properly tended.

Fireplace shop takes pride in its service

A 44-year-old tradition, begun in 1932 when a Glendale man opened a fireplace equipment and accessories business in that city, is being carried on by his daughter, Romayne Stewart, in a business of her own, called Stewart's Fireplace Shop.

The business, now 2 years old, is located at 163 W. Arrow in Glendora.

"Service is the key word in my shop," sayd Mrs. Stewart, who has had 43 years' experience in the fireplace business. In addition, Mrs. Stewart has had training in the arts and in interior decorating, and is well qualified to advise customers of her business.

"The public's response has been most gratifying," says Mrs. Stewart.

Pan American

Pan American Day is observed on April 14 to commemorate the First International Conference of American States, held on that date in 1890 in Washington, D.C. The Conference adopted a resolution which resulted in the creation of the hemispheric organization known today as the Pan American Union, with headquarters in Washington.

The growing interest in home vegetable gardens can be traced to a desire for top-quality, readily available home vegetables and the enjoyment and self satisfaction gained from raising fresh foods.

Disappointment awaits the gardener, however, who fails to provide adequate plant nutrients. Few soils can support high yields of top-quality vegetables without the addition of plant nutrients to supplement those already available.

Fertilizer should be worked into garden soil two to four inches deep a few days before planting. The composition of the commercial fertilizer and rate of application can vary with the soil and crop or crops to be grown.

For instance, leafy crops such as spinach, and lettuce require a mixed fertilizer high in nitrogen.

Tuber and root crops such as potatoes, beets, carrots and turnips need a higher percentage of potash in the mixture than other vegetables.

Tomatoes and beans may require only moderate amounts of fertilizer for best yields, whereas onions, celery, lettuce, roots and tuber crops respond well to larger applications.

There are commericial fertilizers blended in correct amounts for all types of garden vegetables. specialists at most garden centers can advise you on the type and amounts to use for your soil, and for the crops you wish to grow.

In some cases, your garden specialist may advise that agricultural lime is needed for soils in your area to correct acid soil conditions. Most garden vegetables grow best on soils that are slightly acid, so do not add limestone unless you are sure application is needed.

If in doubt, ask at your garden center about soil tests. In most areas, these are also available through your county extension agent's office.

Many garden centers have soil testing kits available for the home gardener, which can be used to give a quick indication of soil acidity.

Although there are many inportant steps to a successful garden, use of today's speciall-formulated garden fertilizers will help assure the nutrients necessary for high vegetable yields.

A key step in any successful vegetable crop venture is proper soil preparation. If soil is "heavy" or has a high clay content, mulch or compost should be worked into the upper soil layer or root zone.

Such organic matter helps in release of some soil nutrients, helps loosen or "lighten" heavy soils and encourages water retention for plant use. Pracitcally any plant materials can be used including partially decayed leaves and grass clippings, and plant refuse from the kitchen.

House plant capital...

While Green Thumb has prospered from a big investment in automation, the small, family-run nurseries that dot the back roads around Apopka also have flourished.

"I stay sold out," said Manny Allen, the owner and operator — along with his wife and three sons — of Bay Hill Nursery. "I have for several years. I do in excess of $50,000 in sales a year, but couldn't increase that if I wanted to."

The large nurseries like Green Thumb market their plants through sophisticated distribution centers using fleets of trucks, but many of the small operations sell to youths who drive to Florida in pickup trucks in an effort to turn a profit by selling to retail plant shops which are mushrooming all across the nation.

"They come down here in old trucks and cars and buy as many plants as they can haul back to places like Chicago," said Rogers.

The profits from the retail sale of house plants are massive and increasing. Industry sources say the average markup from wholesale to retail is about 400 per cent.

Paneling made fun

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Whether you use one of those new "nail guns" or a simple tack hammer, paneling can be fun. And think of how much beauty and resale value a paneling job adds to your home. Remember too that it's practically maintenance-free (especially those new "man-made" wood-grained panels that look just like the real thing and cost so much less!). Paneling can be used to conceal old, cracked and otherwise defective walls. It also acts as an insulation against heat, cold and noise. Paneling is as practical as today and as charming as yesteryear.

Our simple step-by-step instructions include dozens of pictures and drawings that anyone can follow. We'll show you how to lay panels over concrete basement walls, regular or uneven plaster walls. There are guidelines for estimating, proper sawing methods, cutouts around wall outlets, doorways, stairs, etc. It's the most complete guide (we believe) that's available today.

To obtain our No. 569 PANELING MADE EASY instructions, send $1.50 (includes first class postage & handling) by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, c/o: Pomona Progress Bulletin Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

strong canes. The plants are exceedingly tall, free branching, broad and upright.

They get the blooms up where you can enjoy the fruity fragrance of the flowers which they hold erect even after a rain or an overhead watering. The plants are well-clothed with attractive glossy deep olive-green foliage that is reported as being very disease resistant.

Yankee Doodle produces large, fat buds, predominently of deep golden yellow, which sort of unwrap themselves in an orderly fashion to produce massive, showy, glowing rich coral-orange bicolor blooms that attract attention from as far away as they can be seen.

The flowers are chock full of stiff, starchy petals — 50 or more of them — plus additional tealoids. Admittedly, the blooms produce too many petals to rate as top show roses, but they certainly do become eye-catchers in the garden.

They also will hold their own as cut flowers. After all, rose blooms shaped like grecian urns don't hold an exclusive for the creation of attractive flower arrangements. Yankee Doodle will provide fragrant bouquets, and will last well as a cut flower.

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

No matter how many safeguards manufacturers devise to protect the users of electrical tools and equipment, no matter how stringent the requirements of electrical codes and building regulations, there always are some persons who find ways to circumvent them.

Three-pronged plugs on portable power tools enjoyed a wave of popularity a few years ago because they seemed to provide a form of automatic grounding. Which they did — but only when used properly in outlets with a special three-wire ground conductor. So people began cutting off the third prong of the plug to make it fit into a two-slot outlet or using an adapter and neglecting to ground it.

The current effort to protect users of portable electric tools and appliances against themselves is through what is usually called double insulation or shockproof or safety housing. Tools so protected usually have the conventional two-pronged plugs and thus can be used in ordinary outlets. This has worked wonders in preventing accidents because of short circuits. But, in a few cases, it doesn't provide 100 per cent protection against ALL electrical hazards. Users are warned that double insulated equipment should not be grounded, since an improper wiring connection could make exposed metal parts live. No matter how remote the possibility of a shock with a double insulated tool or appliance — and it is remote — it is foolhardy not to read the instructions that come with the unit.

Another development designed to prevent trouble is the ground fault interrupter. If there's a shock-causing ground fault condition in electrical equipment or wiring, the device interrupts the circuit and cuts off the current. It has been so effective that the National Electrical Code has mandated its use in bathrooms and outdoor receptacles, places where dangerous electrical shocks are likely to occur. But even this protective device can only protect a person against current leading through the body to the ground. It can't protect you when you become the path for the current between the hot wire and the neutral wire of a circuit.

Even though your swimming pool has ground fault interrupter protection, some pool safety tips are in order. Don't use portable appliances within 10 feet of the pool. The National Electrical Code forbids installation of outlets within 10 feet from the inside walls of a pool. If a receptacle is located within 15 feet of the pool, ground fault interrupter protection is required. Keep extension cords away from pools. Take care in handling poolside accessories, such as radios, barbecues, refrigerators and the like. And don't run overhead wires across the pool or diving platform or within 10 feet of them.

In short, no matter what precautions are built into your power tool or appliance and regardless of what extra protective equipment you provide, don't assume that nothing can happen.

Vines can serve many purposes

How would you like to make an addition to your home which possesses all of the following characteristics? This addition will:

— Filter sunlight, making for a cooler house in summer.

— Function as insulation, and so reduce fuel costs in winter.

As if this weren't enough, this addition is available at very low cost.

What is this new, miracle discovery?

The "discovery" is hardly new or miraculous. Rather it is old-fashioned vines which, when properly used, can be a positive asset to the ecology, economny and esthetics of your home.

Such is the suggestion of the American Association of Nurserymen in its popular Green Survival program, whose concern is to improve the quality of American life through the creative use of green, growing plant materials.

A wide selection of hardy vines is available with varying traits so you can choose the vine most suitable to your desires and the specfications of the planting site. Most of these climbers do well on posts, fences, upright walls, arbors and trellises.

Since perennial vines will be a part of the landscaped area for years to come, they should be selected and planted with care. They are rapid growers, averaging eight feet per year. Annuals, of course, last only for a season and are valued for their profuse colorful flowers. Average growth for most annuals is 15 feet a season.

Spring is the best time for planting vines, and they may be placed outdoors as soon as danger of frost is past. For advice on the best vine for your yard, see your local nursery garden center, which can also supply whatever planting materials you need.

Vines growing on frame buildings can damage the wood and create wood rot. For this reason the AAN recommends the use of wooden trellies on the face of the structure, which will allow air to circulate behind the vine permit easy removal of the trellis and vine for painting or repair of the building.

So whether you're wanting sunshade or dust filter or screen, a vine, in a relatively short period of time, will provide all these for you while also offering a lovely wall of color.

CRAFTS ROOM — A room remodeled on the second floor of a home for a crafts area owes success to large storage cabinets built into the knee wall to hold extra yarn, and other supplies. Cabinet doors of 1x6-inch tongue and groove western wood are carefully matched to continue wall paneling boards. The ceiling is 1x3 hemlock. For a hobby like weaving or sewing, or the addition of a home office, any well-lighted corner of an attic or basement can be made comfortable. However, for a hobby like ceramics, with a lot of heavy materials involved, a ground-floor location is advisable, and a converted garage lends itself perfectly to this use.

Tips on spring lawn care

Spring weather is on your side. It yearns to turn a lawn attractive, urging the grass to fresh new growth. And you can lend a few assists.

If the lawn is discolored, the grass foliage scorched brown by winter weather, mow it closely and sweep up the duff. One such scalping early in the seasons does no harm and lets sunlight penetrate deep into the sod warming the soil quickly.

The added warmth hastens revival. And young leaves hidden in the turf are better displayed with the spent herbage gone. Dont' do away with new green leaf, though; the grass needs all it can muster for making food to carry on the revival.

If the lawn is thin, or lacks modern lawngrass varieties that you would like to have there, scatter top-quality seed lightly wherever thickening is in order. But seed stands a reasonably good chance of rooting only if it strikes moist soil. So, it's a good idea to scratch-in overseeings. Sacrify bare soil especially, to make it receptive (tiny lawnseeds will find a good home in the scratches).

Adequate fertility is another "must" for quick revival. An early feeding is essential if lawn fertilization was neglected in autumn.

Fertilizer encourages lusty grass growth ahead of the weeds, and is the best possible deterrent to unwanted invaders.

Gradual-release fertilizers provide nutrient constancy, and over a series of years accumulate in the soil sufficiently to sustain grass for many weeks even should feeding be delayed.

Home pool buying tips offered

Buying a home swimming pool this year can be compared in many respects to buying a new car. Sizes and price ranges are about the same, each can be custom equipped with a variety of accessories, and the buyer has a number of places to shop for the best deal.

Unlike the car, however, the swimming pool will apprecate in value over the years and more favorable financing is generally available.

Prices for an above-ground pool large enough for family splashing and fun begin around several hundred dollars. Large pools of this type with decking attached along with the smaller in-ground pools are generally comparable to the price of an economy car. Larger, more elaborate in-ground pools can be considerably more expensive, matching more closely the price of a luxury automobile today.

But the National Swimming Pool Institute stresses that, like most autos, most pools built are in the mid-range price. The latest industry figures, for example, indicated that the average in-ground pool, depending upon equipment and deck, cost between $12 and $15 per square foot of water area. Such factors as excavation site difficulties and pool design will also affect cost.

The biggest cost saver is adequate prior planning. Uses of the pool ranging from family frolicking to serious swimming should be first anticipated before pool size, design and location are considered.

Next in rank for cost savings is shopping to narrow the field of pool contractors to two or three which seem right for your pocket. Make sure each contractor offers a pool which meets or exceeds the suggested minimum design and construction standards for residential pools formulated by the National Swimming Pool Institute.

Most pools today are constructed of various forms of concrete, with vinyl liners or with fiberglass. Each type has certain advantages in particulars applications and differs somewhat in costs. The pool contractors will be able to assist the family in making wise decisions about the pool size and design and guide homeowners as to homeowners as to the costs assocated with each type of pool construction.

Homeowners should also investigate the costs and availability of the many accessories offered on standard pools. Such equipment as pool heaters and automatic chemical feeders and pool cleaners all have benefits in making the pool less work and more enjoyable for longer periods of time each year, but also costs to the pool.

Built-in seats with therapy jets like those installed on the new White House pool add costs, too, but may "pay for themselves in one sitting," especially if you are afflicted with backache, other muscle and joint ailments, or chronic tension.

Additionally, if you have plans for a garden pool, spa, or waterfall in your backyard, check in the beginning with the pool contractor. It will be less expensive in the long run to get all the work done at one time and you can finance it along with the pool.

Energy conservation ideas are worthwhile

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Do you really save money on energy conservation improvements, and, if so, is it enough to make it worthwhile?

A study by the National Bureau of Standards, in conjunction with the Federal Energy Administration, gives affirmative answers to both parts of that question. How much you should invest depends equally on climate and energy prices, since both affect your heating and air conditioning bills. The bureau gives this example:

"When prices for home heating oil doubled in Washington, D. C., the effect on a home owner's heating bill was the same as physically moving his house to Minnesota."

Increases in the cost of energy for heating and cooling homes has led the government to recommend much higher levels of insulation — often double or more the amounts that were thought sufficient even a year or two ago. The NBS now says:

"In some parts of the country, when higher-priced fuels are used, R-38 insulation (about 12 inches of mineral fiber batts) in the attic is recommended to give the best results. Even in milder climates, R-30 insulation (about 10 inches) may be economically justified if you use oil or electric heating at current high prices. For instance, for a home in Indianapolis, recommendations are for R-30 ceiling insulation, full insulation in walls, R-19 insulation in floors over cold spaces, and storm sash for all windows nine square feet or more in area."

A colder climate calls for buttoning-up a house even more tightly. Requirements may be less in a warmer climate, but not if a home is air conditioned, because then energy is saved in the summer, too.

"R" numbers call for a little explanation. Energy savings result from decreasing the heat flow through the exterior shell of a building. The resistance, or R value, of insulation is the measure of its ability to decrease heat flow. Although two different kinds of insulation may be of different thicknesses, they'll perform equally well if the R numbers are the same. If R numbers are different, the one with the higher R will perform better. To meet federal specifications, R values are generally marked on packages of insulation. If they aren't, be wary.

How much will it cost? Here's a list of some of the costs the NBS used in figuring out its recommendations. They include an allowance for contractor installation:

Storm windows, up to 100 inches of height and width combined — $30. More than 100 inches — add 60 cents an inch.

Storm doors — $75.

The NBS adds: "Many of these items can be purchased at substantial discounts if you watch the advertised sales. Considerable savings may be made by installing these materials yourself."

Because of the considerable cost variations, the National Mineral Wool Insulation Assn. advises home owners to check building supply dealers, home centers and mail-order houses for prices of insulation batts, blankets, and pouring wool. For contractor installation, ask for quotes from two or three contractors, specifying exactly what you want.

The same applies to storm windows and doors. Check building supply dealers, home centers or retail dealers in window glass for do-it-yourself installation. For contractor installation, get cost quotations from home improvement contractors or glass dealers. Prices of weatherstripping and caulking materials are available at hardware stores and home centers.

(You can get a copy of Andy Lang's booklet, "How To Save Money by Insulating," by sending 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743.)

Not too late to find cuttings

It's still not too late to find rooted cuttings of grape varieties for the home garden. Plant them in full sun with the top bud at the soil level and mound some soil over them. New plantings will need no pruning until next winter. At that time select one strong cane and remove the others.

Ex-general as mayor

Hup-two-three-four for Oceanside now

OCEANSIDE (AP) — The exgeneral who swept loiterers out of City Halls says his transition to civilian leadership is proceeding smoothly.

A pocket of resistance here and there but so far no movement to repulse him.

In office for only two weeks, Mayor Paul Graham said in an interview that he is bringing order out of chaos.

"The situation was intolerable," he said of City Hall before he put up off-limits signs last week to visitors without specific business.

"There were groups of citizens just milling around City Hall. Few had any business here. I was talking on my telephone at one point, and one person came into my office and started carrying on conversation with me."

He spotted a newspaper reporter using Councilman Carl Pruitt's telephone.

Nobody, press or public, has been allowed inside City Hall except by appointment or some prior announcement, a move Graham says will "give us time to clear our desks, collect our thoughts and converse with them in a more intelligent manner."

The 53-year-old Graham was a brigadier general in the Marine Corps and commandant of neighboring Camp Pendleton until last November. His election as mayor March 2 was a surprise to many in Oceanside, a city of 50,000 civilians, and even Graham says "what surprised me was the margin of victory."

He carried 41 of the city's 43 precincts, defeating City Councilman William Bell by 5,412 votes to 3,658 and two other candidates by a margin of 4,000 votes.

He promptly told the Army Corps of Engineers to solve the sand erosion problems at Oceanside Harbor on which it has worked for seven years.

He led the City Council in putting a moratorium on all new businesses until loopholes are closed in the ordinance that regulates bars and massage parlors.

He told the city attorney to draft an ordinance curtailing the drinking of alcoholic beverages in public.

He named a crime abatement committee, put himself on the county-wide Comprehensive Planning Organization "to insure Oceanside gets its fair share of federal funds" and announced moves to bring in business not considered "honky tonk" and catering to servicemen's paychecks.

He told the council that no interference will be tolerated with the work of City Manager Dan Stone.

The council, with one exception, has refrained from any criticism of Graham's gusto and several members have praised him. But Councilman Lucy Chavez vowed that "if he's going to run this city as a military establishment, it's going to be over my dead body." She added in an interview that "we're not privates first class" on the council.

"I'm a doer," said Graham.

"I attack my job just like I would any other one. I get to work at 8 a.m. and leave at 6 p.m.—or whatever it takes."

The mayor's job pays only $331 monthly and technically is part-time.

Ex-Beatle attracts a mob

INGLEWOOD (AP) — A Beatle by any other name still draws a mob.

In fact, it took only 3½ hours Thursday to sell 36,000 seats for the forthcoming concerts by Wings, led by former Beatle Paul McCartney, making his first U.S. appearance since 1966.

Even though the concerts April 19 and 20 had not been formally announced, Wings fans began forming lines Tuesday at the Forum box office to buy tickets.

At one point, said police, a line of 3,000 to 3,500 persons stretched for nearly a mile.

Urn lost on way to Arlington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service has lost the cremated remains of a man sent through the mail for burial at Arlington National Cemetery, postal officials say.

Bertram E. Williams, a retired naval officer, died Jan. 10 at St. Petersburg, Fla. Following the terms of his will, Williams' family had his body cremated and asked that the ashes be shipped to Arlington National Cemetery near Washington for burial.

Murray Watts, stepson of the dead man, said the crematorium forwarded the ashes in an urn placed in a mailing package.

But Raymond J. Costanzo, superintendent of Arlington National Cemetery, said Thursday that the box, about six-by-eight inches, was damaged when it arrived at the cemetery and the urn was not in it.

"The family kept calling us and asking for the date of interment. We kept saying that we couldn't schedule it until we received the remains," Costanzo said.

Costanzo said the cemetery frequently receives urns through the mail containing cremated remains. "In almost 30 years this is the first one ever lost," he said.

Watts said, "We went to the post office and they started a search for it. We kept waiting and waiting but they never found it." St. Petersburg postmaster Harry W. Scott said, "We spent many, many hours trying to locate it and made many telephone calls." But to no avail.

Watts, a St. Petersburg real estate agent, said the family will receive $15 for insurance on the parcel, which was neither registered nor certified.

"This was an absolutely traumatic shock for my mother, who is 83. I don't think she will ever recover from it," said Watts.

Disclosure of the lost urn comes amid rising concern over damage to parcels sent through the mail.

A congressman who has studied the Postal Service's new billion-dollar system for handling parcels said Thursday that it constitutes "a management blunder of the first magnitude."

Chairman Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., of the House postal facilities subcommittee told postal officials that the system "will cost the American public millions of dollars while lowering the quality of mail service."

Postal officials disagreed, saying the agency will solve its problem of parcel damage caused by the new sorting machines.

"The magnitude of the damage problem is not large percentage-wise, and certainly it is a temporary problem which can be corrected, but we recognize that the results to date are unacceptable," said Senior Asst. Postmaster Gen. E.V. Dorsey.

In 1970, an earthquake in western Turkey killed more than 1,000 and left 90,000 homeless.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia adjourned for the day for the funeral of the late delegate from Rhode Island, Samuel Ward.

Club relents, finally opens door to gals

LOS ANGELES(AP)— After 40 years, the all-male Department of Water and Power Speakers Club finally will open its doors to the opposite sex.

In voting 105-50 to change club policy, members recently reversed a January decision to continue a ban on admitting women.

That 122-53 vote had brought furious protest from the Board of Water and Power Commissioners and the city Commission on the Status of Women.

At the time, Carl Tamaki, acting general manager of the DWP, warned the club it could no longer serve as the department's official speakers organization unless it opened its ranks to women.

Speakers Club vice president John Novobilski attributed the club's change of heart to "our people understandng the issues much better" and "change in the times."

Easter bunny prices hold

CHICAGO (AP) — Some good news for the Easter bunny: "There will be no price increase this year."

Jack Zachary, whose confections plant will produce one million chocolate Easter bunnies this year, said prices will be the same as last year.

"There will be no price increase this year because of level chocolate costs and the decline in sugar prices after the sharp increase late in 1974," said Zachary.

Pregnancy with pay: It's now in the courts

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A man who walks intc a bar, picks a fight and gets hurt generally receives sick pay for the time he is out of work. So does the man who attempts suicide but misses.

A woman who can't work due to pregnancy usually does not. She traditionally takes an unpaid leave of absence.

Is this sex discrimination? Is pregnancy a sickness, an accident? What about the woman who never intends to return to her job after her baby is born? Would paying her salary while she is on pregnancy leave constitute a form of severance pay?

And what's to be done with the woman who can't work after the second month of pregnancy because of medical complications? Is she entitled to sick pay? If so, what would this do to the cost of sick pay insurance for the employer and his employes?

Can women's exclusion be called unequal really since pregnancy is a condition unique to women?

These and similar questions are now before the U.S. Supreme Court as well as lower federal and state courts across the land. Some charge that exluding pregnancy from sick pay coverage violates state laws guaranteeing human rights and fair employment; some say there's a violation of the Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment (guaranteeing equal treatment), or of Title VII (dealing with sex discrimination) of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The two cases before the Supreme Court — General Electric versus Martha Gilbert and Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. versus Sandra Wetzel — were argued Jan. 19-20. Both are class action suits in which violations of Title VII are alleged.

Martha Gilbert, a factory worker in GE's Salem, Va., plant, became pregnant in 1970 and was required to take a mandatory, unpaid leave of absence.

She and her union, the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, filed a grievance, asking for sick pay for Mrs. Gilbert while she was out. She already had received company hospital insurance coverage. (GE pays 60 per cent of an employe's salary for up to 26 weeks when he or she is sick or has had an accident, but pregnancy is excluded.)

"They laughed at us at first," claims Bob Delano, vice president of IUE Local 161. Three grivances and two court decisions later, nobody is laughing.

Mrs. Gilbert lost the grievances but won the court decisions and GE brought the issue before the Supreme Court.

The enormity of the decision has prompted a remarkably large number of friend-of-the-court briefs to be filed. They stack up predictably, with labor on one side and big business on the other.

A lot of money is at stake. GE produced an expert witness who testified that if pregnancy benefits were included, it would cost American industry an additional $1.3 billion a year in wages. The figure compares with an annual national payroll in goverment and industry of $906.6 billion, according to the Department of Commerce.

Lawyers on the other side charge that the $1.3 billion is an inflated figure.

Sandra Wetzel's battle with Liberty Mutual is similar to that of Mrs. Gilbert's. She was forced off her job due to pregnancy and sued in 1972 for the salary she lost. She also won her fight in two lower courts.

About 40 per cent of American companies pay some form of wage maintenance during the period a woman is disabled by pregnancy, says Linda Dorian, until this month a lawyer with the federal Equal Employment Opportunities Commission. The companies include Ford, General Motors, Chrysler, Exxon, Shell, Gulf and U.S. Steel.

Gulf's John Hollan said his company put the policy into effect in 1972. Several years later, he said, "We are very much alone in this but we believe it's still a wave of the future."

Both sides say that if they lose they are prepared to go to Congress to seek legislation that will supersede the Supreme Court.

There are no all-inclusive figures to show just how widespread this issue has become.

Many courts and human rights commissions have adopted a wait and see attitude, withholding judgment until the Supreme Court comes up with an answer.

In those cases that have been decided, the women are winning the battle. A few courts, including several state supreme courts, have ruled against the women's contention that pregnancy should be treated like any other disability in terms of sick pay. But the majority have agreed with the women, who have won 20 cases before federal district courts, seven before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and 10 before state supreme courts.

In the companies' corner, however, is a 1974 Supreme Court decision, Geduldig versus Aiello. In that case, the high court decided by a 6-3 margin that California did not discriminate against women in excluding pregnancy from a state sick pay insurance plan. The court said the California plan was established "in accordance with insurance concepts." One of the dissenting justices, William Douglas, has since retired from the bench.

The California case was fought under the equal treatment guarantee of the 14th Amendment. The cases now before the court are being fought under Title VII.

One of the companies' chief arguments is the uniqueness of pregnancy. They claim that since it is neither sickness nor accident, it should be treated separately. They argue that since men cannot become pregnant, women are not being treated unequally.

On the other hand, a hysterectomy is unique to women and a prostrate operation is unique to men and they are covered by sick pay.

The insurance concept is another argument.

"You insure against uncertainties, not planned events," says Thomas Hilbert, GE's lawyer. "That's been an insurance concept since Adam and Eve had their first baby. A man who insures himself against fire doesn't go out and burn his house down. And if he does, that's fraud."

One of the aspects that makes employers nervous is the amount of time a woman may be out. Although averages can be established, each case is unpredictable. There's always the chance of severe complications, disabling a woman for months.

Another worry on the employer's mind is that many women never intend to come back to work after the baby is born. GE claims that industry-wide, 50 per cent of the women who take maternity leaves never return to work. In GE plants, 40 per cent do not come back within six weeks of their babies' births, the company says.

Linda Dorian does not believe these figures give an accurate picture.

"GE forced these women off the job at six months," she says. "Those who needed money probably found other jobs. To presume 40 per cent dropped out of the labor force is erroneous. And their figures do not reflect how many came back after six weeks."

One of the early arguments was that pregnancy is a voluntary condition. But that argument is now being played down. The courts have been fairly unresponsive and the women had too many examples of voluntary conditions that were covered.

GE, for example, provides sick pay for cosmetic surgery. However, it doesn't pay the medical expenses and since cosmetic surgery is expensive, only a minute number of people ever ask for sick pay for this surgery.

"That's like comparing a peanut and an elephant," says Hilbert.

Most airlines — which have a somewhat unique problem — claim they must lay off stewardesses early in their pregnancy because of the safety factor involved.

Hilbert said that GE had no policy of requiring women to leave at the end of the sixth month, but that individual plants put in that requirement. The plants now have dropped that policy.

"Even if we lose (before the Supreme Court), we have won half the battle," says Delano. Women now work at GE as long as their doctors say it is all right.

A status report

The fighting of pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smog still pollutes some major American cities. Oil spills occasionally foul beaches. Coal operators continue to destroy the landscape by strip-mining for coal in some states. And chemical pollutants threaten health.

But six years after Richard M. Nixon signed the National Environmental Health Act and declared the '70s the decade for cleaning up the environment, there are many claims that progress has been made toward eliminating pollution.

In the process, pollution fighting has become a major American enterprise. The Environmental Protection Agency, for example, is the government's largest regulatory agency, with 9,000 employes, although it is only five years old. Most states and large cities run agencies similar to the EPA.

The production of pollution control equipment is a multibillion-dollar industry. The federal government estimates that $15.7-billion was spent last year — $5.7-billion by federal, state and local governments and $10 billion by industry. The outlay produced one million jobs, according to federal statistics.

Pollution control is one of the few industries not hurt by the recession, says Russell W. Peterson, chairman of the White House Council on Environmental Quality.

More than 50 groups dedicated to improving the environment have been organized since 1970, the Library of Congress reports, and dozens of lawsuits have been filed in behalf of the environment. Most demand compliance with a clause in the 1970 National Environmental Health Act that requires "environmental impact statements" for all federal activities significantly affecting the environment.

The National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation organization, annually assesses progress in seven major environmental areas: timber, water, minerals, air, wildlife, soil and open space.

Its recently issued report for 1975 concluded that air pollution decreased, but in the six other areas there was loss of quality, in part because of failures to comply with new federal regulations, or the failure of the federal government to enact necessary legislation.

A federal land use bill, for example, didn't get through Congress last year and President Ford vetoed a bill to regulate strip mining. Although the National Wildlife Federation noted

Are the nuclear pacemakers safe?

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The use of plutonium to keep the hearts of 500 Americans beating regularly is also generating controversy over the safety of the nuclear-powered pacemakers these people use.

The chief battleground is Minneapolis, headquarters of the world's principal manufacturer of nuclear pacemakers. That firm, Medtronic Inc., claims the devices are radioactively safe and a boon to people requiring a pacemaker with a power supply that lasts for years.

Nearby, at the University of Minnesota, Dr. Dean Abrahamson, a physicist and physician, is one of the most outspoken critics of nuclear pacemakers. He and others have asked the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to ban them. Dr. Abrahamson, who describes himself as an activist on environmental issues, argues that radiation might cause cancer in a person with a nuclear pacemaker, or the radioactive plutonium fuel might be released accidentally.

The NRC staff in Washington is preparing an enviromental impact statement on nuclear-powered pacemakers, weighing the claims of manufacturers and the experience of doctors against the concerns of Abrahamson and various enviromentalists.

Heat generated as part of the fuel's radioisotopic decay is converted into electricity — the electrical impulses delivered to heart muscles to control heart rhythm, prolonging the lives of people with damaged hearts.

More than 250,000 people throughout the world have had battery-powered pacemakers implanted since their introduction in 1960. The drawback with battery models is that when the batteries run down after six years or so, part of the device must be replaced surgically.

The nuclear models, designed to last at least 10 years, have been in use only since 1970.

James R. Mason, NRC medical specialist who headed a recent nuclear pacemaker study, says the NRC's final decision on the safety of nuclear pacemakers should be made this year. It could be challenged in the courts.

So far, about 1,500 nuclear pacemakers have been implanted — 500 of them in the United States. Medtronic has manufactured about 80 per cent of the units.

Dr. Chardack says he has heard of no power failures in the nuclear pacemakers. He said a report in 1975 on 1,000 implants showed two electronic malfunctions but no losses of power source.

Chardack said some new batteries are capable of driving pacemakers for 10 years. Still, he said, the nuclear device has a potential life span exceeding any battery pacemaker.

Bob Griffin, nuclear programs manager of Medtronic, says the lifespan of the nuclear unit allows a doctor to eliminate multiple pacemaker surgery for young patients with a long life expectancy.

But he noted that only a small percentage of pacemaker users can take full advantage of nuclear pacemakers because most heart patients are older and their life expectancies don't warrant the additional expense of a nuclear pacemaker. It costs about $5,000. The battery-powered units cost $1,200.

Dr. Abrahamson, now director of the University of Minnesota's School of Public Affairs, contends there has been insufficient study of the possibility of radioactive exposure. He says there is a possibility of cancer when tissues are exposed to radiation.

Griffin counters that a patient with a nuclear pacemaker receives less radiation than an average jet crew receives at high altitudes from cosmic rays.

Abrahamson says there is no evidence to support the assumption of a 10-year operational life for nuclear pacemakers. He claims that alternatives are available with that life span and without environmental hazards.

Griffin responds that the 10-year estimate is "conservative," and studies indicate that nuclear pacemakers may last "much longer."

Abrahamson fears plutonium could be released in cases of accidental burning deaths or cremation.

The Rock Olympics

They all must race in the nude

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — All the contestants were nude and the winner fell four feet down an incline to win a gold painted replica of "himself."

The "playing field" was the lobby of a savings and loan association.

From the comments of their "masters," it was hard to tell that the entrants in the "olympics" were pet rocks.

"Oh heavens, yes, I'm proud of Rolly," said Rollene Fletcher of Lynwood. Her 5¾-ounce red painted entry placed second in the heavyweight category. "I'm not real sure" what Rolly's winning time was, said Mrs. Fletcher, 40, "but he won real good."

It was Rolly who almost faced disqualification over the nude dress code. One of the three judges — who included local disc jockey Charlie Tuna, 31, and two bank officials — made Mrs. Fletcher take a piece of felt off Rolly's bottom.

"He was used as a paperweight before," Mrs. Fletcher admitted.

Two pet rocks were in fact disqualified when officials decided they weren't really rocks. One turned out to be a cement slab, the other "a substance of undetermined origin," a spokesman said.

"I was driving down the freeway on my way to work and thinking about Citizens' Savings, and I thought, hey — it just popped out."

Popping from the mind of Jill Jeffers, the savings and loan association's public relations coordinator, was the publicity gimmick which drew 50 entrants from four Southern California counties

Henderson, owned by Sean Murphy, 23, of Anaheim, slid down the course in one second flat to bag first place in the heavyweight class. He weighed 4½ ounces.

Second place winners like Mrs. Fletcher got rock record albums by the Rolling Stones group, and third place entrants received Rocky Road-flavored ice cream cones.

Maximium weight for contestants was eight ounces.

If there is a secret to success, it might be Henderson's conditioning.

"Henderson went through thorough training. He knows how to sit, stay, heel, play dead, all kinds of things," said Valeria Anderson, a friend of rock-owner Murphy.

But apparently there is a high price to pay for "families" of the rocks.

"Probably Sean's mother feels a lack of attention because he spends so much time with his rock," said Miss Anderson. "Sean doesn't go anywhere without his rock."

SPRING MADNESS — The silly season is back, and babies and adults watch a pet rock race in Long Beach. The track was in the lobby of a savings and loan association. Fifty contestants — each required to be a "nude" rock — were in the competition.

progress in reducing air pollution, even the EPA said that few utilities and industries met the June 1 deadline last year for compliance with federal standards on emissions of smoke, dust, sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, smog and nitrogen dioxide over urban areas.

Nevertheless, the National Wildlife Federation concluded: "Despite this generally somber picture, there are some encouraging signs. Most significantly, perhaps, the polls still show undiminished public support for environmental goals."

Others point to these accomplishments:

—After a concerted federal, state and local effort, fish life is again thriving in Lake Erie, considered a "dying lake" a decade ago. And Lake County beaches near Chicago, closed by pollution in 1969, were reopened last summer.

—For the first time in 100 years, Atlantic salmon have returned to the Connecticut River.

—The waters of Pensacola's Escambia Bay in northwest Florida — the site of numerous fish kills in the early 1970s because of industrial pollution — are clearing. Shrimp and oysters are gradually coming back and the natural ecology is being restored.

—Hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide levels in the exhausts of 1976-model automobiles are 85 per cent less than in vehicles made before 1968, the EPA says.

—More than three-fourths of the 20,000 "major air pollution sources" in the nation are complying with pollution abatement plans, the EPA says, although many are behind schedule and there are some notable lems.

Despite the problems, Russell Train, the EPA's administrator, says: "We have definitely turned the corner on all the major pollution problems that faced us in 1970. But I'm not suggesting that we don't have a lot of problems ahead."

In an interview, Train said the environmental movement that started in the 1960s because of "justifiable outrage on the part of the public," has now largely been institutionalized.

"There's a lot less emotional excitement about the environment today, but perhaps an even deeper acceptance of the issue by the public. The environment has just taken its place among the nation's priorities and values today," Train said.

He has been running the EPA since 1973, when he took over from William D. Ruckelshaus, the agency's first administrator.

Charged with enforcing regulations on everything from air and water pollution to pesticides and noise, the EPA has been controversial from its inception. It has been buffeted with criticism from both environmentalists who say it knuckles under too often to industry pressure and from industry, which has accused the agency of over-zealousness.

Within the administration, Train has differed with President Ford. Twice last year he urged the President to sign bills imposing enviromental controls on strip mining; Ford vetoed them.

"In all fairness," Train said, "I don't think the President has evidenced a strong environmental record on some of the issues that he's been confronted with, such as strip mining."

The energy crisis and the 1973 Arab oil boycott "obviously complicated" the job of enforcing environmental laws and regulations, Train added. "But I really don't think we need to rip off the environment or public health to achieve our national energy goals. In any long-range sense, we've got to do both jobs together."

Train said that despite his differences with Ford on some matters, he feels the EPA has "remained a strong force within the administration" and that public support for environmental programs "continues at a high level."

The Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J., last summer polled 1,222 persons, a cross-section of the American public, on their attitudes toward enviromental issues. The poll showed that despite the recession, high unemployment and rising fuel costs, those interviewed opposed cutting back enviromental control programs.

He noted that $120-billion a year is spent in America on health care and "70 to 90 per cent of these adverse health effects are related to pollution and other enviromental factors."

They're waiting for the end of the world

GRANNIS, Ark. (AP) — At about 8:30 p.m. last Sept 29, a dozen members of the Nance clan gathered for a family prayer meeting.

The night was calm and cool. The day's work had been hard. They did not, as they recall, approach the meeting with any unusual fervor.

John K. Nance, 39, says, "I didn't even want to meet."

Dyann Nance, 29, says, "Look, everybody was in a rush, we had been working, we were tired. We were planning on having a real quickie."

But at that meeting, they received from the mouth of their aunt, Viola Walker, a message that changed their lives. Like others they claim to have received, they thought this message was from God.

The message said the worldending Second Coming of Jesus Christ was at hand and they should remain in the house.

There in the plain, small, three-bedroom, one-bath, redbrick home of Gene and his wife, Dyann, they have remained. The meeting Gene thought might last an hour has lasted more than four months.

They have been cramped and crowded months. The house is shared by 28 people. The youngest is 6-month-old Jacob. The eldest is Viola, who turned 67 last Jan. 6, seven weeks after she spoke the message.

Anticipating the end of all things, obeying the message to stay, they drastically altered their lives:

—They quit going to work. The direct command of God to stay in the house overrode the Biblical injunction to be industrious. Now they are jobless.

—They quit paying bills. Worldly possessions are of no account in a world about to be consumed by fire. They have lost cars, trucks, and houses they were buying. They are behind in payments on Gene's house.

—They stopped sending their children to school. Of what value is an empirical education with the heavenly kingdom at hand? A county judge put six school-age children back into class, as required by law.

—One member lost custody of her 14-year-old daughter to an ex-husband for refusing to promise to put the child back into school. Who can promise something contingent on a future that will never be?

But not all of the burdens have been borne by those maintaining the vigil in the little house.

Others hereabout were troubled by fear, anxiety and uncertainty. It is an awesome prospect — this imminent confrontation with final and ultimate judgment at the hands of God in his wrath.

The postmaster, Bob Minor, a Mormon, said the claimed revelation shocked and intimidated some people.

The Rev. Leonard H. Brothers, 30, the town barber and the Baptist minister some call "Brother Brothers," has been called on to console tearful, confused people beseeching him for reassurance.

The town as a whole received a jolt that undusted many Bibles. Even the irreligious in Grannis have an uncommonly good acquaintance these days with Biblical statements about the end of all things. Bob Minor said it all adds up to a "beautiful" result.

"It has made people get out their Bibles and get back to God," he said.

Grannis, population 170, is a wide spot in U.S. 71 in the steep hills of the Ouachita National Forest near the southwestern border of Arkansas.

THE NANCE CLAN — Family prayer brings together some of the Nance clan in the house in Grannis, Ark., where the 28-member group awaits the world-ending second coming of Christ. It was at a prayer meeting last September that from the mouth of Viola, second from right, they received the message and the order to stay in the house — a message they believe was from God, and which they have obeyed.

and tawny in winter, have been carved from deep, silent forests blanketing the slopes. At dawn, sunlight on icy grasses makes a frosty field twinkle like a bed of diamonds.

The big industries are logging and poultry. Heavily laden timber trucks thunder down the forest-framed blacktop. Feathers fly like dirty snow from trailers stacked with chicken cages.

Lane Poultry Co., where chickens are slaughtered for market, provided the jobs for most of the men of the vigil. They were in truck repair, parts, and welding.

Their fellow workers at Lane offer mixed views about what kind of people the vigil participants were, everything from "great" to "weird."

Dwight Billing, 20: "Daniel Fenwick was a pest. He'd go around saying we'd go to hell for this and that — cussing, drinking, just about anything."

Stan George, 50: "Dang smart people, no dumbbunnies."

They remember that Daniel tore down a centerfold nude that had been put on display by workers in the metal, barn-like shop at Lane. They put it up again and threatened him. It's still there.

One day, other workers saw three Nances who were welders gazing through their welding masks at the sun and asking themselves: "How could anyone not believe there was a God?"

Mose Geislar, 50, a bespectacled and wizened farmer, sipped coffee in Lou's Cafe, tugged a green baseball cap more snugly onto his head, and said:

"I had a brother-in-law. He did something like that, years ago. But he had a tiller and I offered to buy it if the price was right. He said okay — he wouldn't need a tiller with the world coming to an end. He's dead now. I wore that tiller out."

The Nances say the message of Sept. 29 was not the first they have received. As 42-yearold Janet Fenwick put it, the message "has always been true and sure."

The family is especially pleased with John's gift of prophetic utterance. He fidgets at talk about it.

"I'm not sure we ought to be talking about ourselves," John says. "The real message of Jesus' coming is getting lost in all this."

The Nance clan is good-humored, they laugh a lot. The vigil interrupted John's series of dental appointments, leaving him without front teeth on one side of his grin. When he laughs, he raises his hand selfconsciously to cover the gap, and it looks as though he thinks a laugh is something that might fall out of his mouth and into his hand. That brings another wave of laughs.

As hunger comes on, they bake biscuits, leavened, and serve them hot with melting butter and glasses of tea. Feeding the 20-plus daily is a joint effort.

Over coffee and cigarettes, they talk about their religion as familiarly as others discuss cars or detergents. A well-thumbed King James Version of the Bible is handy and often open for reference.

The usual procedure in their family prayer meetings is to hold hands, form a circle in the kitchen around the worn table and the faded braid rug. Most eyes are closed in prayer.

Some sway, rocking gently. "Amazing Grace" wafts up on strong but gentle voices.

Softly, their prayers begin. Speaking simultaneously and swiftly, the words stream into a pool of low noise bubbling within the circle. "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus. Love you Jesus, holy Jesus, praise your name. Oh, Jesus, Sweet Jesus. Oh, Jesus, Jesus, Jesus."

Since the vigil began, there have been a few colds and sniffles in the group, but no serious illness.

They sleep on beds, couches, mats they spread on the floor. They have forsaken sexual activity. "The Lord is taking care of us," Gene said.

Clothes have been hung from wires strung from the walls of two rooms. There was no room for them in the closets.

Not everyone in the Nance family is participating in the vigil. One of Viola's sons isn't. Her husband isn't, and he visits periodically to encourage her to come home with him, vigil members said.

There are no icons, no long robes, no Jesus sandals, no crucifixes, no pictures of Jesus.

John leaves the house occasionally. He got permission by a "message" to tend to the water pump when it froze. In the past, the frequency of Nance family prayer meetings was determined by the will of the group. If somebody thought they ought to have one, they did — as few as two a week, as many as seven.

The "messages" come during prayer. But how do they come?

Is there a voice?

John: "No, it's just one of us saying the words the Spirit moves us to say."

Does your mind know what the words will be before you speak?

John: "Well, maybe sometimes just a brief glimpse. But a lot of times, no — I hear it when everybody else hears it."

How do you know it's a message from God and not something else?

John: "Everybody feels it in his heart."

What do you feel when you utter a prophetic statement?

John: "Well, it's not like it takes control of you and you go crazy. You're not free to run and jump through the house. We've heard about the gifts being used elsewhere, where people flop around and foam at the mouth and everything. A lot has been misused and abused. We don't do that."

How come you have the gifts — what's special about you?

John: "Look at the business world: Some people prosper there more than others do, and some prosper more in the spiritual world."

They had been told for some time that He would be coming soon. But then something made "soon" imminent.

Viola: "I forget just what the word was, but it was 'soon to come' or 'soon to appear,' or some such statement indicating very soon. That was clear."

For some there was fear, awesome fear. For a long time, the "message" was not to talk about it to outsiders, but it is alright to talk about it now. "He said so," said Gene.

They didn't understand why the change at first. "But now we understand," John says, "that this has been the Lord's way of advertising his coming. Our staying here and keeping to ourselves created the curiosity and concern ... If we had gone to the store and done the usual things, nobody would have noticed."

Viola: We've spoken to Him about it every day. We are more sure today than we were the first week."

They have not been given a specific date, only that it would be soon. They expect it at any moment. And if the Lord told them that He had accomplished what he wanted and sent them back to their daily lives as before, they are not sure they could do it.

Most people in Grannis believe the Nances are sincere. "Wrong, but sincere," one said.

They still get their mail, and they've counted hundreds of letters from all over the world since the vigil began. One man wanted to come and join them, and they told him not to. One letter began, "You poor devilpossessed fools." Another came from a prison inmate who claimed to be Jesus.

"There are a lot of nuts out there," Gene says.

John Tyler

John Tyler, the 10th president, was the first to have been born a citizen of the United States. Born March 29, 1790, in Charles City County, Va., Tyler was successively a member of the Virginia House of Delegates (1811), Congress (1816-21), the Virginia Legislature (1823-25), governor of Virginia (1825-26) and U.S. senator (1827-36). In 1840 he was elected U.S. vice president and succeeded to the presidency on the death of William Henry Harrison in 1841.

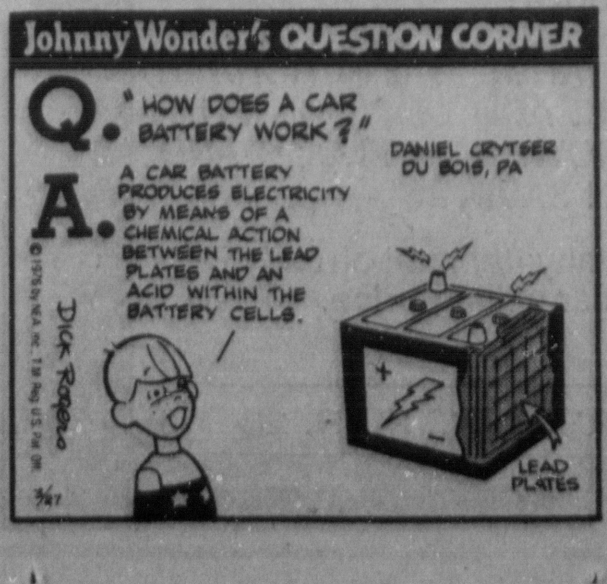
JOHNNY WONDER



Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER
Q. "HOW DOES A CAR BATTERY WORK?"
DANIEL CRYTSER DU BOIS, PA
A. A CAR BATTERY PRODUCES ELECTRICITY BY MEANS OF A CHEMICAL ACTION BETWEEN THE LEAD PLATES AND AN ACID WITHIN THE BATTERY CELLS.
LEAD PLATES
DICK ROBERO
3/27

The electric battery in a car makes use of the fact that chemical action between two different metals can cause a flow of electrons. When electrons move, electricity is produced.

A car battery is a rubber box with smaller acid-filled boxes, or cells, inside it. Each cell in the battery is made of two kinds of lead plates.

The chemical action between the acid and the lead plates causes certain chemical changes to take place which produce electrons and cause them to move from one plate to the other, producing electricity.

Some car batteries have three electric cells. And some have six cells.

The cells are connected together to provide a more powerful electric current.

The electricity is "stored" in the battery until the car's ignition is turned on. Then the electricity streams out of the battery along a wire "path" to make the starter start, the spark plugs spark, and goes to work in other places in the car.

A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1135 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Here come the youngsters

The age of chess has come. Hordes of youth are taking to the game with a new seriousness and confidence.

In the Soviet Union last year, 2½ million participated in the national junior championships. Trainers and facilities are not yet available to accomodate the flux of whizzes.

In England, 20-year-old Anthony Miles has just become that country's first grandmaster. There are many other fine young players who will now get the idea that they can do it, too.

And in the U.S. three players, Norman Weinstein (23), James Tarjan (23), and Larry Christiansen (19) have already achieved the first of the two necessary grandmaster norms. Tarjan in fact is, at this writing, in first place in the international tournament at Skopje, Yugoslavia, ahead of the World Champion Anatoly Karpov.

Watch out, Bobby. If you wait too long to return, you may be known as Rip Van Fischer!

New David Beats Old Goliath

The latest sensation in American chess is Joel Benjamin, just turned 12 years old and already an Expert (rating 2022). That level was not reached by the likes of Browne, Weinstein, Tarjan and Rogoff until age 14 or 15!

By Dorothy Hammond

QUESTION: I would appreciate knowing the monetary value of the decorative old milk pitcher shown in the enclosure. Its height is seven inches, it is unmarked, and its decoration is cherubs in relief, over a cobalt blue and white background. This pitcher was brought to America from Wales in 1890, and originally belonged to a set of three pitchers in graduated sizes. Mrs. A.L.

ANSWER: If perfect, your milk pitcher is worth about $45, on today's market.

QUESTION: I am writing for information on a set of six matching luncheon plates known only to us as Venetian ware. These were a gift to us from my husband's family a number of years ago. They came from Italy. Since neither relative is living, we have been unable to learn more about these pieces. Can you help us?

Each plate is in pristine condition, with no exterior decoration. However, sandwiched between the layers of crystal-clear glass are many, many, tiny white and pink threads or lines joined together, thus producing a criss-cross spiral-like pattern. They are exquisite! Your comments will be appreciated. Mrs. M.F.

ANSWER: You have described "Latticino" glass, developed centuries ago by the Venetians. And the milk-white and pink threads are delicate fibers of glass.

Doc Peirsol

It happened in Pomona

The way the historians tell it, Pomona in the early 1890s was well on her way toward becoming the heart of Southern California's orange empire. But was that the true picture so far as Pomona's agricultural status was concerned? At that time, had we or had we not fully decided in what direction our future agrarian greatness lay? With all due respect to our revered and dedicated historians, there does seem to be some evidence that a bit of reasonable doubt concerning the absolute authenticity of their writings would be in order.

I make this startling accusation on the basis of three non-related news items which appeared in a March, 1893, issue of The Pomona Weekly Times. After reading them my faith in historians was, let us say, at least slightly bent. For apparently, contrary to the historical accounts, Pomona's agriculturalists were having a bit of difficulty in 1893 making up their minds about what was really the best thing to do in order to assure themselves of a rewarding financial future.

First there was the item which stated: —"Alfred Wright has taken out all his fig trees and planted olives in their place."

But then, a little farther down in the "Little Locals" column, I read: —"J. E. Packard is offering to trade olive trees for first class lemon trees or Washington navel orange trees."

And finally, to conclusively prove my contention that decisions, decisions, decisions were the frustrating order of the day with Pomona's 1893 agriculturalists, I noted that F. G. Haley was advertising: "— have orange and lemon trees that must be removed from where they are. No reasonable offer will be refused."

There's more than merely gambling to glitter of Las Vegas

What is there to do in Las Vegas, the glittering Sin City of the Nevada desert, when someone pulls the plugs on the gambling casinos, show palaces, hotels, restaurants and bars?

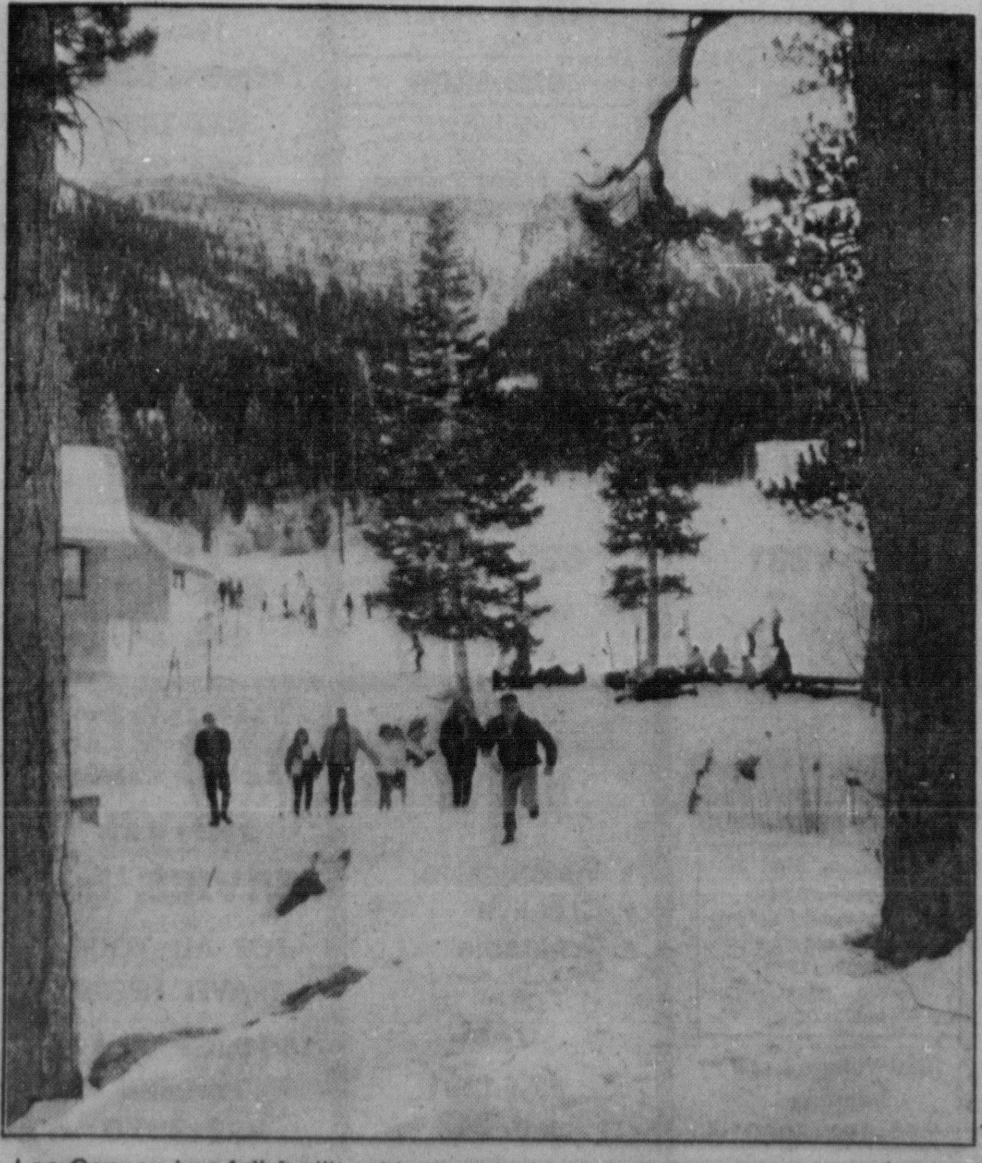
The current strike of four major unions against 14 Las Vegas hotels and one casino has effectively shut down many of the city's major pleasure domes and thrown into dramatic relief a fact that many people are unaware of — that the fabled city, internationally known for legal gambling and the glamor of show business, is also the heart of a vast playground of sports and pastimes unrelated to the whir of the roulette wheel or the blare of dance bands.

Even with the casinos and hotels closed, the theaters dark, the lounges deserted, Las Vegas offers a paradise of recreational opportunities for millions of tourists.

Story by Joseph H. Firman
PB staff writer

Musical spectaculars are a staple of Las Vegas night life.

Within the city itself are a thousand public and private swimming pools, hundreds of tennis courts, most of them lighted, 11 full-length golf courses and three par-3 courses. Within an hour's drive the Las Vegas visitor can go snow skiing in Lee Canyon or water skiing at Lake Mead.



Lee Canyon is a full-facility ski resort with chair lift, T-bars and rope tows.

Mt. Charleston, a 12,000-foot-high peak 30 minutes' drive from the desert valley of Las Vegas, offers a Tyrolean setting of tall pines interlaced with hiking trails, mountain streams and campsites. Throughout the Las Vegas area from Lake Mead to Valley of Fire to Red Rock State Park are well-equipped camp sites and rest areas for hikers, horseback riders, picnickers and campers.

A 40-minute drive from Las Vegas takes tourists to the Lake Mead National Recreation Area, formed when the Colorado River was harnessed by Boulder Dam in 1936. Lake Mead boasts 2,000 beach campsites along its 550-mile shoreline and five full-service marinas. All varieties of water sports are enjoyed — swimming, sail and power boating, water skiing and row boating.

Fishing season at Lake Mead is year-around and the haul includes largemouth bass, silver salmon, trout, crappie, bluegill and others. Striped bass introduced into the lake a few years ago are now being caught up to 25 pounds. The federal government carries on a vigorous program of stocking the lake.

Within an hour's drive of Las Vegas are numerous historical sites and ruins of the frontier days. There are old mines and ghost towns, abandoned railroads, quarries, cabins, and ruined mills. Some of the old towns have been restored and present accurate and active replicas of the Old West, complete with theaters, saloons, shops and homes.

Other places of interest in the Las Vegas area are an old Mormon fort, the Lost City Museum, the Desert Research Institute Museum and the Red Rock Recreation Area where Indian petroglyphs and pictographs are preserved.

In addition to the educational and entertaining survey of the Early American West, visitors are lured by a variety of annual events having nothing to do with slot machines or Broadway shows — the Sahara Invitational Golf Tournament, the fall trap shoot at the Del Webb Gun Club, bowling and tennis tournaments and many others.

Whether the strike against the hotels and casino is lifted soon or late, the visitor to Las Vegas will never want for activities appealing to all tastes.

ON THE COVER

There's more to Las Vegas than roulette wheels and Broadway shows. A few of the activities that entertain 8.5 million visitors a year, (clockwise from upper left): Walking tours through the Valley of Fire, swimming at resort hotels, horseback riding in Red Rock Canyon, enjoying water sports at Lake Mead and tennis at all the major hotels.

The roulette wheel is a popular fixture in "the entertainment capital of the world."

An old firm... ...adds a new line

AIR KOOL
AWNING CO. OF L.A. CO. INC.

Air Kool personnel who bring beauty, comfort to homes in valley

Air Kool, a leading manufacturer of aluminum patio covers and enclosures for the home, is adding a new line of insulation to its stock.

Known as Kool Coat, a product of Kenitex, the coating will outlast all other finishes on the market, according to Hale Benton, president of the Covina company.

Benton announced the appointment of Dale Hefner as vice president of the Kool Coat division. Hefner will oversee marketing and installation of the new line.

Kool Coat, because of its thickness, durability and color fastness, is guaranteed to last at least 15 years, Hefner said. The finish is available in 16 colors.

Using the slogan, "Why Move, Improve," Benton also announced the start of a three-week sale on Granada patio enclosures, the models which feature the flat pan roof and two-inch insulation walls, as well as on patio covers and window awnings. The sale ends April 15.

Benton said much of the savings is possible through a process developed by Dan Anderson, a district manager, which cuts down installation costs. Anderson was named Air Kool's most imaginative employe last year.

Design and quality of Air Kool are protected by the reputation of Jack Gordon, an Air Kool designer who has won trophies for creating new patios for the seventh straight year.

The president of the Covina firm said the company's competitive cost policy is the result of a "very efficient installation crew." He said that because Air Kool is financially sound, it can obtain better loan rates from banks than other firms.

Other key employes of the company include Michael Valentich, general manager; Jim Covington head of the wholesale division, and Dallas McCurry, wholesale manager.

The company is located at 581 E. San Bernardino Road in Covina. From that location it serves a large portion of Los Angeles County, as well as San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties.

WHY MOVE...?

Learn to read and you will fly away

About 40 students at Garey High School who, with the help of teachers Darrell L. Ruppel, are learning to read English, are working to raise money to finance a May trip to Sacramento.

A large number of the students in the group are Vietnamese.

"The challenge of teaching the Asian student has provided all of us with new and exciting problems as well as some opportunity for new and creative and innovating programing," said Ruppel.

"It is our feeling at Garey that we must not only develop skills in basic skill areas, such as reading, writing and spelling, but develop them in a practical and worthwhile content area."

To this end, Ruppel and other Garey staff members selected California history as a springboard.

The basic text is built around fourth-grade curriculum which, Ruppel said, indicated the reading level of the Asian student and many of the Mexican, black and white students.

"These students are all having problems with the English language," said Ruppel. "Upon completion of this course, we will all travel to Sacramento."

There is one catch. The students must finance their own trip. To date they have earned $350. They need $1,300 Ruppel said.

Anyone in the community who would like to assist this class with its project may contact Ruppel at Garey, 623-5251, Ext. 334. He and the students will hold a Community Work Day on April 9 as a fund raiser.

Ruppel said PSA has agreed to fly the students to Sacramento and back for half-fare.

The class has written to Sen. Ruben S. Ayala, D-32nd Dist., Assemblyman Bill McVittie, D-65th Dist., State Schools Supt. Wilson Riles, and Gov. Jerry Brown. All but Brown have responded.

He holds a medallion from the San Gabriel Valley Industry Education Council. He plays varsity soccer and is on the varsity track team. He is a member of Sodality and is in the band.

Jill E. Evans of 325 Emerson St., Upland, will receive a $1,000 award from the International Business Machines Corp. She is a student at Upland High School.

Teen Scope

Susan Oda of Garey is finalist

By LEE DAVENPORT
Garey Correspondent

She is one of 10 finalists chosen in the Southern Region of the California Scholarship Federation, which is one of five in the state.

Susan will be attending a conference with the other finalists and the judging committee at the University of California at San Diego on March 27. At the conference, two winners, a boy and a girl, will be named from each of the five regions. The winners will receive a $500 award, and the other finalists will receive a $200 award. Susan will have the opportunity to attend several conference sessions while at the University. Anthropologist Margaret Mead will be one of the speakers.

In being chosen a finalist, Susan has been given recognition and honor for outstanding scholarship, community service, and leadership. Cotestants were judged on the basis of three recommendation letters, a personal letter, an activity form and transcripts.

ON THE BEACH — Mike (Mannix) Connors and Samantha Eggar share a tender moment on Waikiki Beach before being plunged into a turmoil of murder and political intrigue in Paramount Television's "The Killer Who Wouldn't Die." The two-hour movie will premiere on ABC-TV April 4. All the scenes are of Hawaii.

Vocal group set at UCLA

The Western Wind, vocal chamber music ensemble, will make its West Coast debut with a concert in UCLA's Schoenberg Hall at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

The six artists are Janet Steele and Janet Sullivan, sopranos; William Zukof, countertenor; Lawrence Bennett and William Lyon Lee, tenors, and Elliot Levine, baritone.

From its repertoire, which ranges from music of the Middle Ages to the latest voices-with-electronic-sounds of the 20th century, the sextet will offer a varied program of "Music in the New World." Included are folk songs of North America, songs from 16th and 17th centuries Latin America, Christian Religious songs, Hebrew madrigals and barbershop quartets.

Last summer, the Western Wind spent three weeks as artists-in-residence at Dartmouth College and appeared at New York City University and the Summer Music Associates Festival in New London, N.H.

During the 1974-75 season, the group sang at the Ives Centennial in Connecticut, for the Renaissance and Baroque Society of Pittsburgh and at Columbia University and Bryn Mawr College.

The sextet also has sung for the Renaissance Society of America, the New Jersey Shakespeare Festival, the Cloisters of the Metropolitan Museum, New Hampshire's St. Gauden's Memorial, and other colleges, universities and concert halls.

Seats for the Schoenberg Hall appearance may be obtained at the UCLA Central Ticket Office, 650 Westwood Plaza, and all Mutual and Liberty agencies.

'Airport' to fly again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It had to happen. Having made millions with "Airport" and "Airport 1975," Universal Pictures has announced the coming of "Airport 1977."

This time the airjet drama will concern the fabled Bermuda Triangle into which a 747 will disappear en route from Washington, D.C., to Florida. As with the first sequel, William Frye will produce, with Jennings Lang as executive producer. Making his debut as a theatrical feature director will be Jerry Jameson, who directed "The Deadly Tower" on television.

The script was written by David Spector, 31, and Michael Scheff, 34, onetime students at San Francisco State College.
